Were Burglars At Work in City?

Night Watchman Found Door of Fur Store Wide Open

While on his rounds as nightwatchman of the city, last evening, Mr. Mark Spencley, who a short time ago entered upon these duties found a door of a George street store open. He was trying the back doors of a number of the stores on George-st. about three o'clock this morning when he was surprised to find the rear door of Clarke & Co.'s fur store standing wide open. At 12 o'clock Mr. Spencley stated that it was securely locked as he tried it at that time, but three hours later it was open. The nightwatchman asked P.C. Adams to come with him and the two entered the store. No signs were noticed nor did anything appear to be missing. The proprietor of the store, as yet has not missed anything, but being exceptionally busy to-day had not time to make a full investigation.

Pay Envelope Drops Into Creek

And Young Man Had to Take Off Clothes and Go In After It

Yesterday was pay day at the foundry of the Wm. Hamilton Mfg. Co., Pay day is naturally a day of rejoicing, and one employee of the company was so jubilant that he proceeded to juggle with the welcome envelope to give vent to his effervescent joy. His dexterity in this respect, however, will never enable him to secure a position as a juggling top liner in vaudeville, for he let his prize package drop into the creek that runs through the premises and was forced to take off his clothes and dive after it. After some fishing he secured it, and in the future will probably remove the contents of his envelope as soon as he receives it, and secrete them in the innermost recesses of his "dip."

Mr. H. A. Thurston, of 238 Vermont St. E., Indianapolis, Restored by Ferrozone.

"A year ago I took the grippe. I was as weak as a child. I was no longer able to eat. My blood was thin. My cheeks were white and hollow. Doctors gave me all kinds of medicine, but none of them brought me strength. My friends said I was wasting away with some slow disease, and I bade them good-bye. Then I heard of the wonderful Ferrozone. After three days it gave me an appetite. I gained strength and became cheerful. Under Ferrozone I improved steadily. I am well to-day. I weigh fifteen pounds heavier than ever before, and feel like a new man.

The Quebec Bridge Inquest; Were the Defects Known?

Sensational Evidence of Mr. Kinlock at Bridge Enquiry.

Men's Fears Were Laughed at—Worked With Nerves on Edge—No Chord Was Straight—Trouble Was Anticipated by Officials—Ribs Were All Bent—Was Reported Weeks Before the Disaster.

Quebec, Sept. 21.—Very important indeed and quite sensational was the evidence given by Mr. Kinloch yesterday as to the defects in the Quebec bridge, just prior to the collapse, showing that trouble was anticipated by some of the practical officials, though those who expressed them, and some who laughed at their fears, are now among the dead of the disaster.

He said that he could not swear that any chord in the bridge was absolutely straight. He knew of no carelessness, however, and of none of the defects mentioned by the witnesses Ouimet and Lafrance. He knew of the defects in the chords, and, having taken up the bends in chords 1, 2 and 3, with Mr. McLure, who decided that they were of no importance, he subsequently passed without attention similar defects in others. No. 9 chord of the anchor arm had been repaired in the yard in July, 1905.

Defect Not Rectified.

In the afternoon Mr. Kinloch, continuing his evidence, said a supposed defect in the bottom of the east centre rim was brought to his attention four or five weeks before the accident. He and Mr. McLure discussed the matter, which was referred to Mr. Cooper. That gentleman apparently misunderstood the matter, as it was never rectified.

On Aug. 20 he found some distortion of the ribs of chord No. 9 of the cantilever. Chords Nos. 8 and 10 were also damaged, and the damage to the plate between chords 8 and 9 was considerable. It was fully riveted.

The deflection in chord No. 8 considerably worried him, because he was positive it was straight when riveted up, and it was later on that chord 8L, in the anchor arm, showed similar deflection. He was in doubt as to whether the bends in question were shop bends or not. The chords in question had been in the bridge since 1906. It was not uncommon for ribs not to meet at once, and then they had to be packed. In this case the 25-ton Morton jack was used to get them into line. In only one instance did the chords in this bridge line at the bottom. In his second inspection of chord 8 he thought that the bend had increased. All the ribs in the chord were bent, the bend being almost in the shape of an "S." On Tuesday, the 27th, he discovered a bend in chord E, 9L, in the anchor arm. On the previous Saturday he had not noticed it.

Was Quite Alarming.

Mr. Birks and Mr. Yeaser were down below on chord 10 and witness said that he called them up, adding: "It was apparently quite alarming." Mr. Yeaser said it was quite new, and that he had been over it too often not to have seen it if it had been there before. He also said he would put up no more metal. Mr. Birks laughed at Yeaser, telling him he must be more careful and make a further investigation before talking as he was, since his condemnation of these chords meant a condemnation of the whole bridge. Mr. McLure reported the matter to Mr. Hoare, who came to the bridge next day and ordered a thorough examination. On Wednesday, the day before the accident, Birks said that they, and especially he himself, had made fools of themselves for the bend ran up to the field splice. Nevertheless, witness went on to detail how this small traveler was again moved further out and how another piece of metal had been placed in position only 15 minutes before the accident.

Everybody Was Nervous.

He said that Mr. McLure was in New York at the time to consult Mr. Cooper. He made his last inspection about 4 o'clock on the day of the collapse, and met Mr. Birks on the approach to the bridge, who said, "It's all right, we have just received word from Phoenixville that chord 9 was bent before it left there." Witness said he simply laughed and passed on.

Mr Hoare had told him to keep a close watch, especially lateral joints, and he noticed that the facework of chord 9L sounded high when struck with the hammer, showing a strain. He said many of the workers on the bridge knew of the chord deflections, but were more alarmed at the defects in the cantilever than at those in the anchor arm.

Portland, Ore, Sept. 21.—A despatch from Olympia says that the disorders at Bellingham several days ago, which caused an exodus of Hindoos from that place, has been brought to the attention of the State Department at Washington by the British ambassador.

Enquiry through official channels resulted in telegrams from the mayors at Bellingham and Everett, stating that no force had ever been used, and that press reports were much exaggerated. No trouble was anticipated under present conditions.

Rockefeller's Stake In Oil.

New York, Sept. 21.—A record of the present stockholders of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, part of which was placed in evidence yesterday in the federal suit against the oil combine, disclosed that John D. Rockefeller owns 247,862 shares of stock and that his holdings are almost five times larger than those of any other individual interest. The record shows that since the dissolution of the Standard Oil trust Mr. Rockefeller has disposed of nearly 10,000 shares. Based on the present market value of $440 for Standard Oil stock, Mr. Rockfeller's interest in the company is valued at about $19,000,000.

Burglars Were Foiled.

Delhi, Sept. 21.—Burglars secured an entrance to the postoffice Thursday night, but before securing anything they were surprised by George Molson.

One man fired at Mr. Molson, the bullet passing through his hat. Several shots were exchanged, and the men got away.

Many Schooners Lost.

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 21.—The heaviest equinoctial gale recorded here in 40 years swept the Newfoundland coast Thursday. Reports thus far show that five lives were lost.

Eleven schooners and sloops were driven ashore at various points, or foundered at their moorings. Further loss of life and property is feared.

Shot In Temple.

Brockville, Sept. 21.—A little daughter of Rufus Garner of Watertown, aged five years, was accidentally shot in the head by a playmate who had a rifle which he did not know was loaded. The bullet entered the head at the right temple, coming out close to the ear. The skull was not fractured, and recovery is expected.

Freight Cars Derailed.

Stratford, Sept. 21.—A bad freight wreck occurred on the main line of the G.T.R. between Stratford and Toronto last evening. It was about three miles from the city. Five cars were thrown from the track.

The Stratford auxiliary is at the wreck.

No one was hurt.

PLANING MILL BURNED

One Big Blaze and Seven Others at Chatham.

Firemen Have Strenuous Times—Narrow Escapes From Suffocation—High Wind Helped Flames—Flour and Woollen Mills Also Scorched—Damage $8,000—Dark Room Ablaze Twenty Years' Collection Lost.

Chatham, Sept. 21.—One big blaze doing an estimated damage of about $8,000 with many narrow escapes from injury and suffocation, a wind that blew 20 miles an hour, which spread the sparks over a great portion of the city, setting seven other places on fire, was the record yesterday morning of the biggest day that the local fire department ever experienced.

The fire started in the planing mill of W. M. Drader, Queen street, shortly after 9 o'clock, and a few hours later the whole mill, which employs a considerable number of hands, was entirely destroyed. In the meantime sparks had set fire to T. H. Taylor's flour and woolen mills, but this was extinguished after only a half hour's strenuous work. At the same time six other places, including several barns and the roof of a church, caught fire and were put out by garden hose and water buckets.

The first fire of the day started in the K. King store at 8.50 o'clock, and this had hardly been quenched when the big Drader fire started. The insurance on the Drader building is $11,000 which covers the loss.

17,000 Negatives Destroyed.

Toronto, Sept. 21.—Seventeen thousand negatives, the collection of twenty years, were, it is feared, destroyed as the result of a small blaze in "The Dutch Studio," here yesterday.

One of the men in the gallery was startled by a sudden reflection, and found the darkroom in flames. A still alarm brought a very quick response from the Yonge street hose and chemical companies and the Bay street hook and ladder truck. The chemical was sufficient to stop the fire, but the moisture got into the negatives.

Livery Stable Burned.

Mount Forest, Sept. 21.—The livery stable of R. J. Burns was completely destroyed by fire yesterday. Three horses were cremated. No insurance on the building.

SON HIS NEMESIS.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—John M. Wiles, 66 years old, was confronted in the Central Police Station by his son, J. Burr Wiles, 35 years old, whom he had not seen for 34 years.

The father was a prisoner on complaint of his son, who had constituted himself his nemesis in revenge for the desertion of his mother and three children, two of whom are dead, in Binghamton, N. Y., 34 years ago. The son had traced him the last few years until, convinced he could convict him of a statutory offence involving a woman who was acting as his housekeeper, he caused his arrest.

CALIFORNIA SHAKEN.

Earthquake Causes Residents to Run Into Streets.

San Bernardino, Cal., Sept. 21.—An earthquake shock that brought residents of this city into the streets in alarm and caused a general shake up in the arrangements of many households was experienced here Thursday evening.

In the mountains the shock was most severe, causing great trees to sway, as if whipped by a mighty tempest. No serious damage was reported.

TWO KILLED AT CROSSING.

Newly-Wedded Couple Unable to Hear Train Approaching.

Galt, Sept. 21.—Frederick Reed, aged 28, and his newly-wed wife, formerly Miss MacDowall, aged 25, both of Goderich, were killed at the level crossing three miles north of Hespeler, about noon yesterday.

They were driving from Guelph to Galt, and were struck by the 11.15 train, being unable to hear its approach owing to an exceptionally high wind.

Attacked by Angry Bull.

East Toronto, Sept. 21.—Attacked by an angry bull, which he went to feed Thursday night, Louis Smith, employed as a hostler at Crew's Hotel, lies in the General Hospital in a semi-conscious condition.

About 4 o'clock on Thursday afternoon Smith was directed by Mr. Crews to feed the animal, when the brute broke the chain with which he was fastened and turned upon him, knocking him down and frightfully goring him. Armed with forks, a number of men who saw the attack ran to the spot and drove the infuriated animal away.

Twine Makers Fined.

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—J. L. Haycock, Dominion inspector of binder twine, has made a report to the Department of Trade and Commerce upon the results of a trip to the west. During his absence he imposed fines amounting to $3,600 for short twine. One American firm, which was fined $1,475, really had to pay up to the extent of over $12,000 for its crooked business methods.

Postoffice Robbed.

Brockville, Sept. 21.—Burglars entered the postoffice at Norwood, blew open the safe and escaped with $30 in cash, $65 in stamps and some registered mail.

Dollar Wheat.

Winnipeg, Sept. 21.—New wheat marketed here Thursday graded No. 1 northern. It was purchased by the Western Canada Milling Co. for $1 per bushel.

The total strength of the R.N.W.M.P. is 500, scattered over 120 stations.

TORONTO POSTMASTER DEAD.

Mr. T. C. Patteson Succumbs After Brief Illness.

Toronto, Sept. 21.—Thomas C. Patteson, postmaster of Toronto since February, 1879, died shortly after midnight, after a few days' illness, from pneumonia. It was not until yesterday morning that fears were entertained that he would not recover. He sank steadily throughout the day.

The late Mr. Patteson was born at Putney, Wiltshire, Eng., on Oct. 5, 1836. He was a King's scholar and captain of his division at Eton. Proceeding to Merton College, Oxford, where he won an open scholarship and graduated in honors in 1858.

In 1871 Mr. Patteson became first managing editor of The Mail, established in that year as a Conservative paper, and prior to that held several minor appointments under the Government. He was appointed postmaster of Toronto by Sir John A Macdonald.

Mr. Patteson was much interested in thoroughbred horses, and a recognized authority on pedigrees. To him was largely due the formation of the Ontario Jockey Club and the inauguration of racing at the Woodbine track. At one time he owned several racehorses himself.

Skin Disease is Blood Disease

These unhealthy organs cannot rid the system of the waste matter. It is this waste taken up by the blood and carried to the skin—that ruins the complexion.

"Fruit-a-tives" cure all skin troubles because they cure the kidneys and bowels.

"Fruit-a-tives" cause the eliminating organs to do their proper share of the work of ridding the system of waste. This purifies the blood — and instantly the pimples and blotches disappear, and the complexion clears. "Fruit-a-tives" cure skin troubles when everything else fails.

"Fruit-a-tives" are fruit juices, intensified, and combined with valuable tonics and antiseptics.

They are without doubt the greatest blood purifier in the world. 50c. a box—6 for $2.50. At all druggists.

TORTURE AGED WOMAN

Son and Daughter Thought She Had Evil Spirit.

Zionites Arrested on Charge of Manslaughter — Three Other Persons Assisted — Tried to Cure Their Mother's Rheumatism by Exorcising the "Devil"—Victim Died in Terrible Agony.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—Five persons, members of the sect of parhamites, are under arrest in Zion City, accused of torturing to death Mrs. Letitia Greenhaulgh, 64 years old. They are Walter and Jennie Greenhaulgh, son and daughter of the woman; Harold Mitchell, Mrs. Hazold Mitchell, and Mrs. Smith. All of them are accused of manslaughter.

Mrs. Greenhaulgh had been for twenty years an invalid, suffering from paralysis and rheumatism. Her condition convinced the five persons mentioned that she must be possessed of the devil, and they determined to exorcise the evil spirit. The five knelt by the bedside, and after prayers, jerked and twisted Mrs. Greenhaulgh's rheumatic arms and neck until the victim screamed in agony.

She died shortly afterward, whereupon an attempt was made to resurrect her.

Under the new law he was sentenced to six months' imprisonment for the offence, which might have cost life to passengers.

FATHER'S REVOLTING CRIME.

Drowns Children to Revenge Himself on His Wife.

Paris, Sept. 21.—The public impression at the appalling growth of crime and violence, which manifested itself over the commutation of the death sentence passed on Soleilland for the atrocious murder of a little girl has been aroused again by the revolting crime of a drunken gardener, who, to avenge himself on his wife for refusing to live with him, drowned his two children in the moat of the fortifications.

LEADS ONTARIO LIBERALS.

Hon. A. G. MacKay Chosen to Succeed Hon. Geo. P. Graham.

Toronto, Sept. 21.—The Hon. A. G. MacKay was the unanimous choice of the representatives of the Liberal party in the Provincial Legislature yesterday at the office of the Reform Association of Ontario, to elect a successor to the Hon. George P. Graham, as leader of the party in Ontario.

Mr. Graham, in tendering his resignation, expressed his regret at the necessity for the action, but he had felt that Sir Wilfred Lanrier's call was one that could not be denied. Though he was leaving the provincial House, he would still be in the party, and hoped to be able to render good services to the party.

The nomination having been enthusiastically tendered to him, the Hon. A. G. Mackay accepted it. He said that he was aware that whoever undertook to lead the Liberal party in Ontario would have to give up his whole life to it and the interests of the party, and this he hoped, within a few weeks, to be in a position to do.

Mr. MacKay also said he wished it to be understood that while he recognized the right, according to constitutional practice, for the members of the HON. A. G. MACKAY.

Legislature to elect their own leader, he accepted on the condition that the choice of the members of the Legislature should be approved by the entire Liberal party of the province, either in convention assembled or otherwise.

Mr. Alexander Grant MacKay, who has been elected to lead the little band of Liberals in the Legislature, was born in Sydenham, Grey County, in 1860, of Highland Scotch parents. He was educated at the Collegiate Institute at Owen Sound, and the University of Toronto. He was graduated in 1883, and for four years was principal of Port Rowan High School. During the next four years he studied law, and was called to the bar in 1891. In 1894 he was appointed Crown Attorney for Grey, and held that office until his entry into politics in 1901. He was elected to the Legislature in May, 1902, and two years later, in November, 1904, was appointed Commissioner of Crown Lands as the last re-organization of the Ross Cabinet.

FRANCO-CANADIAN TREATY.

Provides For Reciprocal Arrangement on Many Commodities.

Paris, Sept. 21.—The Franco-Canadian commercial treaty was signed at the Foreign Office on Thursday.

The Associated Press learns that this treaty not only provides for a reciprocal agreement on a large number of commodities, but also commits itself to a general reciprocal doctrine designed to cover possible concrete contingencies in the future.

Canada is unable to give France a more favorable duty on champagne than was allowed in 1893, but she grants a special tariff on silks, and in return gets a minimum tariff on certain farm and forest products.

RUSSIA'S FREE HAND.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 21.—Russia has made immediate use of the free hand given her under the terms of the Anglo-Russian treaty. The Russia yesterday confirmed the reports that M. - BUY - HIGHLAND MARY

Several months ago we offered Two Million Five Hundred Thousand shares of Blue Bell at 10 cents per share. It was quickly over-subscribed, and thousands of dollars were returned to disappointed applicants. Soon after we placed Lucky Boys upon the market, and offered One Million Shares at 6 cents per share. Applications were received for three times the amount offered, and we were again compelled to disappoint many clients.

The fortunate purchasers of Blue Bell and Lucky Boys have already witnessed an advance in these shares of fifteen times the purchase price of Lucky Boys and ten times the purchase price of Blue Bell. These advances are insignificant, however, in comparison to the advances that are still to take place in these shares. We are in close touch with the development, and are advised by our engineers that there are now thousands of tons of rich ore in sight amounting to millions of dollars. We strongly advise every shareholder of Blue Bell and Lucky Boys to keep what they have. Within the next year or so ten times the present value will be reached.

Gold Mines Limited, OF Larder Lake AT 10 Cents Per Share

Why have the investing public so eagerly subscribed for the flotations recommended by Law & Co., Limited?

The answer is this: Law & Co., Limited, have established themselves with the investing public as to their Responsibility, Reliability and Trustworthiness. They have not abused the confidence placed in them by investors. They will not offer a single share to the public unless they have first made exhaustive and thorough examinations of the properties involved through their own engineers and assayers. The properties must be first-class mining properties—not prospects. The titles must be perfect and clear of indebtedness. They do not mislead the public by misleading statements. The public appreciate Truth, Frankness and Fairness.

Never in the history of mining has such an opportunity for making money been presented as is now offered in the Larder Lake gold district, and especially in the wonderful Highland Mary properties.

Put your money in The Highland Mary Gold Mines, Limited. One of the greatest opportunities that have ever been offered for investment in a gold mining company. The Larder Lake district will be the wonder of the world, and Highland Mary is in the heart of it.

Miners and prospectors from all parts of the world are flocking to Larder Lake. Mining men with millions at their disposal are sending their representatives and mining engineers into the field, and are rapidly snapping up everything that can be purchased.

The time for investors to get in on the rock bottom is NOW—THE PRESENT TIME.

The opportunity offered in Highland Mary will probably never occur again in this district. Investors should accept this opportunity and buy in one of the greatest mining companies that will be known in this new Eldorado at the present rock-bottom prices of 10 cents per share.

We have gone to great expense, and have used every method available to learn and know the exact situation in the Larder Lake district. We have sent a number of reliable mining men in different directions and to different locations. We have established our own assaying office on the ground at Larder Lake, putting in charge of it mining engineers of known ability and reputation. We have not taken over a single claim that has not shown actual merit; that is to say, with free, visible gold in quantities most remarkable. We are informed by our engineers that there has never been a gold district known that has shown the wonderful width of quartz veins containing free, visible gold as now actually exists in the Larder Lake district. We have quartz veins assaying gold from $200 to as high as $42,000 to the ton, that vary in width from 6 feet to 150 feet.

The Highland Mary properties consist of 1,200 acres, being 30 well-selected 40-acre gold claims, undoubtedly and unquestionably the choicest of the district at the present time.

Now, we want to make this comparison. In the gold fields of Nevada, where the gold camps have gained renowned reputations—in camps as well known as Tonopah, Goldfield, Wonder, Searchlight—and other camps where millions upon millions have been made from claims varying in size from 10 to 20 acres. Just think of it! Ten or twenty acres running into values as high as from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 each. Mining men we have in the Larder Lake district who are well acquainted with the Nevada camps claim that the Larder Lake district is so far ahead of the mining camps in Nevada that there is no comparison whatever. Even the Rand in Africa, it is believed, will not come up to the wonderful gold district of Larder Lake.

We have received in our office in the past week many samples taken from every claim owned by the Highland Mary Company. Out of these we have had a great number of assays made by our own assayer on the ground. These assays run all the way around $200—the lowest—to $20,000—the highest. Our assayers on the ground, of course, cannot obtain as high assays as in laboratories in Toronto, where we have obtained the highest assays, running from $27,000 to $42,000 to the ton. Therefore, it is safe for us to estimate that the assays made by our own engineers on the ground are considerably under what we would actually receive were the stamp mills that the Company will install on the property in actual operation, together with the evanting process, by the use of which every particle of gold produced will be saved.

Could every investor come to our office and see the wonderful quartz samples, with gold showing in every portion, they would need no further urging or any further argument to convince them what Larder Lake is and what it is bound to be.

Investors who do not take advantage of this wonderful opportunity will, in a year from to-day, see and realize the great opportunities that they had to invest their money with great profit. We are in a position to judge, and we feel that we are judging rightly when we say to these investors: "Put your money into Highland Mary now. Every hundred dollars that you invest at the present time will, in a year from to-day, bring you many times that amount." This may seem to be a broad assertion, but consider well the great amount of territory, and consider well the millions that are made from properties consisting of but 10 to 20 acres of territory that never showed as rich as Highland Mary properties do to-day. It will only take a few months to place the property on a very big dividend-paying basis. Here is a legitimate opportunity for investors to make a real profit of 100 per cent. on your money by and through an early advance to $1.00. The Highland Mary shares will be selling in the open market at $2.00 in the near future, and it will not be long before investors will look back and realize how really cheap Highland Mary stock was at 10 cents. Such a chance to realize enormous returns on your money could seldom be possible except through the medium of legitimate mining investments, and through and by the discovery of such wonderful gold districts as Larder Lake. Remember, these opportunities will only present themselves once in a lifetime. This is the accepted time—this is the golden opportunity. The conditions surrounding the Highland Mary GUARANTEE to investors not only big profits, but also absolute safety. We have a property aggregating 1,200 acres in these wonderful Larder Lake gold fields—the new Eldorado—every acre of which is as rich in gold as the Rand, or the famous gold districts of Nevada where millions upon millions are being taken out. The Larder Lake gold district will be familiar to every schoolboy almost the world over within a year or two. The titles are clear—there are no encumbrances whatever—not a dollar of indebtedness. To us there is not one single element of uncertainty as to the outcome. Investors at the present price of shares—ten cents—will realize the most wonderful profits that have ever been known in any mining district in the world.

We feel so positive regarding this, as we have had every reason to make us believe so. Our own engineers, whom we know, and our own prospectors and miners, with years of experience, whom we have every confidence in, demonstrate to us these facts. We have no other method of demonstrating to the investing public than through our advertisements, which we endeavor to make honest and straightforward. We are investing our own money, and are not advising the investing public to do anything that we are not doing ourselves.

We want to state further and impress upon our clients and the investing public that those of you who join us in this proposition should understand that we are also in this proposition with you. We are backing our faith with our money, and we are asking you to join us in this proposition, which we find after thorough and exhaustive investigation to be an absolutely secure and safe investment, and one that will yield returns that will make unprecedented profits for all concerned. We have no fear whatever regarding our investment, and we wish to make it clear to you that WE cannot take a dollar of profit out of this proposition as offered to you in the Highland Mary Company unless you, yourselves, receive the same returns in proportion to your interests therein. We say to you we are offering you one of the fairest, squarest and most honorable propositions that could be presented.

We pride ourselves upon the enviable reputation and standing we have earned and established with the investing public throughout Canada and the United States as brokers and financial agents. We are endeavoring to further build up, instead of tearing down, this reputation, which could only have been established by legitimate business methods. We would not make the strong assertions as to the Highland Mary properties and investment therein, in these advertisements, were we not satisfied beyond any question as to the ultimate outcome of the investment which we herein advise.

It hardly seems necessary at this time, but we are glad that we are able to refer any investor to any bank, financial institution or commercial agencies in the City of Toronto or throughout Canada and the United States as to our standing and reliability.

We wish to state further that every recommendation or assertion made in any of our advertisements or letters of advice WILL BE STRICTLY CARRIED OUT, and that any investor may invest his money with the full assurance that his money will be placed for the purposes and in the manner indicated, and that LAW & COMPANY will fulfil their pledges in every way.

We wish to express our appreciation to the many investors who have shown their confidence in our recommendations, and we desire again to pledge loyalty to their interests, having no fear whatever for the future, knowing full well that it will demonstrate that their confidence in us has not been misplaced.

CHAS. BURTON TO STAND TRIAL

On Charge of Stealing $30 From Rich. Payne—Will Come Before Judge on Monday

Charles H. Burton, who it is alleged stole from the trousers pocket of Richard Payne, of North Monaghan, the sum of thirty dollars last week, came up before His Worship Magistrate Edmison yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mr. R. E. Wood conducted the prosecution and Mr. R. F. McWilliams appeared for the prisoner. Burton pleaded not guilty and decided to be tried summarily, but, when the evidence had been heard there was a doubt in His Worship's mind as to Burton's guilt and he was committed for trial.

Richard A. Payne sworn, said that he knnew prisoner. He worked for him three weeks, leaving about the 10th June. During the summer witness met Burton several times. On September 10th witness met him Prisoner wasn't working and complained of not feeling well. Payne invited him out to his place. That day witness got a registered letter out of the post office containing forty-dollars. Payne met Burton on Stewart street and he came out home with him. There was thirty-seven dollars in his pocketbook in his trouser's and he last saw the money at Grafton's store. Witness' trousers hung in his bedroom which adjoined that one where Burton slept. On Saturday evening Mr. Payne wanted to pay a lad that worked for him and he went to get the money. In his pocket was the purse containing only seven dollars, thirty having been taken.

Mrs. Payne, wife of the complainant was called. She knew the prisoner. On leaving the house, Thursday morning he said that he was not feeling well and was going to see a doctor. He told witness that he had $37 but that it was all gone long ago. Witness was about the house all the time. The hired boy never went upstairs.

Mr. Forsythe, barber, was the next witness. Prisoner owed witness an account of fifty cents. On the Friday morning after Burton left Payne's he paid the account, giving a dollar bill. He also had a ten dollar bill and two fives.

County Constable Geo. Cochrane was called and stated that he went after the prisoner to Claremont. Witness asked prisoner no questions until he came to Peterborough. No inducements were held out to Burton to answer questions. In the police station he admitted that he wrote a letter to Mrs. Payne the day after he left. A pocket book containing one ten and two five dollar bills, and four ones and some silver was taken from him.

Mr. Thos. McIndoo stated that Burton worked thirty-two days for him, from July 8th to August 15th. He received a dollar a day.

Crown Attorney Wood in summing up the evidence, said that he considered there was sufficient evidence to make a conviction.

Prisoner admitted to Mrs. Payne that the had no money. He said that he had had thirty-seven dollars, but it was gone. He got thirty-two dollars from Mr. McIndoo, but he had spent it as he got it. He said that he was going to the hospital for an operation and then preparing to go to the west points to the fact that he was trying to run away from justice.

His Worship stated that there was doubt as to whether Burton took the money. Mr. Payne might have lost it. The case was weak, but there was suspicious evidence. His Worship did not think that there was sufficient evidence to make a conviction. He did not feel like taking the responsibility of convicting the prisoner on the evidence as it stands. He thought that it had better go before the judge.

Mr. McWilliams endeavored to prevent this step by putting the defendant in the box to deny the charge.

Burton stated that he had been living here since last October. He worked nearly a month with Mr. Payne. Then he worked for Mr. Ackerman for a while, after which he went to work for Mr. McIndoo. He remained with him for six weeks. Burton said that he spent two days with Mr. Payne last week. He denied ever being in Mr. Payne's room or seeing his money. He had a little over thirty dollars.

Cross-examined by Mr. Wood he stated that all spring he earned nine dollars a week but, when the figures of Mr. Ackerman's books were shown it was seen that he only earned on average of four and five dollars a week.

Mr. McWilliams further submitted that there was no evidence to make a conviction.

Magistrate Edmison did not feel inclined to do so, but as the Crown considered that there should be one, he committed the prisoner for trial and he left it to the County Judge to decide. Burton will likely come before His Honor Judge Weller on Monday next.

Mr. George Hamilton Narrowly Escapes Being Electrocuted

Stepped on Telephone Wire That Had Become Charged With Electricity—Badly Stunned But Was Revived by Fellow Workmen—A Miraculous Escape.

Mr. Geo. Hamilton an employee of the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Co., had a miraculous escape from being electrocuted yesterday afternoon immediately after the big rain and wind storm that swept the city.

During the progress of the storm a large portion of a tree on Aylmer street, near the offices of the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Co., was blown off falling on one of the wires of the Bell Telephone Company, and breaking the wire. The telephone wire fell across the Otonabee Power Co's heavily charged wires, which are strung nearby, a portion of it overhanging onto the road.

When the storm was over Mr. Hamilton proceeded to cross the road from the main offices of the company to the saw house on the opposite side. As he did so he stepped on the telephone wire and received a very severe shock, shock as it had been transformed into a live wire charged with 2,300 volts by coming into contact with the wires across which he lay. The damp condition of the road also had the effect of materially increasing the violence of the shock.

Mr. Hamilton was overcome for a time and his fellow employees who witnessed the accident thought he had been killed. He rallied, however, after those present had worked hard in the task of reviving him and is able to be around again to-day. He naturally feels the effect of his terrible experience and is thankful for his escape from an awful death.

Is Hazel Brae To Be Closed? Statement of "Ups and Downs"

Is "Hazel Brae," the local Barnardo Home institution for girls, to be closed up?

It will be remembered that several months ago it was stated that unless the owner of the property made certain improvements to the building, the Home would be moved to Toronto. So far these alterations have not been made, and from a paragraph which appears in the last issue of 'Ups and Downs," the official organ of the Barnardo Homes in Canada, it looks as if the intention was to close "Hazel Brae," unless the improvements are made. Hon. Senator Cox is the owner of the property.

The paragraph in "Ups and Downs," to which reference is made, reads as follows:—

"Another summer has nearly passed, and we have enjoyed all its changes so much. We should have loved to hear the carpenter's hammer making a brisk sound and giving promise for more summers in the lovely Hazel Brae grounds; but the songs of the birds and the chatter of the squirrels, with all the rush of the bright young life around, have been undisturbed by an unsuch sounds, which in this case would have been the grandest music."

Schedule Has Been Drawn up

O.R.F.U. Senior Series Same as Last Season

The inter-provincial rugby union has talked to materialize and at a meeting last night in Toronto, Hamilton and the Argonauts decided to remain in the O.R.F.U., and the schedule for the senior series was drawn up. The clubs are the same as last year, the Tigers, Argos, Victorias, and Peterborough, and the schedule was drawn up as follows,—

Oct. 5.—Hamilton at Victorias, Argonauts at Peterborough.

Oct. 12.—Peterborough at Victorias.

Oct. 19.—Hamilton at Argonauts, Victorias at Peterborough.

Oct. 26.—Peterborough at Hamilton.

Oct. 31.—Victorias at Argonauts, Hamilton at Peterborough.

Nov. 2.—Peterborough at Argonauts Victorias at Hamilton.

Nov 9.—Argonauts at Hamilton.

Nov. 16.—Argonauts at Victorias.

Those present were Vice-President W. J. Sloe, in the chair; Secretary J. B Hay; W. A. Hewitt, Argonauts, W. H. Seymour, Hamilton; T. W. McDonough, Peterborough, and A. Hamilton, Victorias.

It looks as if "Mac." McDonough got about all the good things that were going. The locals start the season with a home game on Saturday, Oct. 5th, and the famous Tigers will be here on Thanksgiving Day, Oct. 31st. This is the plum of the whole schedule, and if the weather is fine, a monster crowd should see the game.

The Montreal players who applied for re-instatement were unwilling to accede to the demands of the Canadian Amateur Athletic Union, no applications whatever were received from Ottawa and the Hamilton Tigers, and the Argonauts signified their willingness to stick to the good old O.R.F.U. ship after all.

LETTER BOX THIEVES

MANY INGENIOUS METHODS OF STEALING MAIL MATTER.

Art of Dry Fishing—A Lucrative "Profession"—Thieves Usually Work In Pairs—Birdlime Used As Bait—Artful Dodges Resorted to In Order to Secure Success—Letters Rifled and Re-Posted.

The letter-box thief is by no means of recent birth. The calling has been practised in various forms for many years, and the adoption of the use of postal orders made the "profession" much more profitable, so that at one time there was almost a glut in its ranks. Many were the ingenious methods invented to carry out the larcenies successfully, writes Ex-Chief Inspector Robinson in Answers.

Letter-box thieves invariably work in pairs. One acts as the "look-out" or "crow," while the confederate operates the "tackle" and does the 'dry fishing," as it is termed, at the letter-box. When once letters are abstracted, they are taken clear away from the scene of operations—generally into some "doss house"—before they are examined.

When the thieves have decided on a private box they are to attack, which is usually selected by reason of its proprietors doing a class of business on the "cash with order" system, they carefully watch the postman on his first delivery of letters, about 8 a.m., and no sooner is he at a safe distance than one of the thieves is busy "angling" at the box by means of a string, or thin wire, attached to a piece of leather or canvas, about the size of an ordinary envelope. To this is affixed a weight, or heavy piece of lead, so as to carry the apparatus on to the letters in the box, and to exercise pressure when that position is reached. The whole is well besmeared with birdlime, to which anything loose will readily adhere.

Slick Contrivance.

To prevent larcenies of this kind, several important firms caused their letter-boxes to be constructed so that the letters fell many feet into the basement. This, for a time, was attended with some amount of success, but eventually an appliance to meet even this difficulty was constructed. It consisted of a bag, or pouch, attached to thin wire supports, riveted in the middle and worked on the principle of a pair of tongs. This pouch was inserted into the aperture of the letter-box, the apparatus being closed. When properly inside, the tongs-like wire were opened. This unfolded the pouch, and the top of each wire being bent, it was secured to the sides of the opening.

When the contrivance was full of letters to the mouth, they could be extracted one or two at a time by means of a pair of pincers.

Public letter-boxes are usually selected for their proximity to some noted commercial house, or large business establishment, from which cheques or postal orders are sent out by post—such, for instance as a prominent auctioneer's or large stock-broker's.

In addition to monetary losses, the trouble and inconvenience occasioned by the letter-box thief is immense. As may be imagined, many letters are drawn out of the boxes, and eventually destroyed, before even one is obtained containing anything of negotiable value.

Puzzling Case.

I recollect a case which at first seemed very puzzling. A postman on making his collection from a street pillar-box just off Drury Lane found some forty or fifty letters therein, the envelopes of which were open, although the contents appeared to be intact. In due course he reported the matter to the police.

In conjuction with the postoffice authorities, I had the letters placed in official envelopes and delivered to the owners. The damaged envelopes I retained to assist in the inquiry. Although smeared with a sticky substance, the fact of the letters being open in the box seemed most strange.

Inquiries revealed the fact that all the letters had been originally posted in the city. Then the secret was out. They had been stolen from a city letter-box, taken into one of the many lodging-houses in Clare Market, and there examined. Those found opened in the letter-box were valueless to the thieves, who, unable to destroy them in the house without attracting notice, considerately posted them, thus unintentionally saving much trouble to the owners.

A Terrifying Experience.

An interesting story of the supernatural was current not very many years ago of a young girl who slept one night in the "Blue," or "Haunted Room," at Hampton Court. At the witching hour, says the writer in "P.T.O.," she was awakened by a loud noise in the adjoining room. The door of her apartment was violently shaken, the handle rattled, and the sound of footsteps could be heard distinctly. Suddenly it appeared to the startled girl that a figure was gliding up and down in the darkness close to her bed; and then it seemed as if a towering form stooped and gazed into her face. No sound was uttered by the wraith, but the frightened girl felt a cold draught on her cheek, like the blast of an icy breath that might herald the passing of a soul. Then the atmosphere of the room lightened, the noises instantaneously ceased, and the poor girl was left in a dead faint. The integrity of the person who related this story cannot be questioned.

Napoleon and Waterloo.

Military men of all countries have repeatedly declared that Napoleon's last campaign was admirably planned and, up to Waterloo, admirably executed. Napoleon was defeated at Waterloo not because of any twist in his brain, but because of the rain that fell on the night of the 17th of June and the incompetency or treachery of Grouchy. Had it not rained on the 17th, or had Grouchy obeyed orders and kept Blucher from the French right, Napoleon would unquestionably have gained a victory at Waterloo.

Regarding your Zutoo Tablets I beg to say: I have been a sufferer from headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all, of the so-called "cures" on the market, till warned by my physician to discontinue their use on account of their bad effects on the heart. Some months since my attention was called to your Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a "sick" or "nervous" headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effect. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never fail to give quick relief. I find them a good remedy for "sour" stomach as well as headache. I always carry them in my grip on the road and would not be without them at any cost.

In the accompanying illustration is shown a modish combination of the popular tucked blouse, which is becoming to almost every type of figure, and the new 6 gored skirt, the most distinctive features of which are the circular shaping of the front and back gores and the overlapping side seams, ornamented in this design with small fancy buttons. The waist, which may be made with either full length or shorter sleeve, is modelled in polka dotted brown-and-white foulard, while the skirt is made of golden brown panama. This gown, however, may be prettily developed in pongee, shantung or rajah, or in linen, canvas, or any of the mercerized cottons. Some Reasons Why Young Men Should Join the Canadian Club

To the Editor of the Review,

Sir,—The Canadian Club movement which to-day girdles the earth, and links Canadians in every zone, was originated by Mr. Charles McCullough, of Hamilton. Prophet and founder though he is, little could he foresee the magnitude or power the institution was destined to attain. Already Canada owes to "The Father of the Canadian Club," a debt which can never be paid.

Why has the Canadian Club achieved such brilliant success? Why is it spreading so rapidly in influence? Why should ambitious young men become members, in Peterborough, or anywhere else? These questions are easily answered.

Because its instruction is patriotic. Its fundamental purpose is to further the interests of Canada. From its birth there has throbbed in it a sense of the greatness of our country's destiny. Every man touched with its idea feels that it is worth while. It looks far ahead, and seeks to give shape and worth to what is to be. Canada's greatness is its constant aim. What can be done to make our native land first in all that is enduring? That is its thought. Not material development is the first consideration. Commercial and industrial interests, railways, waterways, finance, insurance, mining, lumber, fish, cheese and everything else that touches the material resources of the country are considered; but these things are not all, nor chief. What stands first? Always the higher interests, the educational development and moral fibre of the citizen, the type of manhood that our country needs.

This brings us to a second reason why young men should join the club and stick to it. It is a great educational institution. Its speakers deal with innumerable subjects. Always brightly. That is part of the interest. Always intelligently. Only able men are invited. The meetings are short, the speakers experts, the lessons easy to take, and because related to the living interests of the day, they become strongly formative in one's character and living. Religion, like politics, is supposed to be excluded, yet Bishops and Archbishops and the greatest politicians of the world address our clubs.

Another reason is the personal factor. No man can develop personality without contact with men. The most potent power in the shaping and toning of manhood is the inspiration of a man. One strong man, who stands as a type of attractive character, is worth very much to a community. Put him in a bank or school, pulpit or workshop, and he helps men. To come under the power of a great single personality often gives uplift and direction and momentum to life.

In the Canadian Club this type of influence will be found in two different ways. In the prominent men who come as speakers, and also by association with fellow-members. Everywhere the club has appealed to the leaders of men, drawing into its membership the most distinguished men in our cities. By joining the club one has contact with the moving forces of the day, and forms friendships which must be of lasting worth.

No ambitious young man can afford to ignore the Canadian Club. It means profit for the present, it means power for the future. And every meeting tells on the destiny of our native land.

CANNOT BUDGE TENANT.

So McGill College Must Do Without Medical Building.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—At a meeting of the governors of McGill College held yesterday it was found that the college could not go on with the erection of the new medical building owing to the fact that the present tenant refused to leave until his lease expired.

Lord Strathcona has formally conveyed the site to the college, but until the tenant is met in some way, the college will have to do without the new building. It was also arranged on a report from the new Macdonald Agricultural College that the school for teachers should open on Oct. 15, that of household science on the 17th and the school for agriculture on the 22nd. Already so many applications have been received that the women's residence will be taxed to its full capacity, while the men's residence will be more than half filled.

Forty-six years! A long time to look back, but doubtless there are many Peterborough people whose memories can carry them back to the days of nearly a half a century ago. The American civil war was in progress at the time and generally speaking the times were exciting for the people of the British Isles and Canada as well as for the citizens of the United States.

An interesting reminder of these exciting days was brought to the Review office this week by Mr. J. D. Collins, of this city. It was a "Review Extra," dated December 13th, 1861, and as it will no doubt prove of interest to many it is reproduced in actual size below. No doubt many citizens will remember the incident as it created a stir at the time. Peterborough's newspapers were not as big forty-six years ago as they are now and while the "Extra" of 1861 looks somewhat insignificant at the present time it was considered quite a bit of enterprise at the time it was published. It is given below just as it appeared on December 13th, 1861:

REVIEW EXTRA!

FRIDAY MORNING, DEC. 13th, 1861

ARRIVAL OF THE "ASIA."

Mason-Slidell Affair in England

Great Meeting in Liverpool!

OPINIONS OF THE "TIMES."

(We are indebted to the obliging operator there for the following, received late last night:

New York, 12th Dec., 1861.

The Steamship Asia arrived at this port this afternoon. She brings London "Times" of 31st ult., which contains an account of meeting at Liverpool.

The following placard was posted in 'change:

"Outrage on British Fleet.—Southern Commissioners removed from a British mail steamer. A public meeting will be held in Cotton Sales' room at 3 o'clock." The room was crowded to excess. The chair was occupied by James Spence, who read the following resolution:

"Resolved, that this meeting, having heard, with indignation that an American Federal ship of war has forcibly taken from a British mail steamer, certain passengers who were proceeding peaceably under shelter of our flag, from one neutral port to another, do earnestly call upon government to assert the dignity of the British flag by requiring prompt reparation for this outrage."

This resolution was received with great enthusiasm. The resolution was advocated by chairman who considered he was expressing the feeling of the people when he said it was the duty of people to preserve and vindicate the honor and dignity of the British flag.

Mr. John Campbell considered there was reason to doubt whether the facts related and acted on by this meeting were in reality a breach of international law, and referred to opinions of law officers of the Crown as being in some measure inclined to show that such a step as that taken with respect to Southern commissioners was justifiable, under existing state of international law, and argued the propriety of postponing the consideration of subject till to-morrow.

Mr. T. Orr seconded Mr. Campbell's motion.

The Chairman suggested that to meet objections from Mr. Campbell, to strike out the words "by requesting prompt reparation for this outrage," and the resolution thus amended passed nearly unanimously.

Several merchants expressed their views after adjournment.

The London Times is more moderate in its comments on the Mason & Slidell capture than the News. While denying that the Federal government, while asserting that the existing war is a mere rebellion, has a right to overhaul, it nevertheless admits that England has established precedents which now tell against her in this matter of the Trent; but those precedents were under circumstances very different. It asserts, from those which now occur, England was then fighting for existence, and did in those days what she would not do now nor allow others to do. In discussing the question whether Mason and Sidell were liable to capture as belligerents or contraband on board the Trent, states it is the opinion of very eminent jurists that this was not a question to be adjudicated by the boats' crew. The legal course would have been to take the ship itself into port for adjudication.

It concludes with an expression that Englishmen will discuss the question with calmness, and appeals to the Federal States not to provoke war by such acts.

This is all relating to the Mason & Sidell affair which had been sent over the wires.

25th Anniversary of St. Peter's Cathedral Will Be Celebrated

To-morrow, the silver jubilee of St. Peter's Cathedral, will be celebrated. The growth of St. Peter's from a small parish church to the present stately Cathedral, with its excellent and ample seating accommodation, large galleries and rich and artistic paintings, may be described as almost phenomenal. If the late Bishop Jamot, the first Bishop of Peterborough, could again be called to his former parish, the only thing about St. Peter's that he would recognize would be the site, and that, too, has been improved to such an extent that the Cathedral has one of the finest church lawns in the province.

HIS LORDSHIP, BISHOP O'CONNOR

From a comparatively small congregation, when the late Bishop Jamot first took charge, the number of parishioners has swelled to 4,000 in the city, and 500 in the surrounding rural community. There has been an increase in membership of over 100 members a year, on the average, during the last five years.

His Lordship Bishop O'Connor has endeared himself to his flock by the great interest he has taken in their spiritual welfare, and Rev. Father McColl, the rector of St. Peters', is held in the highest esteem by all of his parishioners. The other priests of the Cathedral staff are beloved and respected by the members of their congregation. The Protestant clergymen of Peterborough also have the greatest regard for His Lordship, and his able and devout body of clerical assistants.

TITTING OBSERVANCE.

In connection with the observance of the jubilee, Pontifical High Mass will be sung in the morning by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor at 10.30. Father Teefy will deliver an address dealing with the history of the church since its establishment in Peterborough, and bringing out points of present interest as well as giving reminiscent and statistical details concerning the growth of the diocese.

In the evening Vespers will be sung at seven o'clock, and Ven. Archdeacon Casey, of Lindsay, will preach the sermon.

There will doubtless be exceptionally large large congregations present, both morning and evening, owing to the importance of the occasion and the special interest attached to it.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for an ycase of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Young People of St. Luke's Organize

Large Number Present—Officers Elected for Coming Year

A most enthusiastic meeting was held last night at St. Luke's church, attended by a large number of young people, to consider the formation of an Anglican Young People's Association. Rev. Dr. Langfeldt was chairman, and opened the meeting with prayer. He stated the object of the gathering and explained the principles of the Association. After some discussion a vote was taken, the result of which was the unanimous wish to organize an A.Y.P.A. The meeting then proceeded to elect officers, with the following result:—

Patron—Rev. Dr. Langfeldt.

President—Mr. H. C. M. Potter.

Vice-Presidents—Miss Lizzie Stewart, Mr. Chas. Crane.

Secretary—Miss Clara Adams.

Treasurer—Miss Mary Pratley.

Committee—Mr. T. Whittaker, Miss Eva Crane, Miss Lillian Rogers.

The meeting will be held every Friday, the first meeting to be on Friday, October 4th. The executive committee is in charge of arranging for the social evening on Oct. 4. The committee will be selected then. The charter members present last night will be presented with the badge of the A.Y.P.A., which is an embellished shield bearing the letters A.Y.P.A., and the Greek letters, Chi-Rho. The large number present and the enthusiasm displayed augurs well for the success of this new organization among the activities of St. Luke's church.

Harvest Festival At All Saints'

If the word successful can be reverently applied to a solemn and joyous service of thanksgiving and praise it is particularly applicable to the harvest festival services at All Saint's last night. The environments were inspiring to the worshippers and suitable to the occasion, the beautiful little church, being made additionally attractive by the profuse display and the tasteful arrangement of trophies of the bountiful harvest.

The service was very heartily entered into by the large congregation and the choir admirably rendered the music, the spirit of rejoicing and praise, which characterized it, being in harmony with the occasion. The sermon was preached by Rev. Canon Spragge of Cobourg, and in a most instructive discourse he told of the obligation of the people to thank God for His generous gifts to mankind. He also read the lessons, while Canon Davidson, conducted the prayer service.

The many friends of Rev. Mr. Major, the pastor were delighted to note that he was well enough to be present after a short severe illness.

Mr. Major announced that the collection taken up would be used in connection with church purposes in the west, and asked for a generous response from those in attendance.

The festival will be continued next Sunday, when the service will be taken by Rev. R. B. Gnob of Port Hope, as Mr. Major is not yet well enough to officiate, in so short a time.

THE SERMON.

The preacher chose his text from the 14th verse of the 50th Psalm, "Offer unto God thanksgiving." We are all taught, he said, that Almighty God, desires above all things the offerings of an earnest and sincere heart. The scriptures tell us that this is true thanksgiving. "By the beautiful decorations of your church" said Canon Spragge, "which were placed there in a spirit of thankfulness, I know the people of All Saint's are grateful to the Almighty for His countless gifts and blessings." The chief purpose of coming to church is to assemble and meet together to render thanks for for this great benefits we have received at His hands."

Among other things that we should be thankful for, is the age in which we live. During the last 200 years the world has made wonderful advancement and during the past fifty years, the progress has been little short of astounding. This is truly a marvellous age, and we have every reason to thank God, for the great inventions, and innumerable scientific processes that have come to light in recent years, to facilitate the efforts of mankind in the world's work. Man deserves no credit in this respect all comes from the hand of God."

"This very town," remarked the speaker, "is an example of the widespread advancement of the age."

We should be heartily thankful for this present era of prosperity, and peace, but greater than all material blessings is the one that God gave us when he sent Christ to this world to die for the redemption of mankind.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, Sept. 26, 27 and 28, the "Peterborough Fall Fair," as the Industrial Exhibition is popularly called, will be in full swing. The prospects for the success of this year's show are more promising than ever, and the entries will exceed those of last year by about twenty-five per cent. It is expected that fully 1,500 entries will be secured. Secretary H J. A. Hall was a busy man today. His office at the premises of Leary & Storey, Water street, was crowded and the greatest interest was taken in the coming attraction. The showing in horses will be particularly fine, and representative in every way. The special features will also be the best in years. Live stock entries are also coming in in a most satisfactory manner. The citizens should patronize the exhibition this year in large numbers, as the show will be the biggest, best and brightest ever held in the history of the society.

A BIG STEER.

The mammoth steer weighing 3,500 pounds, and the diminutive cow of only 300 lbs., the two being exhibited side by side, and will undoubtedly be the object of much curiosity at the Peterborough fair.

How's your Roof?

If not, you should learn all about our "Safe Lock" Galvanized Steel Shingles. They are proof against every element. The lock, on all four sides, makes it impossible for rain or snow to back up under the shingles and rust the nail holes and raw edges. This feature has been imitated, but is found in its perfection only in Our "Safe Lock" Shingles.

Don't use wood shingles. Nowadays, they are expensive and very inferior. They catch deposits of dust and dirt, which soon rot the shingles. Then the roof begins to leak. Patch all you like, you can't keep ahead of the leaks. There's no economy in a wooden roof.

Numerous Inquiries About Canada; All Eyes Turned in This Direction

Mr. John Williams, Wife and Daughter Return From an Extended Visit to Old Country—Bright Prospects for Emigration—Harvest Weather Has Not Been Favorable--Observations Made While Abroad

Mr. and Mrs. John Williams and daughter, of Boswell avenue, have returned from an extended trip to England and Wales. They greatly enjoyed their outing and spent some time in the walled city of Chester and other ancient historic spots. Mr. Williams has in his possession a copy of an English paper over one hundred years old, which he prizes very highly. The publication is dated April 13th, 1800, and was issued in London at the time of Napoleon Bonaparte had nearly all Europe in the throes of mortal combat. The paper is four columns wide, and is in an excellent state of preservation. It is a weekly and contains records of the movements of the army and navy, foreign intelligence, orders, etc. The names of Lord Nelson, Bonaparte and others are frequently referred to. The Observer was given to Mr. Williams by a friend and he would not part with the copy for any money.

Speaking of his trip to the Review today, Mr. Williams said "My wife, my daughter and I started from Peterborough, Thursday, July 11th, on the noon train, arriving in Montreal about 9 p.m. We boarded the Allan Liner, "Tunisian," the same evening. At four o'clock next morning, we left Montreal. The scenery down the St. Lawrence is something grand. We called at Quebec for passengers, among whom were two Indian chiefs, dressed in full tribal costumes and carrying with them the famous "pipe of peace." Their names were A-kuha and Keyewakam of the Sioux tribe, Manitoba. They were going to London, where they hoped to have an interview with the King. They drew the attention of the passengers, the moment that they came on board. A-kuha, the oldest, was the proudest of the two for he wore on his chest a large medal which George III. had presented to his father.

Early the next morning before it was time to arise, the passengers were alarmed by the Indians, marching up and down the corridors, dressed in full ceremonial costumes, and chanting their early morning devotions with an occasional warhoop. The stewards had to stop the performance as it was causing too great a commotion and alarm. The stewards said afterwards that they would engage the Indians to go around and wake the passengers in the mornings, as some of them stayed in bed until late in the day, especially the lady passengers.

The Indians attended Church service on Sunday, and when the older one inquired from the other what church it was, he replied "It is King Edward's church." On arrival at Liverpool Landing Stage our boat with Indians to the front, was the attraction of the crowd.

We landed at Liverpool on Saturday, July 20th, and from there we went to Patricroft, a suburb of Manchester. We were very much struck with the perfect electric tramway system, owned by the Manchester corporation, and when we learned that the sum of $250,000 was handed over last year by the managing committee, to the corporation for the reduction of rates, we felt more strongly than ever that municipal ownership is the right policy. Manchester, like most of the other large cities is gradually spreading out, and building operations are progressing in a great many places. On the street where we were staying, six miles from the city, there was a terrace of twelve dwellings, nearing completion. As a sample of the works in the locality, there was the Nasmith Engineering Works, with a week's pay roll of about $5,000. The firm had just put in a tender for a contract of locomotives amounting to $300,000. Mr. Nasmith, the originator of the firm was the inventor of the steam hammer.

While around Manchester, we made particular enquiries as to how Canadian cheese was taking with the people. The report was very satisfactory. We were told that Canadian cheese compared very favorably with the best English makes and was ahead of the American cheese.

From Manchester, we went into the rural districts, and I noticed that the sewerage from some of the cities, was carried by pipes a long distance into the country, and distributed on farms owned by the corporations. The farmers everywhere were having great trouble to get their hay harvested, the weather being worse this year than they had experienced for a great many years. It was a sorry sight to see the grain battered down with so much rain. The farmers had to resort to the old-fashioned way of cutting with scythes, instead of by machinery.

While here we had many enquiries from young farm hands as to the possibilities for them in this country. Of course, we told them that the advantages were of the very best, and we have no doubt, that before long, they will find their way out here.

"Anyway," added Mr. Williams, "I don't think, there is any danger of a decrease in the immigration returns for some years to come; for a short distance from where I was staying in the country, there were five families, and I was told the total aggregation of children ran close to the fifty mark. One great drawback and trouble which farmer's daughters and sons have to contend with is the great scarcity of places or farms for them to take or rent after marrying. In some instances they have to wait for years after getting married for the above reason.

We made the return voyage on the Corsican, a new steamer belonging to the Allan Line, which brought out about eight hundred third class passengers, who were a very respectable and high-class body of settlers, chiefly mechanics. A goodly number of children accompanied their parents to their western homes, and all appeared to be delighted with the looks of the country, and were very hopeful of the future."

Auburn Mills Excursion To-day

About 250 People Went to Cobourg This Morning

About 250 excursionists took in the annual outing of the Auburn Woollen Mills, which is being held to Cobourg today. They left on a special train of five coaches at nine o'clock this morning. The day being an extremely fine one, no doubt a very pleasant time will be spent by all in the pretty lakeside town. Cobourg is a place of much interest and has been the rendezvous of many excursions this summer.

Celebrated Ninth Business Birthday

Fully 5000 People Attended the Re-opening of Cressman's Enlarged Store

Were you at the formal re-opening of Cressman's palatial departmental store that evening?

If you were you enjoyed a decided treat. The store was crowded every minute of the big establishment from seven until long after nine o'clock and every floor was crowded to the utmost capacity and at times the crush was terrific, but the mass of humanity or more properly speaking femanity, was a good natured one. In the various departments, Dolly Varden shoes for women and Foot-rite for men, were sources of infinite interest, while all the other features proved to be decidedly attractive.

Splendid music was provided by the Imperial opera house orchestra under the able direction of Mr. Nicholl.

As the great throngs filed through the mammoth building and the thousands of people moved from one department to another, the scene was an inspiring one—in fact, without a parallel in the business life of Peterborough.

The re-opening marked the ninth anniversary of Mr. Cressman's remarkable successful mercantile career in Peterborough.

The large and efficient staff of Mr. Cressman was on hand and materially added to the enjoyment and pleasant associations of an evening that will not soon fade from memory. Mr. Cressman was warmly congratulated on his enterprise while many expressions of delight were heard at the beauty, completeness and spaciousness of "The store that never Disappoints."

So many new features were to be seen that one can but mention a few. The Dolly Varden Boot Shop on the second floor, and the Foot-rite Shoe Rooms in the Semi-Ready Tailoring Department, on the first floor were the mecca of thousands.

Yes, it was a great night and one long to be remembered. The re-opening was the biggest kind of a great big success.

Without a Single Dollar; Without a Single Friend

Mrs. Andrews, of Dakota, Deserted by Her Husband, Seeks Aid in This City—Her Little Child in House of Providence—Pathetic Case Comes Under Notice of Charity Board.

"What am I to do? Must I die on the streets"?

With tears streaming from her eyes, and with an appearance of abject despair and hopelessness, Mrs. Andrews, a young matron 24 years of age, whose home—or what used to be her home—is in the State of Dakota, uttered in pained accents these pitiful words. Mr. Finch Miller, city relief officer, was the person to whom they were addressed, but unfortunately he was not in a position to give any aid to the almost distracted woman, other than a small pittance from his own pocket. And to add to her misfortunes, she has the additional burden of a helpless child of the tender age of two years. The little one has been taken in charge by a local charitable institution, the House of Providence, the officials of which are noted for their kindness of heart and true Christian sympathy.

A SAD STORY.

Mrs. Andrews' troubles sprung from a source that is too often brought to the notice of the people. Deserted by a heartless husband, weak of body and faltering of spirit, and without any prospects whatever for a means of providing for herself in the future, she came to this part of the country to seek shelter from her sister, who resides near the city. After keeping her for some time, the sister decided that she could not afford to do so any longer, and as a result Mrs. Andrews, with her babe, had to seek assistance elsewhere.

She is still in the city—destitute—absolutely too weak to do any kind of work, and would be grateful for any assistance that might be rendered her by her brothers and sisters in more fortunate circumstances. A subscription to this good cause may be left at the Review office or at Mr. Miller's place of business, 348 Water street.

"If the prosperous people in this city only realized what good they could do with their money," said Mr. Miller to the Review, "and would be willing to give some assistance to the numerous unfortunates who come under the notice of the charity officers of this city, what a great blessing it would be."

To Report M. H. O's Action To the Provincial Board

Member of the Board of Health Makes This Statement—Will It Be Carried Out?

Apparently there is going to be another storm in the internal strife now existing in the Board of Health as a result of the scarlet fever case. As is generally known the majority of the members of the Board condemn the Medical Health Officer's action in placing the patient in the city building and have disclaimed all responsibility for what has been done.

A member of the Board informed the Review to-day that the action of Dr. Bingham in acting without the consent of the Board would be reported to the Provincial Board of Health. Several members of the Board appear to be hot on the trail of the doctor and do not intend to let the matter drop. They expect that the authorities at Toronto will take action and see that the difficulties which are rampant in the body that is supposed to look after the health of Peterborough will be cleared up. Apparently something has to be done to bring about an improvement in the Board of Health in this city for, with the present dissension existing this body is of very little use.

The Mystery Has Been Cleared up

As to Where Parcel of Clothes Found a Week Ago Came From

The mystery as to the parcel of clothes found concealed in a lumber pile, last Saturday, has been cleared up. It appears that a charitable lady gave to another woman who was in very poor circumstances, these cast off clothing, and they were placed under the lumber pile only a short while before they were found. The lady hid them there, intending to call for them later on in the day.

Thus the theory that some one committed suicide has been dropped, and the true story is the one here given.

The Last Stroke.

BY LAWRENCE L. LYNCH,

Author of "A Woman's Crime," "John Arthur's Ward," "The Diamond Coterie," "Against Odds," Etc.

"She must be removed immediately," said the doctor a moment after. "Let some one find a carriage or phaeton at once." Then, as Ferrars did not move from his place beside the bed where they had placed the unconscious woman, he strode to the chamber door, said a word or two to Doran, who had followed them as far as the door, and came back to his place beside the bed.

Before Mrs. Jamieson had opened her eyes a low wagonette was at the door, and when the lady became conscious and had been raised and given a stimulating draught, she was lifted again by Ferrars and Doctor Barnes and carried to the waiting vehicle, followed by Mrs. Arthur.

"Kindly take the place beside the driver, madam," directed the doctor. "My friend will go with the lady and assist her; it will be best. It is possible that she may faint again." And so they drove away, Mrs. Arthur beside Doran, the driver; and Mrs. Jamieson, still pallid and tremulous, leaning upon the supporting shoulder of Ferrars, silent and with closed eyes.

As he lifted her from the wagonette, and assisted her up the steps and within the door, however, the lady seemed to recover herself with an effort. She had crossed the threshold supported by Ferrars on the one side, and leaning upon her friend's arm upon the other, and at the door of the reception room she turned, saying faintly:

"Let me rest here first. Before we go up stairs, I mean." Then, withdrawing her hand from her friend's arm, she seemed to steady herself, and standing more erect, turned to Ferrars.

"I must not trouble you longer, now, sir. You have been most kind." Her voice faltered, she paused a moment, and then held out her hand. "I should like very much to hear the outcome," she hesitated.

"With your permission," the detective replied quickly, "I will call to ask after your welfare, and to inform you if I can." He turned to go, but she made a movement toward him.

"That poor girl," she said, "I pity her so. Do you know her well, sir?" She was quite herself now, but her voice was still weak and tremulous.

"You have not heard, I see, that she is my cousin."

"No. I would like to call upon her. Will you ask her if I may?" He nodded and she added quickly: "And call, if you please, to-morrow."

Robert Brierly told his story almost without interruption; all that he knew of his brother's life in the village; of his own, of his coming earlier than he was expected and of his firm belief that his brother had been made the victim of foul play. Possibly killed by mistake, because of some fancied resemblance; for his life, which had been like an open book to all his friends, held no secrets, no "episodes," and enemies he never had one. In short he could throw no light upon the mystery of his brother's death. Rather, his story made that death seem more mysterious than at first because of the possibilities that it rendered at least probable.

But this evidence had its effect upon a somewhat bucolic jury. That Charles Brierly had been shot by another hand than his own, had been very clearly demonstrated, for his brother would have no doubt whatever left upon this point; while he little knew how much the judicious whispers and hints uttered in the right places, and with apparent intent of confidence and secrecy, had to do with the shaping of the verdict, which was as follows:

"We, the jury, find that the deceased, Charles Brierly, died from a bullet wound, fired, according to our belief, by mistake or accident, and at the hands of some person unknown."

And now came the question of proof.

"It must be cleared up," said Robert Brierly to the detective. "I am not a rich man, Mr. Ferrars, but all that I have shall be spent at need to bring the truth to light. For I never can rest until I have learned it. It is my duty to my dead brother, father, mother—all."

And late that night, alone in his room he looked out upon the stars that hung low upon the eastern horizon and murmured—

"Ah, Ruth, Ruth, we were far enough asunder before, and now — Ah, it was well to have left you your freedom, for now the gulf is widening; it may soon, it will soon be impassable." And he sighed heavily, as a strong man sighs when the tears are very near his eyes and the pain close to his heart.

CHAPTER VII.

As was quite natural the three men, thrown so strangely and unexpectedly together at the doctor's cottage, sat up late after the inquest, and discussed the strange death of Charles Brierly, in all its bearings. As a result of this they slept somewhat late, except the detective, who let himself out of the house at sunrise, and lighting a cigar, set off for a short walk up one certain street, and down another. He walked slowly, and looked indolently absorbed in his cigar. But it was a very observant eye that noted, from under the peak of his English cap, the streets, the houses and the very few stray people whom he passed. It was not the people, though, in whom he was chiefly interested. Ferrars was intently studying the topography of the town, at least of that portion of it which he was then traversing with such seeming aimlessness.

From the doctor's cottage he had sauntered north for several blocks, crossed over, until he reached the upper or terraced street, and followed it until he had reached the southern edge of the village and was in sight of the school house not far beyond. Turning here he crossed a street or two and was nearing the house where the dead school teacher had lived, when he saw the front door of the house open, and a woman come out and hasten away in the direction in which he was moving. She hurried on like one intent upon some absorbing errand, and, knowing the house as the late home of Charles Brierly, and the woman as its mistress, Ferrars quickened his steps that he might keep her in sight, and when she turned the corner leading directly to the doctor's cottage he further increased his speed, feeling instinctively that her errand, whatever its nature, would take her there.

He was not far behind her now, and he saw the doctor standing alone upon the side porch, saw the woman enter at the side gate, and the meeting of the two.

Mrs. Fry, with her back toward him, was making excited gestures, and the face of the doctor, visible above her head, changed from a look of mild wonder to such sudden anxiety and amazement that the detective halted at the gate, hesitating, and was seen at that instant by the doctor, who beckoned him on with a look of relief.

"Look here, Ferrars," he began, and then turned to assure himself that Brierly had not arisen, and was not observing them from the office window. "Come this way a few steps," moving away from the porch and halting where the shadow of the wing hid them from view from within the main dwelling. "And now, Mrs. Fry, please tell Mr. Grant what you had begun to tell me. I want his opinion on it. He's not a bad lawyer."

"A good detective'd be the right thing, I think," declared the woman. "It's about Mr. Brierly's room, sir. He had a small bed room, and another opening out from it where he used to read and study. You know how they were, doctor!"

The doctor nodded silently.

"Well, last night, you remember, when you brought this gentleman and his brother to my place to look at the rooms. You or he decided not to go up then, but told me to close the rooms, and he would come to-morrow—to-day—that would be."

"Yes, yes!" said the doctor, impatiently, "we remember all that, Mrs. Fry."

"Well, I'd had the rooms locked ever since I heard that he was dead." Mrs. Fry was growing somewhat hazy as to her pronouns. "And I had the key in my pocket. Then, well, after a while I lit the lamp in the sittin' room so's it wouldn't seem so gloomy in the house, and went out and sat on my side stoop, and after a little while my neighbor on that side, Mrs. Robson, came acrost the lawn — there aint no fence between, ye know—and we talked for some time, and my little girl fell asleep with her head in my lap."

"Don't be too long with the story," broke in the doctor. "I don't want it to spoil Mr. Brierly's breakfast, for he needs it badly."

"Yes, sir. Well, just about that time — it must have been half past eight, I guess — and there was plenty of folks all along the street, a boy came running across the lawn and right up to me.

"'If you please,' he says, touching his hat rim, 'Mr. Brierly, down to the doctor's, forgot to get the key to his brother's room, and he sent me to get it for him.' I s'pose I was foolish. I felt hurt, thinkin' he couldn't trust me with his brother's things, an so I jest hands out the key and no questions asked."

A look of sudden alertness shot from the eyes of the detective, and he arrested the doctor's evident impatience by a quick shake of the head unperceived by the woman, who was addressing her narrative to the doctor, as was natural.

"I s'pose," she went on, "that I shouldn't a' done it, but I didn't scent anything wrong then, Mrs. Robson went home in a few minutes, and then I roused my little girl up and took her in and put her to bed. She was asleep again a'most as soon as her head touched the pillow, and the night was so pleasant-like that I threw my shawl on my shoulders and went out onto the front stoop. I felt sort o' lonesome in the house, all alone."

"Of course," commented Ferrars, seeing the dread of their criticism or displeasure that was manifest in her face as she paused and looked from one to the other. "One naturally would in your place."

"Yes, I suppose so," she went on, reassured. "Well, I hadn't been out there two minutes when that same boy came running up the walk, all out of breath, and says, sort of panting between words, 'Ma'am, the lady that lives next the engine house by the corner stooped me just now and asked me to come back here an' beg you to come down there quick! Her little boy's got himself burned awful!'"

"Ah! I see!" Ferrars spoke low, as if to himself, and his face wore the look of one who is beginning to understand the riddle. "You went, of course?"

"Yes, I went."

"Go on with the story, please. Tell it all as you have begun. Let us have the details," and he again nodded toward the doctor, who was regarding him with profound surprise, and put a finger to his lip.

"My sister-in-law lives in the house by the engine house," Mrs. Fry hurried on, "and knowing how careless she is about keepin' things in the house against such times, I ran back into my bed room and got a bottle of camphor, and a roll of cotton batt. 'Run ahead, boy,' I says to the boy, 'an' tell her I am coming; I must lock up my doors and winders.' 'She's in an awful hurry,' he says, 'cryin' fit to kill. I'll set right down here and watch your house, mam; I can do no good there.' The boy spoke so honest and Mary's boy is such a dear little fellow, that I jest lost my head complete, and ran off down the sidewalk. At the corner I looked back. The boy was sittin' on the door step, an' I heard him whistlin'; someway it made me feel quite easy. But when I got to the house and found them all in the sitting room, and Neddy not hurt at all, but sound asleep on the floor, I was so took back that I just dropped down on a chair and acted like a wild woman. Instead of rushin' back that very minute, I sat there and told how I had been tricked, and scolded about that boy, an' vowed I'd have him well punished, and so on, until Mary reminded me that I'd better get back home and see if the house was all right, or if 'twas only a boy's trick."

"It looked like one, surely," was the detective's easy comment.

"That's what Mr. Jones said. He's my neighbor. He was just going home, and we overtook him. Mary told him about the boy and he laughed and said that some boys had played that sort of trick last summer, two or three times, sending people running across the town on some such fool's errand. He thought maybe 'twas some boy that I had offended some way; and then I thought about how crisp I was about givin' the boy Mr. Brierly's key, and it made me feel sort of easier. But Mr. Jones went in with us when we got to my house. We looked all around down stairs and everything was all right. Nellie was fast asleep still, and not a thing had been disturbed. Then we went up stairs, 'just for form's sake,' Mr. Jones said, and looked in all the bed rooms and even tried Mr. Brierly's door. Everything seemed right and so Mr. Jones and Mary went away, and I went to bed. But someway I couldn't sleep sound. I felt provoked and angry about that boy, and the more I thought of him, of his being a stranger and all, the uneasier I got. Then I began to imagine I heard queer sounds, and creaking doors, and, right on the heels of all that, came a loud slam that waked Nellie, and made her skip right out of bed."

"A shutter, of course," said the doctor, as she paused for breath.

"Yes, a shutter, and I knew well that every shutter on my house was either shut tight or locked open. I look to that, every night, as soon as it's lamp-lighting time; them down stairs I shut, them up stairs I open, sometimes. I know where that slammin' shutter was by the sound, and it set me to dressing quick. I had opened the shutters on Mr. Brierly's windows that very afternoon, thinking the rooms would not seem quite so dreary and lonesome when his brother came to look through 'em, and they was locked open, I knew well! All the same, it was them shutters, or one of 'em, that was clattering then, and I knew it."

"Were you alone in the house, you and your little girl?" asked Ferrars.

"All alone, yes, sir; and I took Nellie with me and went out into the hall—"

"You mean down stairs?"

"Yes, sir. We sleep down stairs. Now, I thought I had seen that everything was right when Mr. Jones and Mary was with me, but when we went into that hall—Doctor—" turning again toward that gentleman, for she had addressed her later remarks to Ferrars,—"I guess you may remember a shelf just at the foot of the stairs. It's right behind the door, when it stands open, and that's why we hadn't seen it, or I hadn't before. Well, I always set the lamp for Mr. Brierly's room—his bed room lamp, that is—on that shelf for him every morning, as soon as it had been filled for the night's burning; and in the morning he was killed I had put it there as usual, and it had been there ever since. It was there when Mr. Brierly and you two gentlemen called, after the inquest."

A queer little sound escaped the detective's throat and again he check checked the doctor's impatience with that slight movement of the head.

"I don't call myself brave," the woman went on, "but I caught Nellie by the hand—I was carrying my bed room lamp—and ran up the stairs and straight to Mr. Brierly's door. I don't know what made me go it, but I stooped down to look through the keyhole, and there in the door, was the very key I had given to that boy to take to Mr. Brierly's brother."

"What did you do?" asked the doctor, breathlessly.

"I set down my lamp very softly, told Nellie in a whisper not to make a noise, and then very carefully tried the key. It turned in the lock. I didn't dare go in, but I locked the door, left the key in it, and went down stairs and out at the front door. I went around the house and stood under the window of that room. The side window shutter that I had fastened back was swinging loose. I went back to the sitting room, locking the front door and the doors from the hall into the front room and sitting room, taking out the key of the front door, and leaving the other keys in the locks, on my side. Then I lit the big lamp, pulled down the curtains, fixed the side door so I could open it quick, and set the big dinner bell close by it. I made Nellie lie down on the lounge with her clothes on, and there I sat until morning. Before daylight I went into the kitchen and moved about very softly to get myself a cup of coffee, and a bite of breakfast for Nellie. I had been careful not to let her see how I was scared and she went sound asleep right away. As soon as I thought you would be up I awoke my little girl, and left her sitting upon the side stoop, while I came here to you. Mr. Brierly's brother ought to be first to enter that room, and—if there was anyone there last night—they're there yet."

"What room is that which I ought to enter, Mrs. Fry?" said a voice behind them, and turning, all together, they saw Robert Brierly standing at the edge of the porch where it joined the wall of the doctor's room.

"I was afraid of this," muttered Doctor Barnes. But the detective seemed in no wise disconcerted. Neither did he seem inclined to listen, or allow Brierly to listen to a repetition of Mrs. Fry's story.

"You are here just in time, Mr. Brierly," he said, briskly. "Mrs. Fry believes that someone has paid a visit to your brother's room during the night, and as she says, you are the one who should investigate, and I think it ought to be done at once, if you feel up to it."

"I'll be with you in a moment," replied Brierly, promptly, and he went indoors by way of the French windows which had given him egress.

CHAPTER IX.

As Robert Brierly entered the house, the detective now taking the lead as a matter of course, turned toward Mrs. Fry.

"I see that you are anxious to get back home," he said to her. "And it is as well that you go back in advance of us, for people are beginning to move about. Wait for us at the side door." And then, as the woman hastened away, he turned toward the doctor. "You need not feel uneasy because of your guest, Doc.," he said, with his rare and fine smile. "There are times when the physical man is in subjection to the spiritual man, or the will power within him, if you like that better. Brierly has already endured a severe mental strain, I grant, but he's not at the end of his endurance yet. In fact, if he's the journalist, and I begin to think so, he knows how to sustain mental strain long and steadily. You don't fancy he could be persuaded to wait for meat and drink now, do you?"

"My soul, man!" exclaimed Doctor Barnes, "how you do read a man's thoughts! No! Brierly wouldn't stop for anything now. Nor you, either, for that matter. What do you make of this?"

"I can tell you better in an hour from now, I hope. Here's Brierly. Now then, gentlemen, try and look as if this was merely a morning walk. We don't want to excite the curiosity of the neighbors."

There seemed little need of this caution, for they saw no one as they crossed to the quiet street in which Mrs. Fry lived. But Ferrars, who had fallen behind the others, had an observant eye upon all within range, as if, as the doctor afterward declared, he held the very town itself under suspicion.

Mrs. Fry awaited them at the side door, and unlocked the one leading to the front hall and stairway at once.

"I hope one of you has got a pistol," she said, nervously, as they approached the stairs.

"There's no one up there, Mrs. Fry," replied Ferrars. "Never fear." But Mrs. Fry was not so positive. She closed the sitting room door, all but the merest crack, and stood ready to clap it entirely shut at the first sound of attack and defense from the room above.

Meantime Robert Brierly, who had led the way up stairs, placed a firm hand upon the key, turned it and softly opened the door. Then, for a moment, all three stood at the threshold, gazing within.

"Go inside, Brierly, quickly and quickly." He gave the shoulder under his hand a quick, light forward pressure, and instinctively, as it seemed, Brierly stepped across the threshold with the other two close at his heels, and, the moment they were inside the room, Ferrars turned and silently withdrew the key from the outer side, closed the door cautiously, and relocked it from within.

"We will do well to dispense with Mrs. Fry, at least for the present," he said coolly. "It's plain enough there has been mischief here. Mr. Brierly, you saw this room last night, for a moment."

Robert Brierly, who had dropped weakly upon a chair, stopped him with a movement of the hand.

"Mr. Ferrars," he said, "I realize the importance of a right beginning here, and if you will undertake this case—I am not a rich man, you understand—all I have is at your disposal. I could hardly bare to have my brother's rooms searched by strange hands in my absence, but will it not be wise that you should take the lead, and begin as you deem best?"

"Yes," replied the detective, "but your assistance will be helpful."

"Mrs. Fry is coming up stairs," broke in the doctor, who had been standing near the door.

Ferrars sprang across the room, turned the key, and put his head out through the smallest possible opening in the door.

"There's no one here, Mrs. Fry; and nothing missing, that we have observed. It was, no doubt, a boyish trick."

"When Mr. Brierly has had time to look about a bit he will of course report to you." And he closed the door in the good woman's astonished face. "Better make no confidants until we know what we have to confide," he said, turning back to survey the room afresh. "Now let us have more light here."

The room in which they were, was dimly lighted, for the outer blinds of its three windows had been closed, and all the light afforded them came from the one nearest the front corner, where half the shutter was swinging loosely at the will of the morning breeze. This light, however, enabled them to see that the room was in some confusion or rather, that it was not in the same neat order in which they had seen it on the previous day.

The writing desk, which later Mrs. Fry declared to have been closed, was now open, and a portion of the contents of its usually neatly arranged pigeon holes was scattered upon the leaf.

"This," said Brierly, as they approached it, "was closed when I saw it last night."

"I remember," Ferrars nodded, and sat down in the revolving chair before the desk, and without touching anything ran his eye carefully over the scattered papers examined the pigeon holes, the locks and even the fine coating of dust.

Upon a round table near the front window were some scattered books, mostly of reference, a pile of unruled manuscript tablets, and a little heap of written sheets. There was a set of bookshelves above the writing desk, and a wire rack near it was filled with newspapers and magazines.

When Ferrars had carefully noted the appearance of the desk and its contents, he swung slowly around in the swivel chair and gazed all about him without rising. He had noted the books above him with a thoughtful gaze, and he now fixed that same speculative glance upon those upon the table. Then he got up.

"Oblige me by not so much as touching this desk yet," he said, and crossed to the table. "Your brother was a magazinist, Mr. Brierly?" he queried.

"Yes," replied Brierly.

Ferrars turned toward the inner room which the others had not yet approached.

"Ah!" he exclaimed suddenly, and then, in an altered tone, "Here is Mrs. Fry's missing lamp."

His two companions came to the door of the room, where Ferrars was now looking down at the pillows of the bed.

"Brierly," asked Ferrars as they paused in the doorway, "what had your brother with him in the way of valuables, to your knowledge?"

The young man, who had been looking sharply about the room like one who seeks something which should be there, started slightly.

"Why, he had a somewhat odd and valuable watch which was given him by our father upon our setting out for Europe. It was like this," and he produced a very beautiful specimen of the watch maker's art, and held it out for inspection. "He also had a ring set with a fine opal, that was once our mother's, and a locket with her monogram. There were also some odd trifles that he had picked up abroad, saying that they would become his future wife's, no doubt."

"And you think these were still in his possession?"

"I do. In writing of Miss Grant not long ago he mentioned as a proof of her refinement and womanly delicacy that she would accept no gifts from him other than books or flowers."

"I think," said Ferrars, gravely, "that we had better have Mrs. Fry in here now, and I want you to do the talking, Brierly. Doctor, if you will ask her to come up, I'll post Mr. Brierly, meantime."

The doctor turned the key in the lock and then hesitated. "I dare say I will not be needed here longer?"

"You!" Ferrars turned upon him quickly. "Is there anything urgent outside?"

"Not especially so—only—"

"Only you fancy yourself de trop? If you can spare us the time, we want you right here, doctor. Eh, Mr. Brierly?"

"By all means."

"Then of course I am at your disposal," and the doctor went out in search of Mrs. Fry.

"I wish there were more men with his combined delicacy and good sense," grumbled Ferrars, and then he began to explain to Brierly what was wanted from Mrs. Fry.

"Mrs. Fry," he began, "will you kindly look about you, without, of course, disturbing or changing things, and tell us if you see anything that has changed? If you miss anything, or if anything, in your opinion, has been tampered with? Look through both rooms carefully, and then give us your opinion."

Mrs. Fry, who had been expecting just such a summons and who fully realized the gravity of the occasion, stood still in her place and looked slowly about her; then she began to walk about the room. Once or twice Brierly, prompted by a glance from the detective, had to warn her against putting a finger upon some object, but she went about with firmly closed lips until she had reached the little sleeping room. Then—

"Well, I declare!" she broke out. "If they haven't even been at the bed!"

Brierly started forward, but Ferrars held up a warning finger.

"And there's that lamp!" she went on, "with the chimney all smoked! Somebody's been carrying it around burning full tilt."

By this time Ferrars was so close beside Brierly that he could breathe a low word in his ear, from time to time, unnoted by the woman as she went peering about.

"You are sure the bed has been disturbed?" Brierly asked.

"Certain of it!"

"And can you guess why?"

The men started and looked at each other. "What an oversight," murmured the doctor.

"Do you mean," went on the inquiry, "that it was there yesterday morning, when you made the bed?"

"I can't say, sir. The fact is, I was awfully afraid of the thing, and when I told him I was, he put it clear under the bolster with his own hand, and said it should stay there, instead of on top, as it used to be at first."

"Yes, sir! This one. You see he had two. The one he used to practise with—the one they found—was different. This one was bigger, and not like any pistol I ever saw. He told me 'twas a foreign weapon."

"She is right," said Brierly. "My brother brought a pair of duelling pistols from Paris. They were elaborately finished. He gave me one of them." He looked anxiously toward the crushed and displaced pillows. "Shall we not look," he asked, "and find out if anything is there? Will you look, Mr. Ferrars? Or did you?"

Ferrars moved forward. "No, I did not look," he said. "But the weapon is not there; I could almost swear to it. Come—see, all of you."

With a quick light hand he removed the pillows, turned back the sheet and lifted the bolster. There was nothing beneath it, save the impression where the weapon had laid upon the mattress.

The detective turned toward Mrs. Fry. "You are sure it was here usually?" he questioned.

"I have lifted that bolster carefully every day, and have always seen it," she declared. When I wanted to turn the mattress he always took away the pistol himself."

"What else do you miss or find disturbed, Mrs. Fry?"

She went back to the outer room after the last slow glance about the chamber.

"There is the lamp, of course," she began. "That was taken from the shelf to give them light. Then the writing desk has been opened, as you see, and the things on that table have been disturbed, the books shoved about, and the papers moved. I think," going slowly toward the article, "that even the waste basket and the paper holder have been rummaged."

"And, do you miss anything here?"

Mrs. Fry shook her head. "I don't s'pose you've searched the writing desk yet?" she ventured.

"Not yet. And is that all you observe, Mrs. Fry? The bed, the lamp, the desk, table, rack and basket?"

She went back to the table and pointed out with extended forefinger a couple of burned matches, one lying on a corner of the table, one upon the floor almost beneath it.

"They lit that lamp there!" she said. "And they brought their own matches, I never use those 'parlor matches,' as they call 'em!" She bent her head to look closer at the polished surface of the table, and then walked to the open window, where the shutter still swung in the breeze. "It has been awful dusty since yesterday, seems to me, for this time of year. That boy's left his finger prints on this window, as well's on the table there."

JEALOUSY PROMPTS MURDER.

Army Officer Kills Woman For Whom He Left Wife.

New York, Sept. 19.—Miss Draga Zeigel, the 20-year-old daughter of Col. Zeigel of the Austrian army, was in Bellevue Hospital yesterday with three bullets in her body, and Julius Hoffman, a former lieutenant in the Austrian army, is under arrest, charged with shooting the girl, for whom he left his wife. Miss Zeigel is an heiress to $100,000, which was to come into her possession within a year.

Hoffman tried to end his own life, but was prevented by the girl, whom he had already fatally injured. Jealousy prompted the shooting.

Hoffman told the police that he often met the girl and was jealous of her because of the attentions of another man.

Miss Zeigel refused to identify him as the man who shot her. As Hoffman was being led away she feebly cried that she still loved him. Hoffman has confessed to the police.

DISCUSS LEMIEUX BILL.

Railway Delegates to Trade Congress Denounce It.

Winnipeg, Sept. 19.—The Lemieux bill was the principal question before the Trades Congress yesterday, some of the delegates, particularly railway men, opposed it bitterly, but the general feeling seemed to be to give it a trial.

Solicitor O'Donoghue strongly defended it as in the best interests of labor. He presented his report and in a three-hour speech reviewed the labor legislation of the year.

That congress is not through with the Oriental question is shown by the fact that a resolution was presented by Pettypiece of Victoria yesterday, calling upon the Dominion Government to take steps to shut out the Hindoos.

The question will come before congress to-day.

Mix Up In Detroit River.

Windsor, Sept. 19.—No less than five boats got in a jam at the Lime Kiln Crossing, near Amherstburg, at an early hour yesterday morning.

The Lycoming, lumber laden, took the east channel, which is not open for down-bound boats, and ran into the Isabella Boyce, up-bound and coal-laden. The latter was quite badly damaged.

Each steamer had tows, which grounded in the channel.

Two tugs are working to clear the passage.

France Will Withdraw.

Paris, Sept. 19.—If the peace negotiations at Casablanca are successful, France intends to prove her loyal respect for the terms of the Algeciras convention, by immediately repatriating the main portion of the troops, leaving only a sufficient force at Casablanca to insure, in conjunction with the Spanish troops, the policing of the city.

Four More Cardinals.

Rome, Sept. 19.—The next Papal Consistory will be held in the middle of November or the middle of December. It is not believed that any foreign cardinals will be created, but the names of four Italians have already been decided upon for elevation to the cardinalate.

Half-Drunken Man Killed.

London, Ont., Sept. 19.—An unknown stranger, in a semi-intoxicated condition, met with fatal injuries here yesterday by falling down a flight of steps in the Bank of Toronto building. He suffered concussion of the brain, and doctors say he will die.

Fatal Accident at Stratford.

Stratford, Sept. 19.—J. J. Hamilton, a G. T. R. foreman, met very sudden death yesterday afternoon in the yard of the G. T. R. shops here. While stepping on the front of slowly moving engine, he fell and the front wheels passed over him.

Not Guilty of Forgery.

Lindsay, Sept. 20.—The charge against Stephen Oliver of this town of forging a ten-dollar note was yesterday dismissed by County Magistrate Moore. Masson Campbell Co. of Berlin were the prosecutors.

Another Aeroplane Killed.

Troy, O., Sept. 20.—Edward Richards of Dayton, an aeronaut, dropped 2,000 feet to death at the Miami County Fair grounds.

Several ropes of his parachute broke.

Bishop Rooker Dead.

Rome, Sept. 20.—News has reached the Vatican of the death of Frederick Zadok Rooker, Roman Catholic bishop of Jaro, Hoilo, Philippine Islands, from paralysis of the brain.

Suicides by Drinking Acid.

Brockville, Sept. 20.—Thomas Manson committed suicide at Limerick by taking a dose of carbolic acid. Melancholy is supposed to have been the cause of his act.

Kingston Man Killed.

Montreal, Sept. 20.—A G. T. R. brakeman, who was killed in the freight pitch-in at Vaudreuil Wednesday night, was Albert Robinson of Kingston. Another man who is dying as a result of injuries is William Motor of Brockville.

Guest of Earl Grey.

Montreal, Sept. 20.—Hamar Greenwood, M. P., was in the city for two hours yesterday morning. He left in the afternoon to be the guest of the Governor-General for a day, and will sail for England to-night.

Arm Pulled Off.

Brockville, Sept. 20.—Wm. McLaughlin, a well-known Heuvelton farmer and thresher, had his arm torn off in a threshing machine belt. He will recover.

Import Canadian Cattle.

London, Sept. 20.—(C. A. P.)—Liverpool Associated Chambers of Commerce passed a resolution favoring the importation of Canadian cattle.

Parliament will resume either the third or fourth week in November.

FATHER'S LONG SEARCH.

Seeks His Children Who Were Kidnapped by Mother.

Campbellton, N. B., Sept. 20.—In a case which promises to be one of the greatest sensations ever heard in a Restigouche court, the marital troubles of W. H. Stewart, an American journalist and his wife, will be heard at Dalhousie in the near future.

The case is one in which Mr. Stewart seeks to have returned to his custody his 14-year-old daughter, Winnie, now in the care of Rev. Mr. Bate, rector of the Episcopal Church at Dalhousie.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart, who were married about 15 years ago in Ontario, lived happily during the greater part of their union, but a little over two years ago were divorced, he being granted the care of the children. The couple were then living in New York, where the husband was on the staff of a paper. Stewart went to Los Angeles and engaged in magazine writing.

One day while at his office the children were kidnapped by Mrs. Stewart. He succeeded in getting the youngest, and after a weary search located the other child in Dalhousie. The minister, however, refused to give her up and ordered Stewart from the house. The latter engaged counsel, who are now working on the case. The minister also entered a charge against Stewart for trespass.

Stewart is tired out as a result of his anxious search. He was at one time on the staff of The Montreal Star. Mrs. Stewart is a native of Toronto, where her mother lives. After kidnapping the children she took them to her mother's home for a while, and it was there the husband found the younger girl.

ATROCITIES IN KOREA.

Tokio, Sept. 20.—Roving bands of Koreans, under the leadership of former soldiers, are operating in all sections of the country, killing the Japanese police, the Japanese railroad and telegraph operators and civilians, and all Koreans suspected of friendship for the Japanese. These bands scatter in the mountains upon the approach of the Japanese troops.

Following the policy promulgated by Gen. Hasegaw, many villages are being wiped out by the Japanese troops as a punishment for some of the inhabitants joining the insurgents. Both sides are charged with atrocities. An expedition sent against the pirates at Hokdo was completely annihilated.

Treaty Signed.

Paris, Sept. 20.—(C. A. P.)—The Franco-Canadian treaty was signed yesterday at the Foreign Office by the British ambassador, Messrs. Fielding, Brodeur and Pichon; Caillaux, Doumergue and Ruan. Hon. Messrs. Brodeur and Fielding go to London this week and will sail on the Victorian for Canada.

The same secrecy observed throughout the negotiations is still maintained regarding the provisions of the Franco-Canadian treaty, which, it is intended, will not be made known until officially communicated to the Canadian Parliament. If the negotiations have been unusually protracted, it is not owing to any particular divergence of views so much as to the minute attention of the Canadian representatives to details and precautions they had taken to prevent any chance of a future misunderstanding or misinterpretation.

Both Canadian and French delegates are much pleased at the result, which is hailed as a commercial success.

Saw Mills Burn.

Quebec, Sept. 20.—News reached town Wednesday of a destructive and serious fire. The saw mills situated at Barachois, Gaspe County, and known as the Albert Mills, were totally destroyed by fire, as well as the wharf and all the buildings connected with the mills.

About five million feet of lumber also went up.

Smallpox at Oakville.

Oakville, Sept. 20.—There are five cases of smallpox in town, but all have been quarantined in a tent on the outskirts, and thanks to the prompt action of Dr. Williams, medical health officer, further cases are not expected.

The patients are an Indian, a milkman named Kelly, two children named Johnson, and a child named Holland.

Anxiety at Vatican.

Rome, Sept. 20.—Anxiety is felt at the Vatican as to the outcome of the demonstration to-day over the thirty-seventh anniversary of the fall of the temporary power of the Papacy, and the capture of Rome by the Italians.

Every year processions and demonstrations are indulged in, but on this occasion the event has taken a decidedly anti-clerical turn.

Mangled by Engine.

Brockville, Sept. 20.—While working under a crippled car at Norwood Village, John McCarthy, aged 63, a car inspector, was fatally mangled by a shifting engine striking the car beneath which he was sitting, shoving it over him and cutting off both legs. He died from shock.

Kills Wife; Commits Suicide.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 20.—Robert McDonald, 33 years old, a chemist, who recently came here from London, Eng., on Wednesday, cut the throat of his wife, Mrs. Bessie Smith McDonald, causing her almost instant death, and then drank six ounces of laudanum.

Bye-Election Dates.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—It is expected that the dates of polling in North Wellington and East Northumberland will be fixed by the arrival of the Speaker's warrant to-day at Oct. 24. London, however, desires Oct. 26 for polling day.

R. A. Graham was nominated for the Legislature by Centre Simcoe Liberals at Elmvale on Wednesday.

A charming model for tucked waist with either full-length or three-quarter sleeves as shown in the accompanying sketch. A unique feature is the extension of the centre front box plait to the lower edge of the belt; while the vandyke decoration of the wall fitting yoke is equally distinctive. The latter, while serving to secure the small tucks plaits in position, at the same time gives a becoming effect of width across the chest. The waist as shown is made of mercer brice rajah, with yoke and collar of Irish crochet; but it may also be made with equal success of any thin or draping material, including foulard, chambray, batiste or mercerized gingham, while all-over lace or embroidery laws may be employed for the yoke. To develop the medium size 2 1-2 yards of 27 inch goods will be needed.

THE LAST STROKE

BY LAWRENCE J. LYNCH

"Don't touch them!" It was Ferrars who spoke and so sharply that the woman turned suddenly, but not soon enough to note the swift gesture which directed his exclamation.

"Of course we may rely upon you to keep the fact that my brother's rooms have been entered in this manner, from everyone, for the present. It may be very important that we do not let it be known beyond the three of us. You have not seen or spoken with anyone as yet, I think you said?"

"I haven't, and I won't. I'd do more than that for the sake of your brother, Mr. Brierly, and you've only to tell me what I can do."

"I intend to examine my brother's papers now, Mrs. Fry, before I leave this house, and if we should need you again we will let you know." And Mrs. Fry withdrew, puzzled and wondering much, but with her lips tightened over the secret she must and would help to preserve.

"She'll keep silent, never fear," said the doctor as the door closed behind her. "And now, Brierly, I must remind you that you will need all your strength, and that I don't like your color this morning. If you must investigate at once, get it over, for you, even more than Ferrars or I, need your morning coffee and steak."

"That is true," agreed Ferrars. "Brierly, let me ask two questions and then resign me by leaving certain papers, which I will point out to you, just as you find them."

"Fire away, gentlemen." Brierly had already seated himself before his brother's desk.

"I have an idea that this old oak [illegible] was not selected by [illegible], Mrs. Fry. Am I right?"

"It is my brother's desk; bought [illegible] compact and portable quali-

"Look for them. And, before you begin, oblige me by not touching that letter file above the desk, nor the desk top just below it."

The latter held only a few bits of paper, apparently notes and memoranda; and upon the flat of the desk was a bronze ink well, a pen tray, a thin layer of dust and nothing more, except a tiny scrap of paper hardly as big as a thumb nail, which lay directly beneath the letter file. Briefly cast a wandering glance over the desk top and file and set about his task.

There was quite a litter of papers, letters mostly, together with some loose sheets that contained figures, dates, or something begun and cast aside. Below some of the pigeon holes, letters lay as if hastily pulled out, and from one of these little receptacles three or four envelopes protruded, half out, half in—one, a square white envelope, projecting beyond the others. These, Brierly pulled forth, and turning them over in his hand, scrutinized their superscriptions. Then, slowly, he took the square, white wrapper from among the others and drew out the letter it contained. As she began to scan the page of closely lined writing he started, frowned, flushed hotly, and then with a look of fierce anger he thrust the sheet back into its envelope, and turned toward the detective.

"Take that!" he said with a curl of the lip. "Unless I am greatly at fault, it's a document in the case."

Ferrars took the letter from him, and asked, as he thrust it into the pocket of his loose coat without so much as glancing at it, "Do you mind my running over the papers in this rack, Brierly? and looking into the waste basket?"

"Do it, by all means," was the reply as Brierly pulled open the topmost drawer; and then for some time there was silence, save for the rustling of paper or the rasping of a hinge or turning knob.

When Brierly had finished his silent search of the two drawers, he approached the detective with a small lacquered box in his hand.

"The watch and the foreign jewels are gone," he said, holding out the open box. "And what do you think of this? Here are my mother's keepsakes, wrapped in tissue paper, and labelled in my mother's hand, 'Mementos. From my mother.' The thief has spared these."

The detective, who was now seated beside the table, holding a folded newspaper in his hand, took the box, looked at the tiny packet within, nodded and passed it silently to the doctor.

"And now," went on Robert Brierly, and there was a new ring of resolution and menace in his voice. "I turn the rooms and all they contain, over to you, Mr. Ferrars, and I await your opinion, when you have read that letter in your pocket."

Ferrars drew forth the envelope and looked at it for the first time. It was only a fragment, for a large corner of its face was missing, the corner, in fact, which should have borne the postage stamp and the postmaster's seal.

Without a word he held this side toward the two men, extending it first to one, and then to the other.

"You see!" he said, and then to Brierly. "Was it your brother's habit to tear his letters open in such a reckless manner?"

"No. He was almost dainty in all his ways."

"Is there another letter in that desk torn as this is?"

Without a word Brierly took the letter and went back to the desk, catching the letters from their pigeon holes by the handful.

"I understand," he said, when he came back to them. "No, there is not a torn envelope there."

"Then," said the detective, "I think I may venture to give an opinion even before I look at this letter."

CHAPTER X.

The three men were now standing grouped about the table with its scattered books and manuscripts, and Ferrars bent toward Robert Brierly, putting a hand upon his shoulder.

"Brierly," he said, "sit down; this thing is using up your strength. I will tell you what I think of all this, and then we must lock up this place for a little while just as it is." And as Brierly obediently dropped into the chair which the doctor quickly placed beside him, the detective resumed.

"Since yesterday, half a dozen theories have suggested themselves to my mind as possible explanations of this very daring murder, for I am now fully convinced that it is nothing less; but I make it a rule never to accept, much less announce a belief until I have established at least a reasonable series of corroborative circumstances. This I have not done entirely to my satisfaction, and so we will not go into the theory of the case, but will see what facts we have established; and fact number one, to my mind is this: Your brother, Mr. Brierly, was most certainly shot down with malice aforethought. He could not have shot himself, and no one, in that open place, could have killed him by accident. He may have been entirely unaware of it, but he had an enemy; and the deed of yesterday was planned, I believe, long ago, and studied carefully in every detail."

Robert Brierly flushed and paled. He opened his lips as if to speak but the detective's eyes were steadfastly turned away, and he resumed almost at once.

"I blame myself that I did not establish myself here last night, as I at first thought of doing. But it is too late for useless regret. And now, about this boy, Have you, either of you, a thought, a suspicion, as to his identity?"

The doctor shook his head.

"You can't suspect one of the men [illegible] ously hazarded Brierly.

Chain Taken From the Fan

Theft Committed by the Scrubwoman at a Local Hotel

The other day Mrs. Wm. Duncan, Sherbrooke street, who has been acting as scrub woman at a local hotel, espied a fan with a gold chain attached while working at the hotel, and as she took a fancy to the chain, she appropriated it for her own purposes. However, the police had their suspicions, and Saturday night P.C. Meharry, armed with a search warrant, visited the residence of Mrs. Duncan, and succeeded in getting back the chain, which is the property of one of the boarders of the hotel, from which it was taken.

Mrs. Duncan will probably be brought to court to answer to the charge of theft.

The Duncan family have given the police trouble on a former occasion, when Wm. Duncan, the husband of the woman who stole the chain, assaulted Mr. George Cochrane, when the latter went to the house to remove one of the children to the Children's Shelter. Duncan was arrested by P.C. Meharry subsequent to the assault and given a month in gaol by Magistrate Dumble.

Must be Seated To-night at 8.15

Patrons attending tonight's attraction "Little Dolly Dimples," at the Grand Opera House, will please be in their seats by 8.15, at which time the curtain goes up. Those coming in after this time will not be shown their seats until after first act. This also applies to all succeeding attractions. This management consider that it is not fair to interfere in any way with the enjoyment of the play by those who get there in time. It is as easy to be a few minutes early, as a few minutes late.

SOME MONEY BEEN GIVEN

In Aid of Mrs. Andrews Who is Sick and Destitute

"Well, the article in the Review on Saturday in connection with the unfortunate case of Mrs. Andrews was quite timely," said Mr. Finch Miller, City Relief Officer, this morning. He stated that some generous persons, who sympathized with the unfortunate woman in her sad position, had left some money for her assistance.

Reference at some length was made to Mrs. Andrews' sad plight in Saturday's issue of the Review. She comes originally from these parts, and being deserted by her husband, returned here from the State of Dakota, where she had been living. She is suffering from a serious disease, has no money and no friends, and her two year old babe has been taken in charge by a local charitable institution. Anybody wishing to aid her may leave subscriptions at this office, or with Mr. Miller, City Relief Officer, Water street, opposite the police station.

and made the recipients of handsome gifts, accompanied by the following address.—

To Mr. and Mrs. Chas. McGee and Master Willie,—

Mr. Chas. McGee, late of Springbrook, has purchased a residence in Peterborough, and is now residing in this city. Before leaving Springbrook Mr. and Mrs. McGee were waited upon by a number of their neighbors.

Dear Friends,—We, a few of your friends and neighbors, have gathered here onight to spend a social evening with you, and to bid goodbye before you leave us to take up your residence in Peterborough. We regret very much the loss our neighborhood will sustain by your removal from us, and we wish to express our appreciation of the many worthy qualities which you possess.

You are seeking for yourself a permanent residence in Peterborough, and we hope and trust that your life may be filled with the sunshine of prosperity, and that by industry, good honesty, and by your many sterling qualities, you may be enabled to take a noble part in the building up of your new home.

We would ask Mrs. McGee to accept this rocker, Mr. McGee this chair, and Master Willie, this Bible, as a slight token of our friendship and esteem for you, and we wish to assure you, that as you go from us you take with you, our best wishes for your good health and prosperity in your new home.

Signed on behalf of your friends,

MRS. C. H. BOARDMAN,

MRS. D. W. ROSLIN.

Mr. McGee's residence is at 499 Downie st., and he purchased it from Mr. Coleman Bidwell, the well-known real estate dealer.

J. C. Turnbull Company Secure More Room on Simcoe St.

It is learned on good authority that the J. C. Turnbull Company have secured the premises on Simcoe street, now occupied by Adamson and Dobbin, and will incorporate this stand with their store, just as soon as Adamson and Dobbin move out. The latter firm's new stand in the block across the street will be ready to be occupied in a few weeks and the Turnbull Co. will then take over the hardware firm's premises.

This speaks well for the progressive management of the Turnbull Co., and is an evidence of their constantly increasing business. More room is needed and it has been secured.

Man and Woman Perish in Disastrous Fire on Board.

"Picton" Completely Gutted—Loss of Vessel and Cargo Very Heavy—Sudden Outbreak Results in Death of Passenger and One of the Crew—The Fire Spread With Fearful Rapidity.

Toronto, Sept. 23.—Fire broke out on board the steamer Picton while lying at her wharf on Saturday afternoon, in which two persons lost their lives and many others had narrow escapes. The victims were a young woman named Winnie Hatch, fiancee of the ship's cook, and a deckhand, George Kleskie.

Fire Spread Rapidly.

No one knows what caused the fire, but all remark on its rapid spread. A quantity of paint and oil was in the cargo.

"It looked just like a lantern in the engine-room at first," said George Kemp, one of the crew, "but before you could say Jack Robinson the whole place was in flames. I started for the stairways, but some one said that all on the upper deck had gotten off. A little girl came running along and I told her to get on the wharf. I tried then to get to my bunk, but couldn't get near it."

Another said that he left the boat aft and ran along the dock to the forward gangplank, but the smoke was so bad he couldn't get on board.

The Picton carried four lifeboats, each with a capacity of fifteen. There was also a good supply of fire hose on board, but when it was run out for use the machinery could not be reached to set the pumps going.

Firemen Worked Well.

The firemen were on the spot and at work in very quick time, but they were badly hampered as they could only reach the blaze to advantage from the one side. Ladders were run to the upper decks and hose carried on board and into the heart of the blaze. In 30 minutes the fire was well under control.

The fireboat was also soon to arrive, and threw two light but effective streams from astern. Employes of the Toronto Electric Light Co., under George Beare, were the first to throw water on the burning vessel from the small 1 1-2-inch hose used in the boiler-rooms, the pumps being run up to 120 pounds pressure. Only for their prompt measures, the fire would likely have spread into the boiler-rooms. The window frames are badly charred, and so is the packing around some of the machinery. The smoke filled the rooms and the men had a hard task.

Loss is Heavy.

The fire completely gutted the steamer, which, yesterday, resting on the bottom and tilted to one side, presented an appearance of almost complete ruin. Although the forward exterior shows no sign of fire, the interior is gone. The fire was evidently fiercest around the engine and boiler rooms.

The Picton, or the Comican, as it was known until two years ago, when it was refitted throughout—has sailed the lakes about 30 years. She is 140 feet long and 40 feet beam and carried passengers and freight. On Saturday she arrived in the harbor about 7 a. m., and was to have left for Hamilton at 4.30 p. m. A heavy general cargo had just been loaded on board, when the fire occurred. The vessel is rated at $50,000, with insurance of $40,000. The crew numbered about 30. Just what the loss will be can hardly be determined for a few days. The cargo, it is estimated, was worth from $30,000 to $50,000.

During the last few years the Picton has several times been in danger of destruction by fire through the outbreak of flames, but in these previous instances the threatened conflagrations were nipped in the bud before any material damage was done.

Watchman's Escape.

The night watchman, W. Taylor, who had been asleep in the forecastle, had to plunge overboard. He would have been drowned had not employes of the Electric Light Co. luckily noticed him. He was then face down in the water. A plank was shoved to him through a hole in the wall, and this he grasped. He did not say a word when rescued.

Capt. Redfern saved two women from death, finding them lying in a faint in their cabins. His own face is badly scorched and his eyebrows and hair singed. The steward, P. Oswald, found a boy huddled on the floor in the hold and carried him to safety.

According to one of the deck hands, Kleskie probably sacrificed his life for others. Kleskie had been aft, and when the alarm was given of fire, it is believed he ran forward and down into the hold to warn two other firemen there. They hurried to the stairway and escaped, believing that Kleskie was with them. It was not until George Linstead, a deckhand, was going to recover his belongings before the ship went down, that Kleskie was found. He was lying at the foot of the stairs, dead from suffocation. A heavy bruise across the forehead would indicate that he had been overcome and fallen heavily. A portion of his face and his hands alone showed signs of burning. Kleskie was a German, about 40 years of age, and shipped at Montreal. He had been ill the day before and a deckhand had voluntarily done his work.

Perished In Agony.

Miss Hatch must have perished in terrible agony, being burned beyond recognition. In one hand was clenched a hair comb and in the other her purse.

She had been seen on the upper deck near her stateroom in conversation with an elderly woman a few minutes before the fire was noticed.

Capt. Redfern did rescue Miss Hatch's companion, but she had entered her cabin and evidently could not be reached. That she became terrified and swooned is probable, as no one heard any screaming, while it would also have been an easy matter for her to have climbed over the railing to seek refuge in the water.

James McMillan, the chief cook, was engaged to be married to Miss Hatch, and is terribly wrought up. He would not be convinced that she was dead until, with a friend, he visited the morgue at 9 o'clock Saturday night and identified some of her jewelry. Miss Hatch was a pretty girl of 19 and had been making the round trip from Montreal.

GRAND STAND WRECKED.

Pottsville, Pa., Sept. 23.—A windstorm of cyclonic force, accompanied by sharp lightning, visited part of Schuylkill County late Saturday with the result that four persons were fatally injured, seven were seriously hurt, and a half hundred others were wounded by the falling of a grand stand at Heggins, near here.

The accident happened at the county fair of the Heggins Grange during a baseball game. The grand stand was packed to its capacity. During the game rain started to fall, and many of the spectators sought shelter under the stand. Soon a funnel-shaped cloud was seen coming from the west, traveling with great velocity. The whirling wind struck the stand and crushed it.

More than a hundred persons were beneath the stand, and when rescuers reached them, it was found that more than half of them had been injured. A dozen physicians were summoned, and they attended the injured at farm houses nearby. The grand stand was completely wrecked.

DRANK POISON IN ERROR.

Doctor and Friend Thought Strychnine Was Liquor.

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 23.—Dr. J. L. Peppard and Samuel L. Lindsay, well-known citizens of Great Village, N. S., are dead, as the result of accidental poisoning late Friday afternoon.

Dr. Peppard and Lindsay were working, harvesting oats on the former's farm near the village. Becoming thirsty, both men repaired to the doctor's surgery for a refreshing drink.

There were two bottle alike in every respect, with contents the same in color on the surgery shelf. One was harmless, the other contained strychnine. Both men drank freely of the solution made from the strychnine bottle.

The doctor died shortly after they drunk the mixture, and Lindsay died Saturday morning.

MEDICAL STUDENT'S SAD END.

Found Dead In Stateroom of Steamer Midland.

Owen Sound, Sept. 23.—Lying dead in his stateroom on the steamer City of Midland, the body of Bert Herriman, a medical student of the University of Toronto, was found yesterday by a relative, Mr. Heber Stephens, who had come to greet him.

Herriman is the son of Dr. Herriman of Lindsay and was temporarily engaged in mill work on Manitoulin Island. He contracted typhoid and friends here were wired that he was coming down to the hospital. He had collapsed in the stateroom. Dr. Murray was called, but could only attest to death. The body will be sent to Lindsay.

Majestic's Rough Passage.

Port Arthur, Sept. 23.—The steamer Majestic of the Northern Navigation Co. narrowly escaped being wrecked on Lake Superior, near Keenaw Point, Saturday night. She encountered strong westerly gales. Her steering gear partly parted, and for four hours she was at the mercy of the waves.

Water dashed over her, and Capt. Wright came near being washed overboard by the waves. In the engine-house, where a quantity of freight had been piled, all was confusion.

The cargo, consisting mostly of molasses, was thrown around everywhere. The chief engineer was struck on the head with a box and was injured.

The passengers were all in readiness to take the lifeboats at a moment's notice.

Alfonso at Manoeuvres.

San Sebastian, Spain, Sept. 23—King Alfonso, accompanied by his staff, left this city on Saturday for Galicia, where His Majesty will attend the Spanish army manoeuvres. Queen Victoria in the meantime remaining at La Granja Palace.

Later the Spanish sovereigns will visit Emperor Francis Joseph and King Edward, stopping for a week in Paris, incognito, while on their way from Vienna to England.

Traction Engine Overturns.

Port Hope, Sept. 23.—A bad accident occurred at Sandy Gully, just north of Canton. A traction in charge of Frank Thickson was going down the hill when, in some unaccountable manner, it overturned, taking the team of horses, which was attached, over the embankment.

The machine was broken to scraps, one of the horses scalded to death, and the other so badly injured that it is likely to die.

WOULD ANNEX UNGAVA.

Montreal, Sept. 23.—Premier Gouin of this province announced at a political meeting at Longueuil yesterday afternoon that his new program included a demand for the annexation to Quebec Province of the whole immense territory of Ungava, which would make this by far the largest province of the Dominion.

Premier Gouin pointed out that the territory of Ungava was entirely separated from all the other provinces by great inland seas, and offered no advantages to any of them except Quebec, so there could be no objection to its annexation. This province, he contended, was in a better position than the Ottawa Government to administer the district of Ungava.

The meeting was a very large one, fully six thousand people attending it, and the Ungava announcement was loudly cheered.

CHORD WAS AT FAULT

Experts Think Quebec Bridge Disaster Due to This Defect.

Anchor Arm Was Unsafe — Pillars Also Badly Damaged — Although Rivetting Was Good — No Danger Suspected—Telegram Sent Was Not Acted Upon—Unique Monument of Steel to Be Erected.

Quebec, Sept. 23.—Saturday's evidence before the Royal Commission investigating the Quebec bridge collapse is important as indicating that some bridge experts at all events attribute the disaster to the deflection in chord No. 9 of the anchor arm.

Mr. Hoare, the chief engineer of the Quebec Bridge Co., gave it as his opinion, when pressed by the commission, that the disaster was due to this defect, although he hesitated at first to hazard the opinion, because his investigation on the site had not enable him to definitely ascertain the cause.

The vertical pillars might either of them have given way, though it was his opinion that No. 9 chord was at fault. These pillars either collapsed first or received the worst treatment in the fall, for there was evidence of almost complete destruction of the main post and bottom chords.

Rivetting Was Good.

On the other hand there was nothing in the tension braces or general connections to indicate the cause of the disaster, and the rivetting, with a few exceptions, was still good.

Mr. Hoare was instructed to prepare plans of the present condition of the chief members of the bridge for the commission.

Mr. Cooper, consulting engineer of the Bridge Co., apparently shares Mr. Hoare's opinion as to the primary cause of the disaster, though he will only be examined when the commissioners reach New York the week after next.

Interviews Before the Collapse.

Mr. McLure, who went to New York the day before the collapse to consult Mr. Cooper as to the defect in chord No. 9, told on Saturday of his interviews with him both before and after the accident. When he asked Mr. Cooper if he thought it safe to add any more material to the structure, the engineer showed him a telegram he was sending to Phoenixville, telling them to add no more at present. While at Phoenixville that day he heard of the collapse.

It Was That Chord.

Returning via New York, he saw Mr. Cooper again. The latter was not in as communicative a mood, but said: "Well, it is that chord"—meaning No. 9. Witness said he had not considered there was any danger in moving the small traveler farther out. What he feared was not the collapse of the structure but the difficulty of making repairs if necessary, after the stress was increased. No one had any idea of danger to the bridge, and no drastic measure were resorted to. Mr. Morse himself was out on the bridge only a few hours before the collapse.

It is proposed to erect a unique monument over the common grave of several of the victims of the disaster in St. Romuald cemetery. It is to be composed of a mass of the steel wreckage of the bridge, plans for the arrangement of which have been made by a member of the Hardy family, which furnished four of the victims.

The Last Stroke.

BY LAWRENCE L. LYNCH,

Author of "A Woman's Crime," "John Arthur's Ward," "The Diamond Coterie," "Against Odds," Etc.

"Be sure that Mrs. Fry knows every pupil in Glenville, by sight, at least; and this lad was a stranger, remember. It was a clever lad who first secured the key to these rooms and then decoyed Mrs. Fry half way across the town perhaps. How long must it have taken her, Doc, to go and come, in haste?"

"Quite half an hour, I should think."

"Well, we will assure ourselves of that later. Now we will suppose that this strange boy was acquainted with these rooms to some extent, and that he was, I fully believe. When Mrs. Fry is out of sight, and we know, from her story, that he was careful that she should be before he left his station upon the front porch—he slips indoors and evidently knows where to look for a lamp, which he does not light until he is inside this room." And Ferrars put a finger upon the match remarked upon by Mrs. Fry. "Now, as Mrs. Fry observed, there has been quite a film of dust in the air for the past twenty-four hours, so that, in spite of the good woman's tidy ways, it has accumulated upon this dark and shining wood." And he put down his finger and called their attention to its prints upon the table at his side.

"When we entered this room," he went on, "and I took it upon myself to look at that window, with the swinging blind, under pretense of opening the shutters, I first noted that the visitor had left us a clue to his identity; several clues, indeed. Before seeing these, I had thought that the boy was only an advance guard for some one else, but I see I was wrong. It was the boy, and a very keen and clever boy, who entered here alone. See upon this table, upon the window sills, and upon the desk, the prints of one, two and sometimes all four, small slender fingers."

Ferrars paused a moment, while Brierly examined the dust prints, faint but yet clear, upon the dark wood, and making lines of clearer color upon the painted brown of the window sills.

"And what?" asked Brierly, speaking for the first time since the detective began his explanation, "what was his real object?"

"His real object! Ah, I see you have been observant, and if I am not much mistaken, he has left something; but the things he took were taken solely to cover up the real reason of his coming. Mr. Charles Brierly's pistol, his watch and the foreign bijouterie were so little wanted by this remarkable boy that he will no doubt get rid of them in some way at the first opportunity. All but one thing."

Ferrars walked over to the writing desk and signed them to follow. "Observe that letter file!" he said. "There is not much upon its bills for school books, two or three circulars, and so on, but observe that this file hangs over the top of the desk so that anything falling from it would touch just here." He moistened the tip of a forefinger, and touching with it a small bit of paper, lying upon the top of the desk, and just below the letter file, he lifted it deftly, and they all saw beneath it the dust of the previous day upon the polished surface.

"This," said Ferrars, holding out the bit of paper upon the palm of his hand, "was torn from something pulled from this file since Mrs. Fry dusted the furniture here yesterday morning, after Charles Brierly left the house. See, as the paper was pulled from the file this bit came off, because it was attached at the corner, as you see. It is a fragment from a newspaper. If it had been a letter the paper would not have parted so readily; it would merely have torn through."

It was, indeed, a tiny scrap of newspaper, not of the best quality, and not half an inch from the smoothly-cut corner to the ragged edge, where the file had perforated it.

"The slip of printed paper from which this was torn," said Ferrars, "was the one thing which was taken from this room because it was wanted! The rest were merely carried away as a blind."

"But," asked the doctor, "why did he make this search among the books and papers?"

"To find perhaps this very thing," replied Ferrars. "But his first and most important errand was this." He drew forth the letter given into his hands by Robert Brierly, and held it toward them. "Witness the thing itself. It bears no post-mark, it never did bear one, and it is thrust into the most conspicuous place, doubtless, after some looking about, in search of a better. I do not know its contents but I guess."

A gesture from Brierly cut short his speech. "Read it, both of you," he said, with something like a groan. "And tell me what it means."

Ferrars drew forth the sheet of note paper and slowly unfolded it. For a moment he scrutinized the page with a frown, and then began to read—

"Mr. Charles Brierly: I don't know why I should be drawn into your love affair any further, and I have said my last word about your friend, Miss G—. One would think that the proofs you have already had would be more enough. She is not the first woman, with a pretty face and an innocent way, who has fooled and tricked a man. Why don't you ask her and have it out? You'll find she can scratch as well as the rest of her sex. One word more, when you have had it out with her, beware! Especially if she weeps and forgives you. Remember the 'woman scorned.'

"Don't write me again. I shall not answer any more questions. And, remember your promise, don't let her dream that you ever heard of me. I shall feel safer. So good-bye and good luck. Yours, J.B."

Ferrars folded up this strange letter slowly, saying:

"This document has no date and no postoffice address." He held it in his hand for a moment in silence, looking at it thoughtfully, then. "I should like to retain this," he said, looking at Brierly, "as one of the documents in the case." And as Brierly silently bowed his assent, he added: "Have you found an opinion concerning this letter?"

"I believe it is a shameful trick," declared Robert Brierly, hotly. "An attempt on the part of some person or persons to injure Miss Grant, who stands to me as a sister henceforth. If I am any judge of womankind, she is as good as she is lovely, and I believe that she mourns my brother's awful death as only a good, true and loving woman can. I wish you could and would say the same, Mr. Ferrars."

"I can say that you have said the only right and manly thing, in my opinion. You don't want to know what I think, however, but what can be done? And, first, this affair must be kept between ourselves. This letter makes it all the more important. If it had been put here to mislead justice and to make trouble, perfect silence regarding it will be the most baffling and perplexing course we can pursue. And it may lead to some further manifestation. The word must go out at once that Mr. Brierly has desired these rooms closed for the present, with everything to remain untouched. Meantime I consider that we have got our hands upon some strong clues, if we can find the way to develop them aright. Don't ask me anything more now, gentlemen. I want time to study over this morning's discoveries, and, Mr. Brierly, it is time you breakfasted."

At this moment there came a quick tap at the door, and Mrs. Fry's voice was heard without. At a signal from Ferrars, Doctor Barnes opened the door.

"Gentlemen," began the little woman in eager explanation, "I don't want to interrupt."

"We are just going," said the doctor, politely.

"Oh, well, I got to thinking, after I went down stairs, and it came into my mind that I didn't see Miss Grant's picture on the top of the writing desk up here. Mr. Brierly had had it three weeks or so, and he showed it to me himself and says, 'Mrs. Fry, this picture is in its proper place here in my room. You and Nellie both know and love Miss Grant and I may tell you that she is to be my wife some day, God willing.'" The woman's voice broke at the last word, and Robert Brierly made a quick stride back toward the desk. But Ferrars said, unconcernedly, "Thank you, Mrs. Fry; we shall find it in the desk, I fancy," and then he explained to her Mr. Brierly's desire that the rooms remain closed to all curious visitors until further notice, adding that they would close the outside blinds, and be down stairs directly; then shutting the door upon the woman's retreating form, and softly turning the key in the lock again, Ferrars went to the desk, and catching back Brierly's extended hand, said, "Wait!"

He came closer to the desk and bent to scan at the top shelf.

"Look," he said after a moment, "do you see that line, close to the back, where the dust is not quite so apparent? The picture has been taken from there." He took hold of the back and pulled the desk from the wall a few inches.

"Ah," he exclaimed, "I thought so!" and dropping upon one knee he drew out two pieces of card board. "I thought so," he repeated, as he arose, and there was a steely gleam in his eyes as he held out to view the two halves of a fine picture of Hilda Grant, torn across the middle as if by a firm and vindictive hand. "This helps me," he said, with a touch of triumph in his voice. "It helps me more than all the rest."

He made a movement as if to put the picture together with the letter which he had put down upon the desktop, into a capacious inner pocket, and then suddenly withdrew his hand and bestowed them elsewhere, for, thrust into that safe side pocket, so convenient and capacious, was a folded newspaper, from which a "clipping" had been carefully cut, a paper which he had found in the rack, near the desk, and had secreted as he thought, unseen, at his earliest opportunity.

CHAPTER XI.

During the day that followed the discoveries in Mrs. Fry's upper chamber, Mr. Ferrars did a variety of things that surprised the brother of Charles Brierly; yes, and the doctor as well, and he said some things that seemed quite incomprehensible. For the detective was somewhat given to half uttered soliloquy when he knew himself among "safe" people, and could therefore afford to relax his guard. Likewise he failed to say the things which Brierly, at least, expected, and much desired to hear.

His first movement after the three had breakfasted was to ask for the keys of the cottage chambers, for they had been handed over to Brierly somewhat ostentatiously in the presence of Mrs. Fry and at the foot of the cottage stairs, by the doctor.

"I want to spend another half hour in those rooms," he said, "and to so leave them that I shall know at once if a human foot has so much as crossed the threshold."

This was all the explanation he chose to make then or upon his return.

Indeed, when he came back he spent all of the remaining time until high noon, smoking alone upon the doctor's neat lawn and along the shady side of the house, excusing himself and guarding against possible intrusion, by remarking that he felt the need of a little solitary communion.

At luncheon the question of the burial was discussed, and afterward Brierly announced his intentions to call upon Miss Grant, if the doctor thought her able to receive him.

"I have told Mrs. Marcy to keep the gossips out," Doctor Barnes said gravely, "she's too sensitive. Miss Grant I mean, to hear unfeeling or curious discussions of the case. But a friend who is in sympathy—that's another thing. She'll be better with such company than alone."

"Were you called to see the little lady who was taken ill here yesterday, after the close of the inquest?" he asked carelessly. "I forgot to inquire, in my desire to keep Brierly occupied."

The doctor shook his head. "I fancy she only needed time to recover from the effect of her gruesome position. It was a blunder, putting her in plain sight of that shrouded corpse. Those little blue eyed women are a mass of nerves and fine sensibilities — often. I don't see how it came about."

"If you mean the 'blunder' of putting those ladies where they were, it was I who blundered. I arranged to place them there."

"You!" the doctor's eyes opened wide in astonishment. "Then I retract. It was I who have blundered."

"Um—I am not so sure," Ferrars replied slowly and then the subject as by mutual consent was ignored between them. Ferrars, who seemed for the time at least to have done his thinking, wrote several letters at the doctor's desk, and then prepared to go out.

"I asked permission to call and inquire after Mrs. Jamieson's health, yesterday," he said to the doctor, "and as she has not required your services she may be able to receive me now."

"There is another Esculapius in Glenville," reminded Dr. Barnes.

"So I have heard; but the lady is a person of good taste. She would have called you in if anyone." He bowed and went out with a gleam of humor in his eyes.

"It's sometimes hard to guess what Ferrars means when he speaks with that queer look and tone," mused the doctor. "And who would have thought he would care or think of a formal call like this just now! And yet, that little woman is pretty enough to attract a man, I'm sure; and a detective may be as susceptible, I suppose, as another."

Ferrars waited for a few moments in the reception room of the Glenville house, and was then conducted to the pretty suite occupied by Mrs. Jamieson. He found her half reclining in a long, low chair, with her friend, Mrs. Arthur, still in attendance. She wore a soft, loose robe of black, with billowy gauze-like ruffles, and floating ribbons of the same sable hue, relieved only by a knot of purple wood violets at her throat. Her face was very pale and her eyes, with their changing lights of grayish green and glinting blue, looking larger and deeper than usual because of the dark shadows beneath them, and the waves of her plentiful fair hair falling low and loose upon her forehead.

She welcomed her visitor with a faint half smile, and thanked him again for his kindness of the previous day. She blamed herself for her want of nerve and courage. She inquired after Miss Grant and expressed her sympathy for the bereaved girl, and her desire to see her again, to know her, and serve her if possible; she had shown herself so brave, yet so womanly that day—And then the little lady told of her encounter with Miss Grant in the unfortunate character of messenger or bearer of bad news. She was glad there would be no lack of staunch friends to support the sweet girl in her time of need and trouble, and she finished by sending a message to Hilda, and then without further question or comment concerning the murder or the progress of the case, she let the talk slip into the hands of her friend and leaned back in her chair like one too weak for further effort, seeing which Ferrars soon withdrew.

"You will not consider this an example of my usual hospitality, I trust," Mrs. Jamieson said, as he bent over her chair to say farewell. "I fear I was not wise in refusing to let them call a physician, but I do dread being in the hands of a doctor. I shall be pleased to hear how this sad case progresses, Mr. Grant, and by the by, has anything new occurred since the inquest? Any new witnesses or discoveries of any sort?"

But Ferrars shook his head and murmuring something about time being short, and not taxing her good nature and strength further, he bowed low and went away.

"It's very good of her," he mused, as he went, "to take such kindly interest in my supposed relative, Miss Grant. But she certainly showed scant interest in the chief actor in the drama, my friend Brierly."

The candles had just been lighted that evening, and Ferrars was once more waiting at the doctor's desk, while Brierly, pale and heavy-eyed, lounged by the long window near, when Doctor Barnes came in, hat in hand.

"As you felt some interest in Mrs. Jamieson's selection of a physician this morning," the latter said, "I will inform you that I have just been summoned to see that lady, professionally, of course," he added, as if by an afterthought and smiling slightly.

"Thank you. Mrs. Jamieson has vindicated my belief in her good judgment," replied Ferrars, and then he wheeled about in his chair, and put out a detaining hand.

"Don't think I doubt your reserve, doctor," he went on "when I ask you to avoid or evade, if needful, any discussion of this affair of ours. That is, avoid giving any information, be it ever so trivial." He shot a quick glance toward Brierly, and met the doctor's eye for one swift momentary glance.

"My visit will be purely professional, and doubtless brief," was the reply, as the speaker passed from the room, and Ferrars smiled, knowing that his friend understood the meaning behind the half jesting words.

"This inaction is horrible," he said, drearily. "I must get out. I wish I had walked down with Barnes. Won't you come out with me, Mr. Ferrars?"

The detective dipped his pen in the sand box and arose quickly. Then when he had found his hat, and had lowered the light over the writing table, he put a hand upon the other's shoulder.

"I'll go out with you, of course, Brierly," he said, and there was a world of sympathy, as well as complete understanding in his tone. "But first, I want to ask you to show yourself as little as possible upon the streets, for a few days to come at least, and then only in the company of the doctor or myself, and not go out evenings at all, unless similarly attended. It will be irksome, I know, but I believe it important, and I must ask this of you, too, without explanation, for the present at least."

The young man looked at him for a moment, earnestly and in silence.

"Do you ask this for reasons personal to myself, or because it seems to you to be for the interest of the investigation?" he asked slowly.

Ferrars smiled. "You're as able to take care of yourself as any man I know, Brierly," he said, with frank conviction. "It's for the interest of the case that we — and especially you, — keep ourselves as much aloof as possible from questions and curiosity. There is another reason which I cannot give just yet."

"As you will. I have put myself and my brother's vindication in your hands, Mr. Ferrars, and I shall do nothing, be sure, to hinder your progress." As they passed out Brierly paused under the shadow of the porch. "May I ask if you have put the same embargo upon Miss Grant?" he questioned.

"I have, yes. Glenville must know what we wish it to know, and not a syllable more."

FORTY HOURS AT ENNISMORE

Special Devotions Brought to a Close on Friday

The very successful forty hours devotion in Ennismore was brought to a close on Friday morning, when the reverend pastor, Father Fitzpatrick, expressed his sincere thanks to his congregation. All the services were well attended, and the numbers for confession and confession were a source of satisfaction to him. He particularly exhorted his people to persevere in goodness after such a good renewal of grace and instruction.

The opening sermon on the method of making a profitable forty hours was preached in an able manner by Father McGuire, of Downeyville. During the progress of the devotion instructions of a most edifying character were delivered by Fathers Collins, P. O'Leary, Brotherton and Kelly, the subjects in order being, confession, contrition, the sacrifice of the mass and the Blessed Eucharist. The High Masses were sung by Fathers Brotherton and Collins.

Great credit is due to the ladies of the parish for the very large number of flowers sent for the decoration of the altar. The sanctuary was converted into a bank of variegated bloom and foliage. The music also was of a pleasing and devout nature, and added much to make the forty hours so successful.

THE SILVER JUBILEE OF ST. PETER'S WAS CELEBRATED AT YESTERDAY'S SERVICES

Rev. Dr. Teefy in Masterly Discourse Tells of Growth and Prosperity of the Diocese—Heartiest Congratulations Offered His Lordship Bishop O'Connor—Archdeacon Casey Preached Interesting Sermon at Vespers—Special Music by Choir a Feature of the Celebration.

The solemn but joyous service in commemoration of the 25th anniversary of the institution of the Roman Catholic diocese of Peterborough, was conducted under most auspicuous circumstances at St. Peter's Cathedral, yesterday. Large congregations attended both celebration services. His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, who by virtue of having occupied the episcopal chair for 17 out of the 25 years had a large share in the rejoicings of the day, celebrated Pontificial High Mass at 10.30 o'clock. At this service, the sermon especially fitted the occasion, and was in every respect worthy of the reputation of the learned speaker, was preached by Rev. Dr. Teefy, of the Basilian Novitiate, Toronto, and who was formerly connected with St. Peters. At Vespers, Ven. Archdeacon Casey, of Lindsay, a former rector of the cathedral was the preacher. His special interest in the observance of the silver jubilee of the cathedral, derived from his former intimate association with it, lent unusual force and value to his scholarly address. The clergy from the city and other parts of the diocese present, included, Rev. Father Lynch, who was parish priest, when St. Peter's was made a cathedral, Revd. Father D. O'Connell, a pioneer priest of the diocese; Rev. Father McCoil, rector of St. Peter's; Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, Ennismore; Rev. Father McGuire, Downeyville; Rev. Father T. Collins, Bracebridge; Rev. Dr. O'Brien, Rev. Father Kelly, and Rev. Father O'Leary of the cathedral staff.

THE MORNING SERVICE.

At 10.30 solemn Pontificial High Mass was celebrated by His Lordship, Bishop O'Connor, who seventeen years ago, sang his first mass as Bishop of Peterborough. He was assisted by Ven. Archdeacon Casey. Rev. Father McCoil was deacon, Rev. Father Kelly sub-deacon, and Rev. Dr. O'Brien, Master of Ceremonies.

THE SERMON.

Rev. Father Teefy took for his text the sixth verse of the second Psalm, "I am appointed by the Lord, King over Sion, His holy mountain, preaching his commandments." He began by pointing out that the sublimity of the solemnity of the day had a two-fold meaning. The Sion over which the eternal and only true worshipper of God was to reign, was the holy hill of the church, whose endless succession of bishops would offer continual praise and preach through all time the truth and commandments of the living God. There was another Sion, nearer home, by which he signified the church, where this hearers were assembled—the localizing and type of the church universal. In the past 25 years, the priest and worshippers of the church would recall the days when Peterborough was but a hamlet, and St. Peter's, in its present form and importance was unthought of as the cathedral church and centre of a great work. In that time a new diocese had been opened, presided over by one of its sons, therefore the present auspicious occasion was indeed justified. Reference was made to the formation of a vicariate-apostolic out of the wilderness of Northern Ontario, administered by a saintly missionary who later became Bishop Jamot, and who had a splendid schooling in missionary life in the northern part of this diocese of Toronto. This devout priest was strong both physically and in spirit.

The vicariate soon developed into a bishopric and Bishop Jamot transferred his See from Sault Ste. Marie to Bracebridge, and then he came to Peterborough." After paying an eloquent and loving tribute to the devotion and zeal of this pioneer bishop, Rev. Father Teefey continued.—

"Twenty-five years ago, on July 11th, Peterborough was marked out as a Cathedral city, with diocese formed out of the old diocese, over which Bishop Jamot had reigned, and four counties taken from the diocese of Kingston, and twenty-five years ago, yesterday, he was installed. When erected in 1882, this diocese of Peterborough, had a population of nearly thirty thousand souls, with twenty-five priests, and forty-seven church. At present, within the same territory, we have two dioceses; and the Catholic population in the two amounts to fifty-nine thousand two hundred, with seventy-one priests and one hundred and seventeen churches. After being here only four years, the reverend bishop Jamot died, in May 1886. In May 1887, the Right Reverend Bishop Dowling was consecrated. But as westward the course of the Empire takes its way so was this zealous, learned and distinguished prelate, transferred to the wider field of Hamilton, over which diocese he still rules with years of honor, and for the glory of God and His Church. After him came one whom to know is to love. He too, came from Barrie, which seems to be the nursery of the Episcopate. This field had prepared him, as it had prepared Bishop Jamot, for missionary labor. From 1889 up to 1905, when the diocese was divided, Bishop O'Connor spent summer after summer in the hardships of evangelizing the scattered Indians and settlers, north of the Georgian Bay and Lake Superior. The hardships of these years of work and trouble gained for him, merit, which can be alone repaid where alone their number and their cost are recorded. To tell of their difficulties and the scarceness of the flocks, which he visited, is simply to proclaim what you all know, "that one soul is of more value in the sight of Heaven, than all the wealth of the world," and where a single soul calls, there will a good bishop be ever found. Travelling in canoes, and across portages, tenting at night, reciting office, as best you can, and searching for people, when you hardly know where they are settled, these are tasks which the world esteems but little; but which are the yearly record of Bishop O'Connor, from the time of his consecration, until he handed to his own son in the priesthood, Bishop Scollard, his nomination, as Bishop of this northern country. Many new missions and parishes have been formed, and presbyteries built. How shall I speak of a friend in his own presence from this pulpit, and upon this occasion? You know him, and he needs no recommendation, or eulogy from one so ill able to do him justice, but who if his heart could speak what it feels, or if it could find words more eloquent than fleeting language, more suited to a bishop's rank than coming from a simple priest, more responsive to your own appreciation, then would I more fittingly bear testimony to the zeal, the religious spirit, the kindness and gentleness of Richard Alphonsus O'Connor."

The preacher then went on to say that the ceremony being observed was something more than a mere memorial. As Jerusalem was the centre of the religion of the chosen people, Peterborough was the holy city where rested the Ark of the Covenant. He elaborated the relations existing between the Sion of the text and the Sion represented by St. Peter's, whose anniversary was being celebrated.

A sermon of rare eloquence, depth of thought and beauty of diction was concluded with these words:—"We are all here in thanksgiving to God for the graces of these twenty-five years of faith in His Immortal Church, in testimony of this faith and this commission, and in prayer for the continuance of Christ's kingdom in this young land. Te Deum laudamus: Te per orbem terrarum sanctu confitetur Ecclesia. May the splendor of the Lord be upon our children and upon our works; and do Thou, O Lord, direct the works of our hands over us—year, the work of our hands do Thou direct forever more."

THE EVENING SERVICE.

At Vespers there was again a large congregation. Pontifical Vespers were sung by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, with Rev. Father Fitzgerald, deacon; Rev. Father Kelly, sub-deacon, and Rv. Dr. O'Brien, master of ceremonies.

The sermon was preached by Ven. Archdeacon Casey, of Lindsay, from the text, "As the Father hath sent me, I also send you."—St. John xx—21. After a few sentences of introduction the speaker said;—

"Today is indeed a day of great joy and thanksgiving for us all, and for no one more than for our beloved Bishop, who, under God, has had the greater share in the building up of our diocese. My Lord, we congratulate you on this auspicious occasion. Your joy is our joy; your glory our glory. Everywhere in the diocese your name is held in benediction, and awe, My Lord, the priests of the diocese, who know your kindness of heart, your charity for the poor and afflicted, your zeal for religion and education, fervently beseech Almighty God to grant you length of days to rule this diocese and guide your faithful people, not less by your example than by your words."

The preacher then proceeded to amplify, in a very complete and convincing form, the mission of the church, to bring all men the message of divine truth and the grace of reconciliation. He also proved that the discharge of this mission had been entrusted to the apostles and their successors, the bishops of the church, and forcefully depicted the complete manner in which they had fulfilled their great obligation.

After the sermon by Rev. Dr. Teefy His Lordship briefly addressed the congregation and said the progress and prosperity the parish had enjoyed since its establishment, was due to the blessing of Almighty God. He thanked the attending clergy for their presence and urged the congregation to pray for a continuance of the divine blessing the diocese had enjoyed.

MUSIC OF THE DAY.

The music incidental to the services of the day, was both appropriate and excellently rendered by the choir under the efficient direction of Miss Maggie Doherty. At the morning service the mass was St. Joseph's by Weigand. Misses L. Hallihan and Delaire, and Messrs. Koen and F. Pope, sang in quartette at the morning offertory, "Quid Retribuam," and those taking solos were Misses Hallihan, A. Simons, N. Simons, A. Primrose, and Messrs. Brady, Hill, Weir and Pope. In the evening, musical vespers were sung. "O Salutaris," was rendered at benediction by Messrs. Brady and Koen. "Tantumergo" by Rossi, was also sung the solo parts being taken by Miss Hallihan and Mr. J. Weir. The choir as a body acquitted itself most creditably, and the solos were given in excellent voice. Great credit is due Miss Doherty for her painstaking and intelligent leadership.

Enjoyable Trip to Old Country

P. C. Newhall Says Ontario Gets Worst Class of Immigrants

After spending the last six weeks sojourning in England, Mr. S. Newhall, of the local police force, returned to the city yesterday morning. Mr. C. J. James, also of this city, was a fellow passenger of Mr. Newhall. He also spent some weeks in the Old They sailed from Liverpool on September 13th by the steamer "Virginian," of the Allan Line.

While in the Old Country Constable Newhall spent most of his time in London, renewing many old acquaintances, made during his residence in the great metropolis. Mr. Newhall's home is near Liverpool, and, of course, he spent some time there. One of the most interesting features of his programme while abroad was an automobile tour through England, embracing almost every old and historic place in the country.

Speaking of the passage out, Mr. Newhall said that it was an exceedingly rough one, and not one of the lady passengers were able to leave their berths until they entered the River St. Lawrence. There were some fifteen hundred persons on board, including many prominent people, General Booth, Signor Marconi, Senator Gibson, and Madame Rotvenski, the noted Russian singer. The two Peterborough men on board were the only passengers who were for any point east of Toronto. A large number were for the Northwest and Vancouver. The immigration officer and the surgeon on board stated that they never examined a better class of passengers.

"Ontario gets the worst class of immigrants," said Mr. Newhall. "The best ones go on to the Northwest and British Columbia." The ones who remain here have not the money to go any farther. They are the poorest class and get to this country the best way they can, generally without a cent.

The "Virginian" and most of the ocean vessels are fitted with with the Marconi system of wireless telegraphy. In this way the passengers are kept in touch with what is going on on land. Until this new system was discovered the steamers had to keep to the same course. Now communication from one ship to the other allows them to take different courses. Knowing where each one is, there is no danger of collision.

Last Wednesday evening a very interesting meeting was held on board ship. Marconi, the discoverer of wireless telegraphy, presided, and addresses were given by Gen. Booth, Senator Gibson and others. On Thursday night a concert was held, at which Madame Rotenveski, who will give several concerts in Canada and the United States, sang.

The steamship arrived at Quebec on Friday, were a number of the steerage passengers landed, but the others came on Montreal. Mr. Newhall and Mr James spent the day sight-seeing in Quebec, and then came on to Montreal, where they spent a day. Then then left for Peterborough, arrived here yesterday morning. Mr. Newhall enjoyed his trip very much. He resumed his duties on the local force today.

Sunday Services at Park Street

It was a good day with a very full bill of fare, at the Park street Baptist church yesterday, the church being packed, and the north end exposed made it a little breezy, but the congregation was excellent. The Sunday school was also a gratifying success. There were 143 present, and $9.00 for Foreign Missions was received. The printed programme with the responses worked admirably. The rally song by three little girls was an interesting feature. The following verse shows the subject of the afternoon,—

"Our vacation time is over,
We'll no long play the rover,
Every Sunday now shall surely find us here.
There's no place on earth much brighter,
Or can make a heart feel lighter,
For we come to learn the gospel of good cheer."

Addresses were given by the superintendent, the assistant, and the pastor, and a special song by the primary class.

The usual services will be held at Park Street Baptist Church during the week as follows,—

Excursion Was Great Success

Auburn Woollen Mills Employees Had a Most Enjoyable Time

The annual excursion of the Auburn Woollen Mills on Saturday was a most successful affair. Cobourg was the objective point and about 300 went down on the special train and spent the day in the pretty little town by the lake. There was no pre-arranged programme for the day, everyone being at liberty to go where they pleased and do whatever they desired. A baseball match between a picked team from the Auburn Woollen mills and a Cobourg nine was a feature of the day. The Peterborough boys were victorious, the score being 10-9. At the end of the ninth innings it was nine all, but the visitors got another run in the tenth and clinched the game. The Auburn team was as follows: Wilson, c; Lightheart, p; Shaw, 1b; Allison, 2b; Kendry, s.s.; Weatherstone, 3b; Russell, l.f.; Watt, r.f.; Flannery, c.f.

On the return trip Peterborough was reached at nine o'clock, the excursion being pronounced one of the most successful ever held.

SCOW'S RUDDER WAS BROKEN

On Saturday last the rudder was broken off the scow tied to the steamer Dawn. The Dawn with the scow was backing into the shore on the east side of the river just after a load of lumber for the Peterborough Fuel & Cartage Co. had been unloaded at Wolfe street wharf, when the accident occurred.

Repairs were made as soon as possible and the Dawn with the scow went back to the lakes today.

Brotherhood Tea Held at St. John's

Interesting Gathering and Large Attendance on Sunday Afternoon

St. John's No. 6 Chapter, Brotherhood of St. Andrew, opened the season with a tea in the school house at 5 p.m. yesterday. The catering was splendidly done by Colman brothers, George street. Mr. Walter Cluxton and Mr. Harold Cluxton were the hosts of the evening. Mr. R. Devey, Director of the Chapter, presided and among the ninty-six assembled were Rev. Canon Davidson, Mr. Harold Cluxton, Mr. D. Hughes-Charles, Mr. F. R. Yokome, Mr. Ponsette and the full number of regular chapter members. A large number of the guests were new to the country, and some of them gave their impressions of their adopted country. Shortly before 7 p.m. the gathering separated, many to attend the evensong in church which partook largely of the nature of a men's service.

The singing was bright and hearty and Rev. Canon Davidson preached a spirited sermon to men. The gathering was the largest of its kind held since their inception, and much personal work must have been done to gather in such a number of new comers.

Young People's Association meet in St. John's school at 8 p.m. prompt. Brotherhood of St. Andrew, Wednesday, 8 p.m. Choir practice for boys Monday 4.15 p.m., Saturday, at 9 a.m.

ALTOGETHER TOO MUCH SHOUTING

Over Isolation of Present Scarlet Fever Case, Says a Physician

"The papers and the Board of Health are making a great noise about the isolation of a scarlet fever patient in the third floor of the city hall," remarked a well-known physician to the Review to-day. "I do not see that it is any more dangerous or harmful to have a scarlet fever patient isolated there than it is to have one isolated in the attic of a private house and we know that such is frequently done and no other members of the family contract the disease. The malady is not as contagious as many of those who are shouting, would lead people to believe. The medical health officer is the advisor, not the servant or tool of the Board of Health. The present case is in his hands. He is the party responsible and no doubt knows the full circumstances better than some members of the Board of Health. Many are finding fault with him, but have the civic authorities not been negligent? When we had smallpox isolated at Jackson park a few years ago the city bought a tent, a stove, had a telephone installed, etc. Where are the tent, the stove, etc., to-day? They cannot be found and if the scarlet fever patient had been removed to the Hilliard farm, I suppose a new tent, stove, etc., would have to be bought. There has been carelessness on the part or some one. All the fault, if any, is not attributable to the the health officer. The Board of Health is by no means perfect." concluded the physician as he walked away, "and this talk of their resigning in a body as a protest against the medical health officer makes me weary."

"NERVES" IN BRITISH NAVY.

The Old System of Drill Aloft to Be Reinstated.

In consequence of reports having been made to the Admiralty of seamen in some of His Majesty's ships having refused to go aloft in rough weather, it has been decided to reinstate the old "mast and sail" system of instruction in the harbor training ships.

This system was abolished about seven years ago, and with is went the old Cruiser Squadron, consisting of fully-rigged steam ships, in which youths were sent to sea before being passed out into the ships in the first line. The sailing brigs Nautilus and Liberty were also dismantled.

In the place of this system a new one was introduced by which boys were first sent to sea in the ships of the Particular Service Squadron, consisting of first-class armored cruisers. Sail drill, running aloft and such things were consigned to the limbo of the past, as having no place in an age of steam and steel.

The objections of many distinguished naval officers were overruled as being obsolete. They said that drill aloft trained the men in confidence and daring, and that its abolition would result in a falling off in those qualities in which the British bluejacket has always been supreme. But the objectors were ridiculed.

Now the authorities have discovered that the naval officers were right, and the obsolete "mast and sail" drill is to be reinstated.

RECORD GUNNERY.

Great Achievement by the Men of the King Alfred.

H.M. cruiser King Alfred, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir Arthur Moore, commander-in-chief of the China fleet, made the following scores while at gunnery practice at Wei-Hai-Wei:

With three 6-inch guns in one minute—

Rounds.	Hits.	Bulls.
11	11	11
14	13	8
13	13	9

With her two 9.2-inch guns in two minutes—

Rounds.	Hits.	Bulls.

Altogether 18 big guns fired 198 rounds, making 188 hits and 113 bulls. —Reuter.

This is the most remarkable gunnery which has yet been recorded. It surpasses the firing in the similar gunlayers' test last year by the sistership Drake, then flagship of Rear-Admiral Prince Louis of Battenberg. Then 167 rounds were fired from a similar number of guns, and 146 hits were recorded. This premier shooting ship in the navy is commanded by Captain Cecil F. Thursby, and her gunnery officer is Lieut. the Hon. Arthur Stopford, son of Viscount Stopford, and grandson of the Earl of Courtown.

Passing of Scotland Yard.

Old Scotland Yard, for nearly a hundred years the headquarters of the London police, is about to disappear to mak way for the construction of a grand new thoroughfare extending from Whitechapel to Northumberland avenue, and with it one of the most familiar landmarks of the British metropolis—a landmark enjoying a world-wide celebrity — will vanish, says an English press correspondent. It owes its name to the fact that its site was formerly occupied by a splendid palace, built for the reception of the Scottish monarchs when they visited London to do homage to the kings of England for their fiefs in Cumberland and Westmoreland. The last of the Scotch royal family to reside there was Margaret Queen of Scotland and sister of Henry VIII., who had her abode there after she returned to England on the death of her husband, King James IV., of Scotland, killed in the battle of Flodden Field. Henry VIII. allowed the palace, after the death of his sister, to fall into decay. In the reign of Elizabeth it had become a ruin, and after the union of the Scotch and English crown it was dismantled. Thereupon it was converted into the site of certain Government offices and residences.

Milton lived there while acting as Latin secretary to Oliver Cromwell, and when the impending agony of blindness first began to threaten him. There, too, lived Inigo Jones, Sir Christopher Wren, the architect of St. Paul's Cathedral, and Sir John Vanbrugh, the designer of Blenheim. It was at the entrance to Scotland Yard that, during the reign of James II., Lord Herbert, the poet, and himself the author of a poem the metre of which was adopted by Tennyson in his "In Memoriam," was waylaid from motives of jealousy, attacked by hired ruffians, and severely wounded; and it was at the corner of Scotland Yard that Josiah Wedgewood had, in the middle of the eighteenth century, a showroom in which to exhibit his pottery and porcelain. Not until 1829, however, did Scotland Yard become the headquarters of the metropolitan police, on the formation of the latter by the great Sir Robert Peel to supersede the co-called London "Charlies."

Quite a Difference.

"Tommy, when I tell you something is wrong you do not do it?"

"No, sir."

"But when your conscience tells you a thing is wrong you keep right on and do it?"

"Yes, sir."

"But doesn't your conscience hurt you when you do something wrong?"

"Yes, sir, but not in the same place you do."

Easily Arranged.

"Did you mail that package?"

"Yep."

"How much postage did it take?"

"Three cents."

"What did you do? There weren't any three cent stamps in the box."

"Well, there was a five cent stamp there, you know. I put it on, pasted a two cent stamp right beside it and made a minus sign between 'em."

Belleville citizens have appointed a committee to report on the water power of the Moira river.

REVIEW LETTER BOX

THE PULPIT AND ITS USE

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Under this head "Observer" writes regarding a sermon preached by one of our city ministers last Sunday. Let me examine the article.

First. "Observer" is evidently no authority on the uses to which the pulpit should be put, for his own statement, his idea is that the one object of preaching is the salvation of souls. Far from it. The building up of the saints and the condemnation of sinners is surely a part of the work of the pulpit. The minister rises in his pulpit not only as a preacher of salvation, but as an expert in ethics and should in that capacity be as perfectly fearless in approving right and denouncing wrong on the part of a Premier as he would be in denouncing a church member who had abused his wife.

Second. I am not a member of the church referred to, but I frequently attend and find that pulpit quite free from political lecturing, and I may say that I have talked with the Editor of the Review, who heard this sermon referred to, and he declared it free from any political leanings.

Third. The pastor referred to, while of another denomination to myself, is, in my opinion, a gospel preacher, who very properly finds his illustrations in any and every quarter regardless of politics. I might add that he would be no more responsible for the terms that the Examiner might use in its heading of their report than he would be for what might be the observations of some unoccupied and unsuccessful professional man.

Yours, etc.,

CYRUS.

Cruel Treatment of Livery Horses

"Kindness" Tells of one Instance Which Came Under His Observation

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—We hear complaints from all sides as to the cruel treatment of horses, especially livery horses, by heartless wretches, who call themselves men. It has always been my view that the livery stable keepers are the principal offenders when they let their horses out to monsters in human form. Instead of exercising ordinary care, they deliberately give out their horses in some cases knowing full well that the dumb brutes will be severely treated by drunken brutes. I will give an instance that came to the knowledge of the writer. Two rough looking drunken men went to a certain livery stable and asked for a horse, and, without any hesitation, their request was granted, and so drunk was one of them that the proprietor of the livery stable had to assist him to get into the rig, and off they drove in the most reckless manner with a horse that was already tired out from previous driving.

Yours, etc.,

KINDNESS.

New Steamer "Bessie Butler" Ready To Be Launched

Engines for Boat Have Arrived--Steamer Will be Completed in a Month--A Very Fine Craft Handsomely Fitted Up.

This week will likely see the launching of the new Government boat "Bessie Butler," which is being constructed at the entrance of the canal into Little Lake.

Mr. Alex. Bauckham, who has full charge of the building of this boat under the direction of the Polson Iron Works of Toronto, in conversation with a Review representative last evening, said that while the new boat would not be fully completed for another month, it will be ready to put into the canal in a few days. This "Bessie Butler" will be a very fine craft when finished and will be fitted up in the most modern style. She will be used for inspection purposes principally, but is admirably suited for towing, there being fifteen tow lines.

The new steamer is of composite work, that is, it is built of steel and wood. There are steel ribs, and the frame is steel. It is sheeted with oak, which is again enclosed in steel. She is 60 feet long, with a beam of 17 feet. She has a draw of five feet of water.

Up to the present, the craft is finished right to the main deck. The timber has been placed in and the boat is now ready for the engines which are expected to arrive today. This week the steel sheeting was placed on.

On entering the boat, there are steps leading down to the state rooms of which there are two, and also dining rooms, kitchen and lavatories. These rooms are built below the main deck. The "Bessie Butler" will be electric lighted and there will also be a powerful search light. The pipe railing on her will all be portable.

This new craft was put all together complete, at the yards of the Polson Works at Toronto, but had to be taken apart to be brought here. Everything in connection with the "Bessie Butler" is being made by the Polson Iron Works. Fifteen men have been engaged on the work up to the present time, but soon electricians, plumbers, and the steam fitters will be here to finish up the work.

Mr. Bauckham says that a similar boat was built for the Dominion Government, and delivered to Kingston to be used on the Rideau Canal, about two months ago. A boat of this kind carries a crew of six, and certainly will be a credit to the canal waterway.

The "Bessie Butler" is named in honor of Miss Bessie Butler, daughter of Mr. M. J. Butler of Ottawa, the well-known Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals.

American Apple Buyer Tells About Crop in This County

Such is the opinion of Mr. Geo. M. Leonart, of the firm of Leonart and Clarke, fruit dealers, of Lockport, N. Y. Mr. Leonart is registered at the Crown hotel, and is travelling through the county, buying all the apples he can get. Mr. Leonart has covered a lot of ground during the past two weeks, and will spend about three weeks more in these parts buying apples. He makes his headquarters in this city, when on his purchasing tour, and buys from forty to eighty thousand barrels of apples every fall. They are shipped to Lockport where they are put in cold storage and when placed on sale before the public, they are in fine condition.

"There is a bountiful crop of apples," said Mr. Leonart to the Review, "but the trouble is the farmers do not know how to put them up so they can be preserved for some time." Just yesterday, he said, his noticed beautiful Duchess and Alexander apples going to waste for the want of picking. When the fruit falls off the trees, they become bruised and soon rot. The farmers do not realize what money they could make, if they would only pick their apples when they first begin to ripen and pack them in barrels. Then they would be in splendid condition for the buyers and the farmers would have a ready sale. That is the way it is done in the States, said Mr. Leonart, and it would be a great thing for agriculturists, if it was carried out here. The American buyer stated that the farmer hadn't barrels and they complained of being unable to get any.

In regard to this last statement, the Review ascertained from Mr. G. S. Kingdon, one of the city's largest coopers, that if the farmers wanted barrels very badly they could easily get them. The demand is not so great that it cannot be met. The farmers evidently would rather see their fruit rot than pay the price for apple barrels. Mr. Leonart has already shipped one carload of apples to Lockport. The duty on a barrel of apples into the United States is 75 cents and this necessarily must make the price of apples over there, very high.

Mr. Leonart has also bought potatoes for his firm, but stated that the duty on them is too steep to do so this year.

Will The Price of Bread Advance In Peterborough?

There is Little Doubt But That Bakers Will Have to Get More for Their Product if Price of Flour Remains Up.

Is the price of bread going to advance in Peterborough?

Milk is likely to go up, the price of coal seems to be handkering to go up the ladder, and now comes the announcement that the staff of life is likely to cost more. "Woe is mine," sighs the poor householder. "Where is it all going to stop?" they are asking, and the echo comes back "Where?"

A local baker informed this Review today, that unless the price of flour took a drop, the men who knead the dough would have to get a higher price for their product. "You can't blame us," he continued, "for flour has been going up in jumps and it takes flour to make bread. During the last six months the price of flour has gone up $1.10 per barrel, and from the look of things it is going to go still higher. The bakers feel that in order to make a reasonable profit they will have to raise the price of bread at least to meet a portion of the advanced price of flour."

"It stands reasoning," continued the man with the dough, "that a baker can't make bread when flour is away up in price to sell at the same figure as when flour is cheap. He simply can't do it, and get along so it looks as if prices will have to be put up about a cent a loaf."

So Peterborough householders needn't be surprised if prices go up one of these days.

It may be stated in passing that this price of bread has just been advanced one cent per loaf in Ottawa, the present price being $1.30 per dozen loaves.

Noted Preacher in City Churches

Rev. Dr. Harris of Toronto Preached Two Inspiring Sermons

Rev. Dr. Harris, president of the Bible training school, Toronto, was in the city over Sunday and preached two forceful and inspiring sermons. Dr. Harris is one of the foremost preachers in Ontario and is an interesting speaker. In the morning he preached at Murray street church and in the evening at George street Methodist church. In the afternoon he addressed the Young Lady's Bible class of the Y.W.C.A.

His morning discourse was based on the words found in the third verse of the first chapter of St. Paul's epistle to the Ephesians, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who have blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ."

In beginning the reverend doctor said that he wished to speak about the unspeakable riches of Christ. In St. Paul's letter to the Ephesians he says that the body of Jesus Christ represents the church. Just as the head controls the body, so Christ controls the church.

"There is often confusion in the distinction between the universal church and the one here on earth." "The universal church is the whole family of God and to these the spiritual blessings belong." Let us consider first the source of the spiritual blessings, secondly the reservoir or place from which they come, and the character of these.

We bless God when we thank Him. Our offerings to foreign missions are not directly given to God, but to Him through His people. In this way we bless God. When He blesses us He bestows His gifts upon us.

In the first chapter of Genesis the term applied to our Maker is God. In the second chapter it is Lord God. Some expositors of the Scriptures claim these two chapters were written by two distinct persons, but, said Dr. Harris, is "there not a reason to believe both were written by the one?" In the new testament, Christ is referred to as Jesus, Lord Jesus and Lord Jesus Christ, and we know the writer is the same who used everyone of them. There is never a change of name without a purpose. God is a Hebrew expression meaning Power. He is the God of Power and is able to give us all things. When spoken of as Lord God, His relation to man is referred to. He ruleth over everything. As "Father," He is the God of love. "We have experienced God's power and His love in spiritual blessings.

Then again the Father's relation to His Son is shown when in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ we pray. No petitions are ever answered without being asked through Him. This land was Sharah desert as far as blessings are concerned, continued the reverend doctor. The reservoir of spiritual blessings is in Heaven, in Christ. It is not in the Bible we get the blessing, but it tells where, what and how one can get them. Christ tells us to search the Scriptures. The gift of God is eternal life in Christ.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

WEIRD INCIDENT.

Red Stream Flows From Coffin Buried For Centuries.

A weird and startling incident that occurred in an ancient Colchester church has caused much speculation as to its nature.

Some workmen employed in restoring the historic church of St. Giles, were carrying away a leaden coffin containing the remains of Lord John Lucas, who was buried in 1671. As they moved the heavy casket they in some way fractured it, and were astonished to see a large quantity of red fluid, having the appearance of blood, running from the hole in the lead.

They at once concluded that the fluid was blood, and the discovery naturally caused great consternation among them, seeing that the coffin is 236 years old.

The rector, the Rev. W. M. Bellamy, and others were called to inspect the fluid, and they also were convinced that it was actually blood that oozed out of the coffin. Anyway, the incident is probably unique in the annals of sepulture.

Sacred to the Memory of the most noble John Lord Lucas, Baron Shenfield, who died July 2, 1671, aged 65.

This Lord Lucas was the first lord, and founded the family now represented by Lord Lucas, better known as Mr. Auberon Herbert. Lord John was the elder brother of Sir Charles Lucas, whose execution after the siege of Colchester by the Cromwellians is commemorated by an obelisk in the local Castle park.

The vault at St. Giles's is required for a new heating apparatus, and permission was granted by the present Lord Lucas to remove the coffins for re-interment in the churchyard. It was in the journey to the churchyard that the cleavage was caused in the coffin containing Lord John's remains, and the mystifying fluid streamed out.

The incident recalls many superstitions as to the bleeding of bodies after death, such as being signs to the living that deceased had met with foul play, or was anxious to warn survivors of impending disasters.

A practical solution of the occurrence was given on Saturday to our Colchester correspondent by Dr. Henry Laver, F.S.A., the president of the Essex Archaeological Society, and a great authority upon matters scientific. He at once said that it was not blood at all that came out of the coffin. "If you get a body buried in an hermetically sealed lead coffin," he added, "liquid exudes and cannot get out or dry up. It is a red liquid, and when cleavage is made it runs out looking like blood, but is not blood at all."

Dr. Laver went on to explain that the lead coffins of to-day were not so perfect as in olden times. Then they were cast. Modern ones are made of rolled lead, and the joints give way where they have been lead soldered. In the old coffins of cast lead there were no joints to give way.

The old Roman coffins were made with burnt joints, and are perfectly good to-day, as witness specimens in Colchester museum.

RISEN FROM THE RANKS.

Notable Career of An Australian Officer Who is Leaving the Army.

Col. Harry Finn, C.B., late inspector-general (local major-general) of the forces of the Commonwealth of Australia, who figured in the late Birthday honors, has decided to leave the army on pension after over 36 years' service, 10 of which were spent in the ranks. Col. Finn has had a remarkable career. The brother of a troop sergeant-major, who served in the Indian Mutiny, he enlisted in his brother's corps (the 9th Lancers) under an assumed name, and rose to squadron sergeant-major. He was specially mentioned for his fine work in the Afghan war, and received a commission in the 21st Hussars (now Lancers). He got the adjutancy after only three years' commissioned service, and he was the youngest field officer in the service when promoted major. He again distinguished himself during the famous charge at Omdurman, and got a brevet lieutenant-colonelcy. Col. Finn is one of the very few officers of his rank who wears the ranker's medal for distinguished conduct in the field.

The Press in India.

Judgment, carrying with it small damages, has been delivered in the libel action brought by six members of the Calcutta police force against The Indian Daily News. The action was based upon that journal's criticism of the conduct of the plaintiffs in connection with a murder case two years ago, when a charge was brought against an innocent man.

During the libel trial it was elicited that the Government of Bengal had financed the police officers and given a promise that it would pay the costs of the proceedings, whether they won or lost. This revelation has provoked severe and very general criticism.

The Statesman declares that never has a British Government at modern times struck so cowardly a blow at the independence of the press. The Indian Daily News itself says that useful criticism on the part of the press in India, similar to that properly indulged in by English journalism, must now be regarded as impossible. It remarks that the Government of Bengal appears more anxious to hound down the independent critic than to put the Administration in order.

All on Show.

"It seems to me," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "that if I had as many idiosyncrasies as Mrs. Woppleson has I'd try to conceal a few of them."

"Yes," replied her hostess as she lightly tapped upon her $12,000 vanity box, "but she seems to think she can't even go shoppin' without wearin' all of them as well as every diamond and ruby on that she's got."

TRY IT, ANYWAY

What will appear very interesting to many people here is the article taken from a prominent health journal, giving a simple prescription, as formulated by a noted authority, who claims that he has found a positive remedy to cure almost any case of backache or kidney or bladder derangement, in the following simple prescription, if taken before the stage of Bright disease:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

A well-known local druggist, when asked regarding this prescription, stated that the ingredients are all harmless, and can be obtained at a small cost from any good prescription pharmacy. He further stated that while this prescription is often prescribed in rheumatic afflictions with splendid results, he could see no reason why it would not be a splendid remedy for kidney and urinary troubles and backache, as it has a peculiar action upon the entire kidney structure, cleansing these most important organs and helping them to sift and filter from the blood the foul acids and waste matter which cause sickness and suffering. Those who suffer can make no mistake in giving it a trial.

SIS IN NEW YORK.

"Sis in New York" pleased a large audience at the Grand Opera House on Saturday night, frequent outbursts of applause evidencing the appreciation of the good work done by the different members of the cast. Whatever may be the merits or demerits of the story built on the adventures of "Sis," the production was received with favor, and thus the chief aim was satisfied. "Sis in New York" is an ordinary melodrama, with enough comedy to relieve the heavy parts. Then the despicable villain, whose schemes and machinations to do wrong to the innocent ruralists, received a solar plexus blow, in the last act, and of course, there was the heroine, the mirth-provoking "Sis," and a green, hired man, who added to the general merriment. However, the curtain finally went down with everybody happy but the discomfitted villain, who found himself up against it good and hard.

"Tonight's attraction, 'Little Dolly Dimples,' promises to be one of the best drawing cards of the season. Judging from the sales of seats, the house will be packed.

Laurier Replies to the Labor Congress Resolution

Cannot Lightly Terminate Treaty With Japanese.

Has Had Beneficial Influence on Trade — Vancouver Troubles Not Entirely Due to Japs—Labor Delegates at Congress Angry—Declare They Will Even Up at Elections—Recent Non-Committal Answer.

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—The following telegram was sent to Winnipeg on Saturday by Sir Wilfrid Laurier to Alphonse Verville, M. P., president of the Dominion Trades and Labor Council, in reply to a resolution forwarded to the Government asking that steps be taken at once to terminate the treaty with Japan:

"I have given due consideration to your request, that immediate step be taken to terminate the treaty with Japan. I would observe that this treaty when brought into existence, some fifteen years ago, did not apply to Canada, and that some few years ago, in response to the repeated expressions of public opinion and with a view of affording to Canadian producers an opportunity of taking their share of the growing Japanese trade, the Canadian Government became a party to this treaty, and that it was unanimously ratified by the Canadian Parliament. The treaty has proved of great advantage, as our trade with Japan under it has considerably increased. You base your appeal for denunciation of the treaty on the allegation that a crisis has arisen in British Columbia by reason of the unprecedent influx of Japanese. Whilst it is true that most regrettable incidents have lately occurred in Vancouver, there seems reason to doubt that the cause was the influx of Japanese, as I am in possession of a telegram from the Mayor of Vancouver, which has been rendered public, which expressly avers that the disturbances were directed against Asiatics generally, rather than against the Japanese. Under such circumstances any precipitate action might be regrettable, and before committing themselves to such a course the Government think they should carefully inquire into the causes which within the recent past have caused a greater influx to our shores than previously of Oriental people. (Signed) Wilfrid Laurier."

Labor Men Speak Out.

Winnipeg, Sept. 23.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier's reply to the Trades and Labor Congress precipitated in a red-hot debate at the closing session of the convention Saturday afternoon, in which the members rode roughshod over the Premier.

In no uncertain language they expressed their dissatisfaction at the non-committal reply and resolved, amid great enthusiasm, to give their answer to Sir Wilfrid at the polls next election.

A sensation was created at the convention when it was discovered in the course of a discussion of a resolution to have principles of trade unionism introduced into all Dominion and Provincial Parliaments, and to take steps to have open shops abolished, that P. M. Draper, paid secretary of the congress, is foreman in the Government printing offices at Ottawa, which is not an organized union shop.

Secretary Draper's long explanation created an uneasy feeling in minds of sceptical ones.

"Suppose that the treaty with Japan was abrogated and Japanese forces should attempt to enforce the entry of Japanese coolies into British Columbia, what would be the position of union men if that entry should have to be opposed by force?" asked P. M. Draper.

It was too much for delegates, and they immediately decided to vote the resolution down.

For this they are to receive a reserve of 73,000 acres on Lake Winnipeg, hay land in the present reserve, with certain other privileges. Patents will be issued for the St. Peter's Reserve and sold by the Government for the benefit of the Indians. They are allowed five years in which to move to their new reserve.

HOW POLICE LAID TRAP.

Clever traps are laid to catch the unwary automobilist who is tempted to exceed the speed limit. Hiding in bushes, concealing himself in the turn of a road, behind a tree and similar tricks are tried by the enthusiastic bicycle or mounted guardian of the highways.

One of the most successful schemes to capture fast drivers was that originated by a sergeant of police in an English town, where the sergeant watched the approach to a popular automobile road.

He hid himself in the tower of St.

TOWER OF ST. EDMUND'S.

Edmund's, and when he saw a car coming at a speed he deemed too fast for safety the sergeant signalled to a constable he had stationed on the highway and the constable was always at hand to make the arrest.

The scheme worked beautifully for a while and six motor drivers were arrested within a few minutes of one another. But the ingenious sergeant did not revel in his victories long, for as soon as the rector of the church learned of the use to which the tower was being put he arranged to have the sergeant removed.

MR. LYNCH PARDONED.

Irishman Who Was Sentenced to Death For High Treason.

The King signalized his recent visit to Ireland by granting a free pardon to Mr. Arthur Alfred Lynch, who was convicted of high treason in January, 1903, for having fought on the side of the Boers in the South African war, and was released on license a year later. His release "on license" in 1904 also coincided with a visit of the King to Ireland, where the demonstrations of loyalty deeply impressed His Majesty.

Mr. Lynch's release on license granted him full personal liberty, but disqualified him sitting in Parliament or holding any position of trust. The effect of the free pardon is to absolve the person pardoned from all punishment due to the offence, and from all disqualifications and forfeitures which he may have incurred in consequence of the conviction.

Born in 1861, at Ballarat, of Irish parentage, Mr. Lynch started as an engineer, became a lecturer, and drifted into journalism. In 1892 he stood for Galway City as a Parnellite, but was defeated. On the outbreak of the war he entered the late Paul Kruger's service, and organized the 2nd Irish Brigade, which operated in Natal, under Gen. Botha. After fighting against his own countrymen on many occasions he was elected member for Galway City by 1,247 votes to 473 cast for Sir Horace Plunkett.

At this time he was in Paris, having left South Africa, and on his returning to take his seat in the House of Commons he was arrested for high treason. After an exciting trial he was sentenced to death on Jan. 23, 1903. The sentence was immediately commuted to imprisonment for life, but Col. Lynch was released in the following year.

Mighty London.

The six and a half million people in Greater London live in 928,008 houses. The population 100 years ago was just one-fifth what it is now. Though the number of births was nearly double, the number of deaths in 1904, the birth rate is steadily declining. The postal figures show that in 1905 there were 1,028 postoffices in London, and 2,435 public telephones working. The total imports at London in 1904 amounted to $849,086,000, and the total exports $462,280,000. Some idea of London's wealth is shown by the assessed income tax value in 1904 in the administrative county, houses representing $219,264,000, trades and professions $364,645,000, profits of companies and other interests $698,511,000, salaries (corporate bodies) $115,044,000, salaries (army and navy) $103,674,000. In 1905 there were 2,993 motor cars and 1,852 motor cycles in London. Licenses to drive were granted to 8,070 people, the fees received amounting to $36,800.

Kept the Coffee Hot.

A novel means of serving troops with hot coffee when in the trenches all night is being used by the battalions of the First Brigade at Aldershot during the field operations.

It was found impossible to light fires during the night or early morning for fear of betraying the position to the enemy. The coffee, therefore, was made in the evening, and, while still boiling, was buried a few feet in the ground in camp kettles with close-fitting lids. When the pits were opened in the early morning the coffee was found still hot and ready for serving.

Corpl. Carter, of the Cape Mounted Police, while out shooting at Kongha, Cape Colony, mistook a native woman creeping through the bush for a baboon, and shot her dead.

C. M. Hays, of the G.P.R., said at Vancouver that his railway would employ any kind of labor it could get.

SPORTSMAN'S PARADISE

TROPICAL BUSH WHICH HAS MANY SERIOUS DRAWBACKS.

Australian Mangrove Swamps Stretch Unbroken for Miles — Swordfish and Sharks Play Havoc With Nets —A Gorgeous But Dangerous Jungle—The Serpent In an Eden—Lost for Five Days.

The country around Port Darwin in which Engineer-Commander Silk of H.M.S. Pryamuo was lost for five days was well known to me nineteen years ago, and there has been very little change in the northern territory since that time. The mangrove swamps, that sometimes stretch unbroken by cliffs or beach for miles, are to the eye a low, dull green wall rising from the sea. Thousands of oysters cling to the fantastic roots and branches of the mangroves that are laved by the tidewaters, and on the bottom lie prawns, crabs and other shellfish of enormous size. Swordfish and sharks often play sad havoc with the nets, as also do the numerous alligators that wallow in the black slime brought down by the creeks which trickle through the dense wilderness of closely knitted boughs and leaves.

Each evening at sunset flocks of flying foxes in search of food stream from their haunts in the mangroves toward the open country; so black, eerie and mysterious do they appear in the glorious red and golden light as their heavy webbed wings flap slowly in their flight, that to the imagination of any wanderer in the neighborhood they become harbingers of ill-omened fate. Where the stretches of dazzling white beach approach the swamp one frequently comes on a quicksand; and I remember my horror when I rode unconscious of its existence into the one at Fannie Bay; I felt my horse's feet sink over the fetlocks just as my companion's shout brought us back to firm ground.

The territory has been often described as a sportsman's paradise. At this time of the year the organized shooting parties find around the lagoons and jungles about ten miles from Port Darwin myriads of different species of wild duck and geese, as well as ibis, native companions, various kinds of pigeons, cockatoos and parrots and emu and kangaroo. Black boys generally accompany the parties to retrieve from the tangle of lilies and other beautiful plants, by which the surface of the shallow waters are thickly covered, the birds that fall to the guns.

The thick belts of the jungle are choked by an undergrowth of parasitic creepers that have flung their ropes around the trunks and into the branches of the great trees, to droop thence in a maze of tangled loops into which it is impossible to penetrate far without cutting away. Clusters of white, starry flowers shine graciously among the green of fern and moss; a blaze of scarlet blossom clings around the tall pillar of a banyan; and the soft illumination of heliotrope orchids lights the diverse undergrowth that is only half revealed in the tender brooding twilight.

A friend relating an experience of the jungle described the soft dank heat and intense silence, the rare shafts of sunlight breaking through the canopy of the treetops, and the feelings of reverence and awe inspired in him by the beautiful Gothic-like arches and tracery; and told of his rude awakening when, turning his head to the right, he saw suspended from a branch an enormous python, swaying stealthily as it loosened its coils and slowly advanced its head toward him. The sight of the serpent in this glimpse of Eden, and one so muscular and of such evil intent, so terrified him that with a shout he rushed from the jungle to the open without even firing a shot.—Pall Mall Gazette.

England's Fame In Sport.

Britons have always been proud of their prowess in field sports and games of strength and skill, but this year they have been humbled in many contests. The Belgian defeated Leander at Henley, an American holds the tennis championship, a Frenchman is champion of English golf, an Australian is champion of England at lawn tennis, and the premier honors in other branches of that excellent and increasingly popular sport have passed away from us. It is true that the display of England in the drawn match against the South Africans was worthy of our best traditions, but in other rivalries we have been soundly beaten. We have taught our friendly foes to play our own games, and they have shown skill this year superior to our own. This is not to be taken as a sign of our decadence, though some pessimists may put forward the contention, but rather as an incentive to renewed efforts. The love of manly sports is instinctive in the Englishman, and the defeats of the present year will nerve him to strive with all ardor for the recovery of the honors he has lost.

Bees Are Starving.

It is reported by the Devonshire Beekeepers' Association that in consequence of the low temperature and frequent rain the bees are on the verge of starvation.

The insects are kept in their hives, and their reserve has come to an end. The queen finding no income of honey, her deposit of eggs has ceased from thousands a day to a few hundred. Instead of the hives being able to send out thirty thousand workers to gather, whilst ten thousand remain at home, less than a thousand are available, and the bees are being fed by the owners at a time when three pounds of honey per day should be flowing.

Lunacy In Scotland.

The forty-ninth annual report of the general board of commissioners in lunacy for Scotland states the total number of insane in Scotland on Jan. 1, 1907, to be 17,593, showing an increase of 113 over the preceding year.

The deficit on the All-Red Pacific cable this year is $335,340, because of payments out of sinking fund.

The Dog Poisoner Has Started Winter Campaign

It looks as if the dog poisoner was starting his winter campaign. Last year about two score barkers made their exit from scenes earthly by way of the poison route, and apparently, the dispenser of the dog destroying ingredients, believes in making an early start, for on Saturday, two more canines took their departure. They were fox terriers and belonged to Mr. A. E. Elliott, who resides on Bethune street, between Hunter and Brock streets. One of them was only a pup and as the dogs seldom left the premises, Mr. Elliott cannot understand why anyone should have put out poison for them. A dog belonging to Mr. Buchanan and another belonging to Mr. Fowler, who live beside Mr. Elliott, got a dose of the poison, but did not die. A veterinary surgeon, who was called, stated that it was strychnine the dogs had been given.

The owners of the dogs are highly indignant and are taking steps to ascertain who put out the poison. They have a suspicion, who the party is, and are leaving nothing undone to bring him to justice.

Young Men Gave Fishery Inspector a False Steer

And the Official Threatened to Make Things Lively for Them—An Incident on the Otonabee.

A party of young men in a gasolene launch gave one of the fishery inspectors a somewhat lively time down the Otonabee Saturday night. The launch had stopped in midstream while some changes were being made to the engine and the fishery overseer who was rowing a punt a short distance away pulled up alongside the gasolene craft and tried to draw the young men into conversation. He wasn't very successful, however, and finally enquired who they were. One of the men in the launch told him that they were a party of Americans who had been duck hunting at Rice Lake. Then the inspector asked them where their license was and one of them informed him "that it was in the gasolene tank." This seemed to rile the official and he threatened to do some things, but just then the engine was put in motion and the launch darted away. The overseer attempted to follow it but did not make Henley time in the punt and was soon outdistanced and gave up the chase. No doubt he think that the province has been done out of the revenue of several duckie hunters' licenses, but of course such is not the case.

Will Open To-night at 7 O'clock--Performances to be High-Class and Refined—Manager Edwards Deserves Credit for His Enterprise.

"The Crystal," Peterborough's modern Unstretre will open tonight at seven o'clock. "The Crystal" is fitted up very elaborately and in good taste and should do a splendid business in this city. High-class moving pictures and illustrated songs will be the bill at all the performances, and Miss Edwards, who has won considerable distinction as a soprano soloist in church and other circles will be the vocalist, to interpret the picture songs. Everything in connection with the programme to be given at "The Crystal" will be refined and in good taste.

Mr. W. A. Edwards, the manager and proprietor, deserves credit and incidentally cash, for his enterprise in establishing the new theatre in Peterborough, and there is no doubt the public will recognize his progressiveness, by extending him a liberal patronage. Tonight's programme will consist of a moving picture "Jim's Apprenticeship," and one of J. Fred Helf's biggest successes, "When the Whippoorwill sings, Marguerite," will be the illustrated song.

The arch of the entrance to "The Crystal," is very attractive and is studded with incandescent lights of various colors. The work on the sides of the entrance is of superior title with gilt finish, and there is a further adornment of two pillar mirrors, and two beautiful oval mirrors on the walls.

Unless one pays a visit to this house it is impossible to appreciate the completeness and finish of the interior. Regular opera chairs of the kind used in the large metropolitan opera houses are installed, and in front of the stage are the orthodox footlights. The floor is sloped and nicely carpeted, the walls are papered with paper of a superior quality and design and the ceiling is handsomely ornamented. There are many other features of "The Crystal" that cannot be appreciated to their full value with a personal visit.

There is no doubt of Mr. Edwards' ability to make "The Crystal" a success, as he has emphatically "made good" with enterprises of a similar kind in Berlin and Brantford.

Mr. F. Cook and his able staff, are responsible for the transformation of the place from a barren building to a gilded thrill of entertainment, and the large and attractive sign "The Crystal" over the entrance is from the brush of one of the sign artists employed by Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons.

In "The Crystal" Peterborough has undoubtedly, the finest theatre of its kind in Canada.

A Costly Railroad.

A RHYMING WILL.

Perhaps the most peculiar will ever written was probated in England at Doctor's Commons, July 17, 1789. It ran as follows:

"I give and bequeath,
When I am laid underneath,
To my two loving sisters, most dear,
The whole of my store,
Were it twice as much more,
Which God's goodness has granted me here.

"And that none may prevent
This my will and intent,
Or occasion the least of law racket,
With a solemn appeal
I confirm, sign, and seal
This, the true act and deed of Will Jackitt."

TO SAVE SUBMARINE CREWS.

Naval Officers Invent Helmet to Avoid Under Water Tragedies.

Crews of submarines have hitherto undertaken their duty with the unpleasant consciousness that if disaster befell the vessel their chances of escape were slight in the extreme. It is so no longer.

Commander S. S. Hall, of the submarine service, and Staff Surgeon Oswald Rees, of H.M.S. Mercury, have invented an apparatus to enable the crew of a submarine to escape from their wrecked vessel. How the new life-saver works was shown at a recent demonstration at the premises of Messrs. Siebe, Gorman & Co., Limited, submarine engineers to the Admiralty, when the experiment was made of sending a man down about fifteen feet of water in a tank and seeing him rise safely.

The guests were invited to imagine at the outset that a submarine had had a hole made in her, and was filling with water. Three problems have to be solved. The first is to save the crew from the effects of poisonous gases generated by the salt water gaining access to the electrical storage batteries; the second, to save the crew from drowning in the vessel; the third, to enable the crew to get out and rise to the surface.

To meet these conditions a special form of diving helmet has been designed. The air in the apparatus can be used over and over again, the carbonic acid gas of the respired air being absorbed by a special substance called oxylithe, which also restores to the air the requisite amount of oxygen, and renders it again fit for breathing. When an accident occurs the men in the submarine can each put on the dress in half a minute. Each is completely protected from the poisonous gases which may be generated in the boat; the chief of these is chlorine.

In the construction of a submarine arrangements are made enabling the crew to open the hatch of the conning tower in all conditions, so as to try and reach the surface. Once there, the dress acts as a lifebuoy until the men are picked up. In any circumstances they are assured of living by the aid of this dress for eighty minutes.

A satisfactory test of the appliance can, of course, only be got in the unhappy event of an accident to a submarine vessel whose crew are equipped with it. At present the apparatus is being "considered" by the authorities.

Improvements at Windsor.

Among the many agreeable innovations introduced by King Edward at Windsor Castle during the last twelve months is the provision of a billiard-room and conversational annex, which adjoin the library. As is generally known, the royalties always breakfast and lunch in private, and as a rule do not meet their guests staying at the castle until the dinner hour, unless they happen to send for them specially. Formerly the men guests, if the weather was fine, spent the time between meals in visiting the grounds and the park, but if it rained were practically compelled to confine themselves to their bedrooms, only visitors of royal rank being furnished with suites of apartments comprising sitting rooms. Even Cabinet Ministers on duty at the castle were compelled to do all their writing in their bedrooms. But now the men can spend their time in the billiard-room, in the most comfortable and roomy species of conversational annex, or in the library perusing newspapers, dealing with their correspondence, and playing bridge. In fact, the only thing lacking are some tape machines conveying the news of the day in order to complete the impression of the guests that they are at their club in Pall Mall instead of under the rooftree of King Edward at Windsor.

Drastic Economy.

Reuter's Pretoria correspondent says Mr. Hull, the treasurer, in his speech on the budget in the Legislative Assembly, said that the Inter-Colonial Railway revenue had decreased by £600,000 and the revenue of the Transvaal by £236,000. The Government's policy, Mr. Hull declared, must be one of drastic economy as far as was consistent with efficiency, and must include the adjustment of the incidence of taxation with a view to reducing the cost of living. Mining being a perishable industry, the revenue from that source would be earmarked for the establishment and fostering of more stable industries. The Minister added that a portion of the loan of £5,000,000 to be guaranteed by the Imperial Government might be required for the Land Bank and the service of the Inter-Colonial Railway Council this session.

Ostrich Farming In South Africa.

Nineteen permits to capture ostriches for domestication and farming purposes were issued during the year. These permitted the capture of 943 ostriches.

"Ostrich farming," says the report, "is becoming quite an industry in the Enkeldoorn district, and I have recently been approached for Government aid in providing farmers with fencing wire, and a proposition is being laid before the Administration with a view to this."

There were 25 men in uniform at the practice of the Rugby club last Saturday at Riverside park. The boys had a splendid workout and are fast getting into shape. They will do their best to put it over the Argos when they meet the doughty oarsmen here in the first game of the season on October 5th. Every man is asked to be on hand at all practices between now and that date as the Toronto team from all indications will have a mighty strong lineup and will make the locals let themselves out to the last notch in the primary fight for the championship silverware.

The lights are installed and Manager Bill Crowley will drill the team on signal practice at the evening workouts. These will last about an hour and now that the schedule has been drawn up and the plan of campaign mapped out the local knights of the pig-skin should take the situation seriously and get into the best of condition as soon as possible.

Lady May Wins at Lindsay Fair

At the races at Lindsay Fair on Saturday, Lady May won the free-for-all, hands down. Prairie Oyster was first in the 2.29 class. The results,—

RUGBY

The schedule for the coming season has been arranged and by a perusal of it you may see that it will be to your financial advantage to purchase a season ticket for the local games. The price is $4, and the ticket admits you to every game played here for the price you would pay for four games by buying your ticket at the the wicket. It doesn't take a man of Hebrew inclinations to see that the investment in a season ticket is a good one.

SPORTING COMMENT

The free-for-all event at the local exhibition promises to be one of the fastest races ever seen in Peterborough. Tom Boy, City Queen, Hazel Bell, Queen's Baron, Lady Gothard and Harry Direct will probably start, and they are about the speediest string that ever broke away on the local track to the drop of the starter's flag.

The green class will also be a good event.

Lady May, the aristocratic record-breaker, with a mark of 2.03 1-4, will dazzle the spectators with an exhibition mile. Lady May is the property of Burns & Sheppard, Toronto, and is the fastest horse in Canada.

BASEBALL

WELLINGTONS WON.

Port Hope were defeated at Diamond Park, Toronto, Saturday, 7 runs to 6. The lakesiders led at the end of the seventh, the score being 6—3, but the Dukes corralled four runs in the eighth and cinched the game. Burns, Burridge and Chisatholm of the Peterborough team played for Port Hope.

About eight hundred enthusiasts witnessed the contest, which was exciting at times. Hickey held Port Hope down to five hits.

The teams were,—

Port Hope—O'Brien 3b, Burke lf, Burns cf, Burridge c, O'Brearn 2b, O'Neil rf, Kolb 1b, Cheatham ss, Surphlis p.

Wellingtons.—Burkhardt lf, Rodden 2b, Hanson cf, Winchester ss, J. Hickey 1b, Baker rf, Grabham c, Lea 3b, F. Hickey p.

BOWLING

There will be an important meeting of the local bowlers to-night at the Majestic Bowling alleys.

BENNETT WON 5 MILE RACE

Mr. J. Benett is the National running champion, provided, of course, National is spelled with a capital N. Last Saturday at the track on the exhibition grounds at Lindsay, during the progress of the fair at that place, Bennett, who is a youth of about 18, hailing originally from Ilford, Essex, England, and who is now bell boy at the National Hotel, won the five mile race from a field of seven competitors, among whom was Thornbury, an Indian, and nowadays, anyone who beats an Indian must be able to travel a mighty good clip. The track was muddy and greasy, and the going heavy.

When the runners breasted the tape, the timer's watch showed that the course had been covered in 33 minutes. The local "Longboat" led most of the way by a quarter of a mile, but in the last half mile, Thornbury and he had a tussle for the laurels. Bennett won by about fifty feet and as a result the value of his personal assets moved up a few notches, by being the possessor of a beautiful watch.

TURF

Hazel Belle, Lady Gothard, Queen's Baron, will go to Campbellford to-morrow. Brown Gyp and Harry Direct will start at Lakefield.

A BLUE RIBBON

Lady May, 2.03 1-4, the fastest horse in Canada, and the property of Burns & Sheppard, of Toronto, has been engaged to go an exhibition heat at the Peterborough Fall Fair. This event should be a great drawing card to all lovers of horse flesh.

The popular over blouse effect is charmingly simulated in this youthful costume, which skillfully combines a unique suggestion of the Japanese in the waist with the most modern ideas of shaping in the seven gored skirt. The waist owes much of its distinction to the fact that the body and sleeve caps are cut in one, while in the skirt the circular side and back gores, lapped over the straight gores, provide precisely the graceful effect which is most sought after in gowns for developing girlhood. This dress is suitable for modelling in any of the popular soft-draping fabrics, including rajah, foulard, voile and colienne; while it may either be decorated as pictured or trimmed with ribbon, embroidery or braid. To develop the medium size 7 3-8 yards of 27 inch material will be needed.

The price of this pattern is 10c.

Leave your order and 10c at the REVIEW OFFICE and will be sent you by mail.

HOW YOU GET CONSUMPTION.

Most "lungers" allowed their power of resistance to fall very low. Favorable conditions were provided for the development of the bacilli. Consumption was the result.

But in a healthy body Consumption can't take root. The most potent health-maker is Ferrozone. Take it regularly and you needn't fear tuberculosis.

FERROZONE

Supplies exactly what the man verging on Consumption needs. It forms rich, nutritious blood, strengthens the nerves, puts vim and endurance into every organ of the body.

Price 50c per box or six for $2.50, at all dealers, or by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont., and Hartford, Conn., U.S.A.

Another Steamer is Wrecked; A Shocking Marine Disaster

"Nimick" Smashed to Pieces on Vermillion Point.

Captain and Five Sailors Drowned—Canadian Members of the Crew Were Rescued—Machinery Broke Down in Heavy Gale—Vessel Ran on the Beach and Filled Rapidly—Some Bodies Recovered.

Sault St. Marie, Sept. 24.—One of the most disastrous wrecks on the lakes this season occurred Saturday night at 11 o'clock, when the steamer Alexandra Nimick went ashore at Vermillion Point and Capt. Randall and five of the crew were drowned.

A heavy northwest gale was blowing at the time and when off the point, 18 miles above White Fish, the Nimick's machinery suddenly broke down. The steamer was driven about helpless in the waves and finally beached on the point, where the heavy pounding of the waves soon broke her to pieces.

Life-saving station No. 9 is located on the point and through the heroic efforts of the life-savers 11 of the crew were saved. They were unable to save Capt. Randall and five of the crew, who were washed ashore by the heavy seas. Early Sunday morning three bodies were washed ashore by the waves. A searching party, headed by Mate Gordon, is looking for the remaining three.

Bodies at the Soo.

The first news of the wreck was received at Grand Marais by 'phone from the scene of the wreck, and the tug Boynton of the Great Lakes Co. went to the rescue. She arrived at the Soo yesterday morning about 11 o'clock, carrying the three bodies washed ashore and 11 survivors.

The remains of the drowned sailors were taken to Ryan's undertaking rooms, where they will remain until arrangements for disposal have been made. The survivors were a bedraggled group as they got off the boat yesterday morning and reported fully the awful experience they had gone through. The story as told by the survivors differs somewhat from that received in the Soo by telegraph.

The sailors say the steamer grounded about 7.30 o'clock Saturday evening and before being beached waves were continually washing completely over her and the ship began taking water. She was filling so rapidly that the captain deemed it best to run her ashore. This was done, but immediately upon striking the bow went to pieces, casting the men who were loat into the waves. Only those who were in the stern escaped.

A yawl boat was launched and ten men made way in her. The sailors say the chief engineer threw himself into the water and swam ashore. The drowned men were:

Capt. Randall, Algonac.
John Johnston, Glasgow, Mich.
Louis Rubey, Detroit.
Thomas Parent, Port Huron.

Of these men Johnston and the unknown firemen were brought to the Soo yesterday morning.

The Canadians Among Survivors.

The Nimick, a wooden steamer, built in 1890, was 318 feet long, 40 feet wide, with a gross tonnage of 1,968.

KAIDS DESIRED PEACE

Make Overtures to Gen. Drude After Successful Attack.

Hostilities Now at an End—Agree to Terms of French Commander After Strenuous Objections—All Arms to Be Surrendered—Camp Broken Up and Moors Dispersed—Terms to Be Carried Out.

Casablanca, Sept. 24—The destruction yesterday of the Moorish camp at Sidi Brahim, south of Casablanca, and the dispersal of the tribesmen have resulted in new overtures for peace. Nineteen Kaids, representing the Oulcecyan, Senate and Zyaida tribes, presented themselves at Gen. Drude's headquarters during the afternoon and lengthily discussed the conditions which the French commander projected for their submission. His terms include the unconditional surrender of the Moors with all their guns, against which the Kaids are holding out, but upon which the French authorities insist.

Paris, Sept. 24.—An official despatch received here from Gen. Drude confirms the unofficial advices from Casablanca that fresh overtures for peace had been made by the Moors, but the French Government announced that it was improbable, after the previous experiences with the hostile natives, that hostilities could be suspended, pending the result of the negotiations.

Peace in Morocco.

Paris, Sept. 24.—(Later.)—Peace has been declared in Morocco.

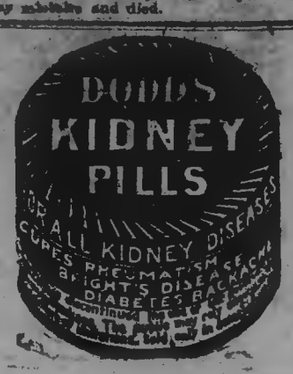
The delegates of these important tribes have accepted the French peace overtures inaugurated yesterday, and will see that the terms of the agreements are carried out.

Hostilities are now at an end.

Thomas Christopher, the London lad who swallowed a pin, may recover.

Mrs. James Stone, 74 years old, of London, was injured, perhaps fatally, by a street car on Saturday.

At Great Village, N.S., Dr. Poppard and Samuel Lindsay drank strychnine by mistake and died.



WIRELESS STATION READY.

Marconi Will Stay at Glace Bay Till First Message Goes.

Sydney, N.S., Sept. 24.—Signor Marconi reached Sydney yesterday morning and at once proceeded to Glace Bay to inspect his wireless telegraph station.

He said he intended remaining in Cape Breton till the station is opened, which would be in about three weeks. There was some testing to do and then they would get down to work.

"We shall have just a few friends present at the opening," he said. "We shall have some gentlemen of the press, but outside of these men we shall have no prominent men. We sent cables to the King of England and the King of Italy some time ago, when we first started, and when we begin commercial work we shall do by sending two or three messages, to some of the more influential newspapers. We shall make no show about it, but go along quietly. The press people have been good to us and we shall now be good to them."

"Have you overcome all obstacles, and are you now sure of success?"

"Yes, we have surmounted all the difficulties and we are sure of success."

The inventor said the continental Morse system would be used, but if the ordinary Morse code suited better that would be used. About twenty words a minute would be the speed.

The Canadian Pacific and Western Union have connections with the station, Signor Marconi said, and he hoped to do business with both companies. Asked if the cable companies would reduce their rates, he said he would not be surprised. If they did, it would be a good thing for the public.

"The wireless messages will be received at Clifden, Ireland, with the Cornwall station as a second string, to help out Clifden.

"Bad weather will have no effect on our system, provided it does not damage our masts and poles. Lightning storms will do us no harm," said Marconi.

After the messages reach Clifden the Government lines will take hold of them. The company has a contract with the British Government and the latter will look after the company's messages. The company has also a contract with the Canadian Government, and can use the I. C. R. wires.

Explorer Bruce Safe.

Tromsoe, Norway, Sept. 24.—William Bruce, the explorer, for whose safety much anxiety has been entertained, has arrived here.

Bruce, and his companion, H. Jalmar Johanson, established a station on the west coast of Prince Charles Island.

Prince Albert Bye-Election.

Regina, Sept. 24.—Writs have been issued for the Prince Albert bye-elections, caused by the resignation of J. Lamont. Nominations will take place on Oct. 2, and polling will take place Oct. 12.

HOW BLAZE WAS CAUSED.

"Picton" Fire Result of Pouring Oil Into Torch Can.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—A sensation was sprung last night at Coroner Wilson's inquest into the death of George Kleskis, who died on the burning steamer Picton last Saturday, when James Kane, a laborer, residing at 86 Sherbourne street, who had been hired as a wiper at noon on Saturday by Petit, the second engineer, told in the box how he accidentally set the boat on fire.

The R. & O. Navigation Co. officials have been in Toronto since Sunday afternoon investigating the cause of the fire, and late yesterday afternoon, after close examination, Kane admitted what he knew.

He said: "I tried to fill my lamp lighted from the oil. Somehow I dropped about a half pint of oil. The oil caught fire and a sudden blaze went up. I called to the engineer to bring a pail of water. I went there as a green hand and was not employed in this boat before."

The jury found a verdict in accordance with this evidence and added, "We find the company negligent in not enforcing discipline in the handling of the fire-fighting appliances."

ON VERGE OF MADNESS.

North Sydney, Sept. 24—The schooner Muriel M. Young, arrived yesterday morning from the Banks, having on board Benjamin Gerrier and Patrick Nolan, two of the crew of the schooner Judique, who strayed from their vessel. For four days and nights the men were buffeted by fierce seas. When picked up they were exhausted and on the verge of madness.

The tale of hardship told by Nolan was one of the most trying heard for many days. "From Wednesday until Saturday," says Nolan, "we had no food or water. On the second day, during an awful rain, thunder and lightning storm, Gerrier ate rotten squid which he found in the bottom of the dory. Immediately he took sick and that night become delirious. The sail was carried away. Believing all hope was gone we lay down, not knowing what our end might be.

"This continued until Saturday noon when we were picked up and taken helpless from the bottom of the dory and put on board the schooner."

MURDER TRIAL AT WHITBY.

C. P. R. Conductor Faces Jury For Myrtle Railway Collision.

Whitby, Sept. 24.—The autumn Assizes opened before Justice McMahon with a murder trial, and the further investigation of the C. P. R. collision at Myrtle last March, when two employes were killed.

The court room was crowded and the gallery filled with ladies.

Adam Ludwig, a Brock Township farmer, is to be tried for shooting the top of his wife's head off with a shotgun on July 20 last. From evidence recapitulated by the court in presenting the case to the grand jury the man must have been insane.

In the Myrtle railway case, James P. Cook, conductor of train, whose failure to cross freight special 1488 at Myrtle caused the catastrophe, is charged with manslaughter. Kyle, the engine driver, and the train despatcher, who failed to repeat the order to the operator at Myrtle, are also likely to be indicted.

FIVE HUNDRED PAID TAX.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—A telegram has been received from Vancouver by the Department of Trade and Commerce, stating that the Empress of India has landed 508 Chinese at that port.

Of these 100 paid the poll-tax of $500 each, and 100 were Chinese returning to Canada, these being exempt from the tax.

The remaining 300 are en route to the United States or other countries.

Another Camp Victim.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—A special from Pembroke to Ottawa yesterday says: "The death of Pte. Fred Leth, a young Englishman, on Saturday evening here from typhoid fever, contracted at Petawawa camp, has again started considerable gossip. He is the third victim and at present there are seven other soldiers suffering with the same disease in the Pembroke Hospital." Complaints will be made to the Minister of Militia.

Keewatin Reported.

Montreal, Sept. 24.—The C. P. R. steamer Keewatin, bound for the lakes, where she will in future navigate, is reported in the gulf, and will proceed to Quebec to go through the process of being cut in two for the trip up the river to go through the canals.

The Assiniboia, a sister ship, has about completed that process at Quebec, and will start west in a few days.

Switchman Snuick Acquitted.

Brantford, Sept. 24.—George Snuick, G. T. R. switchman, charged with criminal negligence, causing the death of a trainman here, was honorably acquitted by Judge Hardy.

It was shown that the wreck was due to misinterpretation of the lantern signal which was given by the crew of another train in the yards.

Australia on the Strand.

London, Sept. 24.—(C. A. P.)—The Melbourne Federal House of Representatives is expected to-day to endorse Hon. Mr. Lyne's selection of the Strand site for the Commonwealth's London building. The option on the site expires on Thursday. The Government will erect a permanent exhibition of Australian products.

Executed Without Trial.

Lodz, Russian Poland, Sept. 24.—Seven workmen and one girl were executed by shooting here yesterday without trial, for participating in the murder of Marquis Silberstein, owner of a large cotton mill, who was killed by his employes Sept. 13, because he refused to pay them for the time they were out on strike.

John Dickenson, M.P.P., has retired from the Board of the Dominion Power and Transmission Co., Hamilton.

KILLED FOR REVENGE

Factory Owner Victim of Shocking Crime in New York.

Struck Down by Unknown Hand—Assassin's Blade Inflicted Nineteen Wounds—Body Fearfully Mutilated—Finger Prints the Only Clue—Jealousy and Revenge Motives For the Murder—Employes Arrested.

New York, Sept. 24.—Eppiaonio Arcara, proprietor of an East Side ladies' skirt factory, whose love affairs had been the gossip of his thirty men and women employes, was done to death in his factory on Sunday, and the body subjected to revolting treatment. His enemy, not satisfied after inflicting 18 stilleto wounds, any one or two of which would have caused death, slashed the lower limbs and removed vital organs. The police clue is two clearly defined prints of a thumb and forefinger on the jamb of the factory door. It is possible also that missing organs, as well as the stilleto with which the job was clearly done, may be discovered, but no trace of those have been found. Arcara's bookkeeper and his foreman have been detained by the police. From these and other employes some information as to the man's life may show a motive, it is expected.

Arcara was in the habit of going alone to his factory on East 107th street Sundays to plan the week's work. An employe, dropping into the place on Sunday last, found him dead on the floor of his office. There were 19 stab wounds in the breast, seven near the heart, while the subsequent mutilation was frightful, according to the coroner's physician.

When Arcara's wife died a year ago she left three children. Soon afterwards Arcara went to Palermo and married his wife's sister. Of the many stories told the police one was to the effect that the skirt man was engaged to a girl here, but was induced by his family to marry the woman in Italy. They also learned that a woman known only as "Vita," who had been Arcara's forelady for years, suddenly left his employ after the second marriage. Arcara's bookkeeper is one Castagne, and his foreman, Francesco Stilotias. The police say that the direct motive was unquestionably revenge.

MAY AVERT A STRIKE.

Leader of Railway Employes Anxious to Find Peaceful Solution.

London, Sept. 24.—The indication yesterday rather favored the idea that a strike of the railway employes will be averted, M. Bell, M. P., the leader of the strike movement, addressing a large body of railway men at Cardiff on Sunday, adopted a very moderate tone. He explained that, even if a ballot of the workingmen favored a strike, the men would not be called out immediately, but renewed efforts would be made to induce the railway directors to reconsider their decision not to grant the demands of the men. He realized, he said, that a strike would be a terrible calamity and declared that he intended to exhaust every means to arrive at a peaceful solution of the trouble. Large meetings of railway men were held throughout the country on Sunday to discuss the situation.

OUR IMMIGRATION POLICY.

Birmingham Post Praises Work of Department at Ottawa.

London, Sept. 24.—(C. A. P.)—The Birmingham Daily Post, referring to the 21,000 emigrants to Canada this year, says the number does credit to the Immigration Department at Ottawa. Through its agencies it has brought the business of attracting population to a high degree of perfection. The Post is glad to see the tendency of its policy has been to stimulate English emigrants, rather than those from southeastern Europe. In conclusion, The Post says: "The honest serving-maid, who carries her trunk into the steerage of the Atlantic liner has a good sporting chance of driving her own carriage in Montreal or Winnipeg before she has lost the beauty of youth."

Death Through Exposure.

Hamilton, Sept. 24.—The inquest on the body of the infant found in Mrs. Simpson's shed on North James street was concluded last evening without throwing any light on the identity of the mother. The verdict was that it came to its death through exposure.

Detective Huckle, one of the jurymen, wanted his colleagues to censure the police for neglecting the case.

Ottawa Sleeps.

London, Sept. 24.—(C. A. P.)—The Pall Mall Gazette says the situation is too critical for procrastination.

Laurier's letter on the crisis is a trifle too diplomatic in tone to have a soothing effect on western feeling, and suggests, indeed, that Ottawa is still only rubbing its eyes over incidents of the month.

WILL NOT PAY FOR WATER.

Ontario Government Objects—Service Shut Off at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—The Ontario Government has made a protest against paying the regular water rates here. The auditor for the Ontario Government Educational Department was in the city yesterday, and will consult with the chairman of the waterworks committee.

The matter came to a head when the city solicitor shut off the water ten days ago, because the rates for this year had not been paid. On the understanding that there would be some arrangement made right away, and in view of the hardships which would be caused in the schools by lack of water, the collector and city engineer agreed to have the water turned on almost immediately.

One claim made by the Government is that it should be exempt from water rates on Government property. The city's reply to this was that only Dominion Government property is exempt, and that by a special agreement with the city.

DASH FOR NORTH POLE.

Dr. Cook 190 Miles Away From the Desired Goal.

The yacht left Dr. Cook and a Norwegian steward at Etah, 190 miles from the north pole, together with provisions. Both will take Esquimaux and dogs and make a dash for the pole.

Dr. Cook accompanied Peary on a previous trip north, and is confident of making good where Peary failed. Mrs. Cook and family are at Margaree, C. B.

Sinks at Launching.

Rome, Sept. 24.—While the Italian Lloyd's transatlantic steamer Princess Yolanda, 12,000 tons, the largest emigrant ship ever built in Italy, was being launched at Rivatrigoso, near Spezia, she keeled over and rushed into the sea on her side and sank. There were many workmen on board who were rescued with difficulty. The damage is estimated at half a million lire.

Admissions Involve Hotel Men.

Belleville, Sept. 24.—A few days ago a young man named John Wilson was arrested here, charged with an offence. He pleaded in extenuation that he was intoxicated. He was only 19 years of age. As a result of his alleged admissions, information have been laid against the proprietors of the Queen's, Victoria, Dominion and City hotels.

Barge Mills on Fire.

Port Hope, Sept. 24.—The barge Mills, had a narrow escape while up the lake recovering the spreads and dipper of the dredge Sir Wilfrid. Fire started around the boiler, and spread rapidly. The tug Diver was near at hand, and the fire was extinguished.

Drowned at Driftwood.

A boat in which he and four others were going ashore in capsized. Fitzgerald sank in 70 feet of water.

May Send Smith Back.

The Last Stroke.

BY LAWRENCE L. LYNCH,

Author of "A Woman's Crime," "John Arthur's Ward," "The Diamond Coterie," "Against Odds," Etc.

"Ah! I like that."

"Why?"

"Because it sounds as if you had really found the end of your thread here."

"Oh, yes. The beginning is here. Not of the case, mind; only of the clues. But heaven only knows where it may lead us before we find the end."

"What matters," said the brother of Charles Brierly, with a heavy sigh, "so long as it brings us to the truth!"

CHAPTER XII.

On the fourth day after Charles Brierly's untimely death his body was taken to the city and laid beside his parents in the beautiful cemetery where love and grief had already prepared for him and his, a place of final rest.

News of the burial had been sent ahead, and a crowd of friends had assembled at the home of their father's oldest friend and family lawyer, where the body was received as that of a son, and the last rites of affection and respect were performed by the venerable rector who had seen the brothers grow from boys to men.

Doctor Barnes and Hilda Grant, with Mrs. Marcy as chaperone, accompanied the sad hearted brother upon this journey, and they were somewhat surprised when Ferrars, whom they had thought must go with them in his character of sole relative to the young lady, explained that his presence in Glenville just then was essential to the success of the work he had been called there to do.

"There are so many little things which I want to learn," he said. "In fact, I must know Glenville much better before I can go far in my search, and during your absence I can find time for making new acquaintances and I mean to begin by cultivating your friend Doran, doctor."

They were gone three days, and when they returned they were but a party of three. "Poor Charley Brierly," as his friends in the city had already begun to call the dead, lay in his last, quiet earthly home, and Robert had remained in the city.

"To settle up his brother's affairs, and put the matter of his death into the hands of the detectives." At least this is what Mr. Doran informed one of the loungers who, seeing the return of the doctor and the two ladies, had remarked upon Brierly's absence.

"Of course he'll have to come back there," Doran further added. "He ain't touched the things in his brother's rooms yet, they say. But they'll wait, better than the other business."

"Umph!" the villager sniffed. "He's let three days slip by without makin' much of a stir. Why on earth ain't they had one o' them fellers down here long before this? They ain't seemed to hurry much."

"Well, you see, at first 'twas more than half believed that the shooting must have been by accident; and then, this is just between you and me, Jones; didn't you ever think that even after that jury's verdict, and the doctor's testimony, they, Doc and the brother, might have wanted to make sure, by a sort of private and more thorough investigation of the wound, eh?"

"By crackey! Now that you speak of it, I heard Mason say't they was up an' movin' round at the doctor's that live long night! Yes, sir, I reckon you've hit it!"

"Sly!" mused Samuel Doran as he moved away from the gossip. "They bite at my yarns like babies on a toothin' ring. Doc knows his fellow critters, sure enough, and my work's laid out for me, I guess."

For Doran, after due consultation, and upon the doctor's voucher, had been taken a little way into the confidence of the three men, and Ferrars began to foresee in him a reliable helper.

The above brief conversation took place between Doran and Mr. Jones, professional depot-lounger and occasional worker at odd jobs, while the doctor was putting Hilda and Mrs. Marcy into a waiting carriage, and when he had seen it drive away up town, Doran came forward and addressed him in a tone quite audible to the bystanders.

"You see, I didn't forget the carriage, Doc. Hope Miss Grant ain't none the worse for her sad sort of journey." And then as the two walked away from the platform together, and he saw the doctor's eyes glancing from side to side, Doran went on. "Looking for Mr. Grant, Doc? Well, I guess you won't see him; not before supper-time, anyhow. Fact is, I guess he's sort of fancy struck on that pretty-faced widow down at the Glenville House and he's taken her out behind my greys this afternoon. I don't know as I blame him any; she is a dainty little wid."

The doctor stared at him in amazement at his first words, and then broke into a hearty laugh over the last.

"Upon my word, Doran, you will be able to write a new dictionary of abbreviations some day! Doran's Original! A dainty wid, is very good in its way; only, is she a 'wid.'?"

At the next corner Doran halted. "Have to tear myself away," he said, amiably. "See you later," and the two men separated.

"Well, old man, how have you fared during the lull in your business?" asked Dr. Barnes as his man came to meet him. "You don't look overworked"

"I ain't been, neither sah. Your Mr. Grant or Ferrars, I ain't rightly got his name, I guess, he 'pears ter like the cooks down to the Glenville better than me. I ain't had no bother with him since you left, sir, 'cept to make up his bed."

"I know. He has found some friends there, I fancy, Jude. Any news or messages?" and the doctor became at once absorbed in his neglected business.

Ferrars made his appearance at "supper time," as Doran had described the evening meal, and the two men had much to discuss. When Jude had placed the last dishes, and retired, the detective, who thus far had been listening to the doctor's account of the journey and the sad funeral obsequies, looked up and said: "suppose you have heard of my wanderings, doctor, and how I have forsaken poor Jude? The fact is, I have found plenty of leisure, and Mrs. Jamieson, when one comes to know her a little, is a very ab—interesting woman. The sort of woman, in fact, whose society I now and then enjoy. I have not neglected my duty, however, but there is absolutely nothing new. And, by the way, I must see Miss Grant this evening; after that, if you are at liberty, we must have a walk. I have decided upon a change of plan, of which you must know."

He had left a note for Miss Grant, which advised her of his intended call as soon as she should have become rested and refreshed. He was glad to find her so strong and so composed, and he came at once to the business in hand.

"Miss Grant," he began, "As I said in my note, I have something to propose to you which has presented itself to me as the best course during your absence; and, to begin, let me ask, have you still full confidence in me, as a detective, and as a man whom you may trust?"

She lifted her fine, clear eyes to his face and kept them there while she replied.

"I felt that I could trust you, Mr. Ferrars, when we first met. There has been no change in that feeling unless it may be the change to a larger measure of trust and confidence."

"Thank you." And now the cool detective flushed like a school boy. "I shall try hard to deserve your good opinion, and it encourages me to broach my singular proposal. I believe it will enable me to get on easier and with more rapidity if you will permit me to continue for an indefinite time in the role which I did not at first choose for myself, and I ask you if I may still remain, in the eyes of Glenville, as now, in the character of your cousin."

"To remain—in Glenville?"

"When Doctor Barnes sent for me, advising me that I might arrive in the character of your cousin, it was of course with the idea that this masquerade would be a brief one, and it was undertaken because the doctor knew how it would hamper, if not really balk, my attempts to unravel this mystery if I were known as a detective. I cannot explain now, but I ask you to believe that, being here, I am now convinced that in laying aside this character I should put out of my hands my best weapon, the most direct means of following up and ferreting out a crime which I fully believe will prove to have been — that is if we succeeded in finding out the truth — a crime with a far-reaching plot behind it, and the cause of which most of us have not even remotely dreamed of."

"You have said enough. All is in your hands. Be what you will and must, the better to prove to the world that Charles Brierly, my husband in the sight of heaven, died as he lived, an upright gentleman and martyr, and not the suicide or the victim of a righteous vengeance that most people would forever declare him if the truth is not made known."

"Understand," he urged, "that if you consent to this, you, as well as myself, will have a part to play, and an active part, perhaps, in the drama we are about to begin. Remember, you will have to keep up the deception for weeks, possibly months; and to go and come at my desire."

"Do you mean," she asked, breathlessly, "that you may need my help?"

"I do need your help!"

"Oh!" she cried, letting go her splendid self-restraint for the moment. "You don't know what you are doing for me! To be active; to do something, instead of sitting still and eating my heart out in suspense. It will save me from madness, perhaps. What could a true relative do for me more than you are doing and will do. You are my cousin!" And she put out her two hands to him with a new look of energy and resolve in her face. As he took the two slim hands in both his own, and looked in her eyes, suddenly so aroused and purposeful, he saw, for the first time, the full strength and force of will and nature behind her fair face and gentle bearing, the high spirit and courage animating the slender frame.

"Thank you," he said simply as he released her hands. "I feel that I can, indeed, rely upon you at need. You have the strength; can you have the patience, as well? At present I can tell you very little. You will have to take much upon trust."

"I have anticipated that."

"For example, it is my inflexible rule never to reveal the name of a suspected person until I have at least partial proof of guilt, enough to warrant an arrest. But you have a right to such confidences as I can give, and so, if you have a question to ask, and I think you have, let me answer it if I can."

"Oh, I thank you." She came a step nearer. "I ask myself one question, over and over; that there was no guilty secret in my poor boy's life and death, I know. Where, then, can be the motive?"

"The motive, Ah! When we know that, we shall be at the beginning of the end of the matter. Sit down, Miss Grant, and I will put the case before you as I now see it."

She sank into the nearest seat without a word.

"As to the manner of the murder," he went on, "this is my conclusion. Some one, an enemy who hated or feared him, has informed himself of Mr. Charles Brierly's habits, and made himself familiar with the woods along the lake shore. Your friend, I learn, has practiced target-shooting for some time. Have you ever thought that he might have had a reason for so doing?"

"Good heavens! No!"

"Well, that is only a suggestion. But this much in addition the deed was premeditated, and carefully planned. I have satisfied myself that the assassin, approaching from the south, made almost the circuit of that long mound, after making sure that no one was near, in order to reach the point, scarcely twelve feet from the place where the body was found, from which to fire the fatal shot."

"My God!"

"It was a bold venture, but not so dangerous as might at first appear. I find that from a point half way to the top of the mound one might be quite concealed from anyone down by the lake shore while taking a long look up and down the road. And, in case of approach, there is at the south end of the mound a clump of bushes and young trees, where one could easily remain concealed while awaiting the victim or the passing of an interloper. From the town to a point not far south of the knoll or mound, as your people call it, the ground between the road and lake has been partially cleared of undergrowth for the comfort of picnickers and fishing parties, I am told."

"Yes." She sighed wonderingly. "But beyond that, a person wishing to be unseen from the lake or road could easily hide among the brush and trees. I believe all this was carefully studied, and carried out, and that, five minutes after the shots were fired, the slayer was on his way southward to some point where a confederate waited, with some means of conveying themselves to a safe distance."

"Ah!" she whispered. "The boat?"

"Yes, the boat. It was a part of the plot, and rowed to that point by the confederate, I believe, for the purpose of misleading justice. Doran, who is an able helper, learned this morning that a farm hand, who was driving his stock across the road to drink at the lake, saw a man in a boat rowing up towards Glenville at half past seven that morning."

"Oh! And can you follow them? Is the trail strong enough?"

"I think so. And there are other clues. There is much to be done here in Glenville, first of all. At the inquest the testimony was purposely left vague and uncertain at some points."

"And why?"

"Because, somewhere, not far away, there is a person who is watching developments, and who may leave some track unsevered, if he can be made to think we are off the scent. I mean to know my Glenville very well before I leave it, and some of its people, too. And here you can help me as soon as you are strong enough."

"I am strong enough now. What more can I do?"

"You remember the foolish boy and his fright when questioned?"

"Of course."

"Well, as his teacher, can you win his confidence until his fear is overcome? That boy has not told all he knows."

"He is very dull, I fear. He said he saw a ghost."

"Well, we must know the nature of that ghost, and why it has closed his lips so effectually. Seriously I hope much from that lad."

"Then, be sure, I will do my best."

"You see, I am taking you at your word. And there's one more thing. I have been told that strangers go oftenest to the Glenville, when in town. Now it behooves me to know the latest comers, and the newcomers there, and chance having given me the opportunity to break the ice by being polite to Mrs. Jamieson, I have improved the moments. I don't mean that I am studying the lady for any sinister purpose, but one can see that she is quite a social leader in the house, and through her I have already come to know several of the other inmates. Mrs. Jamieson very much desires to know you, and if you will allow her to call, as under the circumstances she desires to do, and if you will return that call — in short put yourself upon the footing of an acquaintance — it will really help me greatly."

For a long moment Hilda did not speak, then "I will do as you wish, of course," she said, but the note of eager readiness had gone out of her voice. "But I cannot even think of that woman without living over again our first meeting and the awful blow her news dealt me. Will I ever outlive the hurt of it?"

"It hurt her, too; I am sure of that. She is a keenly sensitive woman. She went from your school room really ill, so her friend has told me."

"I can well believe that. She looked ill when she came to me. And who can wonder?" her tone softening. "Mrs. Jamieson is certainly kind, and why should we not be friends? She is a lady, refined and charming. Don't think me unreasonable, Mr. Ferrars. I shall be pleased to receive her, of course."

"Thank you. And remember, that for the present Francis Ferrars becomes Ferris—Ferris Grant. You'll not forget your part!"

"I will not forget," she answered. And when he was gone, she smiled a sad little womanly smile. "After all, a detective is but a man; and that petite, soft-spoken, dainty blonde woman is just the sort to fascinate a big-hearted, strong man like Francis Ferrars."

CHAPTER XIII.

"Has Doran been here, doctor?"

These were the detective's first words when he entered the sanctum upon his return from the Marcy cottage, and before his host could do more than shake his head, Ferrars dropped into a seat beside him and went on in a lower tone.

"The fact is, doctor, I've got myself interested in a thing which, after all, may lead me astray. Do you take the 'Lake County Herald?'"

"Upon my word!" ejaculated the doctor. "I do; yes. Want to peruse the sheet?"

"I don't suppose you file them?" went on Ferrars.

"File the 'Herald!' No, I fire them, or Jude does."

"I wish you had not. The fact is I want very much to get hold of a copy dated November last, the 27th. Do you recall the bit of paper I took from Charles Brierly's desktop to demonstrate that something had been hastily pulled from the letter file by that clever boy of whom Mrs. Fry could tell so little?"

"Yes; surely." The doctor now began to look seriously interested.

"Well, the stolen paper was a newspaper clipping, out from the 'Herald' of November 27th, last."

"Upon my word! But there I won't ask questions."

"You need not. Did you not observe me looking over the papers in the rack?"

"Yes."

"Possibly you saw me with a paper in my hand soon after?"

The doctor started and shook his head. "I've no eye for slight-of-hand," he grumbled.

"Decidedly not, for I folded up that paper and thrust it in a breast pocket before your very eyes. I kept that tiny bit, too, which I picked up on my forefinger. It fitted into a column from which a piece had been cut, and that's how I know that the stolen article came from that paper. Very simple, after all, you see!"

"For you, yes."

"The fact that the clipping was thought worth stealing, makes me fancy it worth a perusal. I tried for it here in town, in a quiet way, but failed. Then I appealed to Doran, and he has written to Lake, to the editor, whom he happens to know."

"It would be hard to find hereabouts a man of any importance whatever whom Sam Doran does not know. He grew up in Lake County, and has held half the offices in the county's gift."

"There may be a clue for us in that clipping. I discovered another thing in that room. The dead man wrote, or began, a letter to his brother. I learned this from a scrap dated and addressed, which I found in the waste basket, and I am led to believe the letter was rewritten, or rather begun anew, and sent, from the fact that a fresh blotter showed a fragment of Brierly's name, and the city address. That letter, if mailed, must have passed him as he came down. Did he mention getting it?"

Doctor Barnes shook his head.

"He said nothing about such a letter," he replied. "Does he know about this—this newspaper business?"

"Not a word. No one knows it but yourself. If it should prove to be a clue in my hands, it may be better, it will be better, I am sure, to keep it at present between us two. I think, however, that I may decide to show Miss — my cousin — that anonymous letter, and tell her something about that mysterious boy and his visit to her lover's rooms." And then Ferrars turned from this subject to explain to the doctor his present plans. How he had determined to continue his masquerade, and to remain for a time in Glenville; and though Mrs. Jamieson's name was not uttered, the doctor found himself wondering, as had Hilda Grant, if the detective had not found the place attractive for personal as well as business reasons, and if a detective's heart must needs be of adamant after all.

Next morning Samuel Doran, who knew the detective only as "Hilda Grant's cousin and a right good fellow," drove ostentatiously to the door to take "Mr. Grant" for a drive.

"I've had a line from Joe Howlett," he began the moment they were upon the road, "He was just setting out for a run out of town but he says he told the boys to look up that paper and send it along. So, I guess we'll see it soon, if it's in existence." And Doran chirruped to his team and promptly changed the subject. He did not know why this man beside him so much wished to obtain a six-months old copy of a country newspaper, and he did not trouble himself to worry or wonder. "It was none of his business," he would have said if questioned, and Samuel Doran attended to his own business exclusively and was by so much the more a reliable helper when, his aid being asked, the business of his neighbor became known.

Flour is Now $6 per Barrel

There is a Great Scarcity of Western Wheat, Dealers Say

Flour still keeps going up in price. It is now $6 per barrel for Manitoba wheat flour, and $5.00 per barrel for strong bakers. This is a great advance in price over that asked for early in the season.

"Do you expect flour to keep on increasing in price for some time" the Review asked a local flour and feed merchant this morning.

"That depends," he replied, to a great extent on how strong the demand for wheat for the Old Country is. If large quantities are demanded there, the price will, of necessity, be higher here."

He remarked that there is only a yield of $50,000,000 of wheat as against 120,000,000 last year. There have been no wheat deliveries of any importance yet this fall, and an opinion as to the probable price of flour this winter would be premature. However, there is no doubt that it will be considerably higher than usual."

Many Attended the Tea Meeting

Enjoyable Time Spent at Villiers —Good Programme

One of the most successful and well-attended tea meetings held in connection with Villier's Union Sunday school, was held on Friday night, 20th inst.

Tea was prepared and served by the ladies of the neighborhood and in connection with the school, and was served from 5 to 7.30. By eight o'clock, the day-school room where the programme was rendered, was packed to its utmost capacity. Mr. John Lancaster, the worthy superintendent, occupied the chair. Vocal solos and duetts were rendered by Miss Bryce, Miss Harrison, Miss Bell, Miss Hope, Mrs. R. Campbell, Mr. John McFarlane of Keene; Mr. Peter Gillespie, an old Villiers' boys, now of Hastings; violin solo by Miss Rimhirst, and comic recitations by Misses Young and Nelson of Villiers. Misses Aggie and Lizzie Dickson also rendered an instrumental duet. Each and all selections were without criticism, and received hearty encores, but owing to the lengthy programme it was decided to have no encores. Rev. Mr. McDonald of Keene, and Rev. Mr. Pingford, of Norwood, in a few well-chosen remarks, tendered a vote of thanks to the chairman, to each and all who had taken part both in the programme and repast. The proceeds amounted to about $50 which will be devoted towards the Library fund of the Sunday school.

Many familiar faces were found in the crowd, from Keene, Lang, Indian River, Westwood, Hastings and Norwood.

OBITUARY

LIONEL KENNYE.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Harrington Kennye of the 2nd line of Smith, will sympathize with them in the loss they have sustained in the death of their infant son, which took place last night. The child was five months old.

The funeral took place this afternoon at two o'clock, to the Little Lake cemetery.

FRANK SISSON.

Death, which seems at all times an unwelcome visitor from mortal view appears especially so when the victim is just standing on the threshold of life and a promising career is nipped in the bud. Particularly sad is the death of Frank Sisson, son of Mrs. Sisson, and the late Thomas Sisson, who passed away at his home in Otonabee, about seven miles from the city, at eight o'clock this morning. Deceased was twenty-two years of age and had been ill for the past six-teen months. At times hopes were entertained for his recovery, but he gradually sank until he passed peacefully away. He was a bright young man and had a large number of warm friends to whom his death will come as a severe blow. He is survived by his mother, two brothers, Walton, at home, and Charlie, of this city, and one sister, Mrs. Geo. Stewart, of Otonabee. They will have the sincere sympathy of many friends in their sad bereavement.

The funeral will take place on Thursday morning at ten o'clock from the family residence, Otonabee, to St. John's cemetery, Cavan.

GENEROSITY IS APPRECIATED

Look Out for Them at the Peterborough Industrial—Many Were Touched at the Lindsay Fair.

Keep your eye skinned for pickpockets at the big Peterborough Industrial Exhibition on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. There are sure to be enormous crowds in attendance especially on Friday and Saturday, and the light fingered gentry will have an excellent chance to get in their work. Apparently there are a number of pickpockets following the fairs as several people were "touched" at the Lindsay show and are now bewailing the loss of various sums. However, the last batch of roll lifters who came to Peterborough had a somewhat unpleasant experience and probably the word has been passed among those in the profession to give the Electric City a wide berth.

The Lindsay Post has the following regarding the doings of the pickpockets in that town:

"That pickpockets were in Lindsay during the fair last week is particularly evident to many who have had wads of the long greens cleverly taken out of their pockets in crowds. Not a few are now wishing they had left their money at home.

Mr. Thomas Puley, of Woodville, was relieved of twenty-five greenbacks at the G.T.R. station on Saturday night. The money was taken from his trousers pocket as he got on the 6.23 train for his home. He was in town this morning and informed Chief Vincent of his loss.

Miss Hill, of Toronto, lost a gold watch, which Mr. George Bell found and promptly restored to her through the medium of the Post. Miss Hill was delighted to recover the timepiece.

A gentleman got a couple of tickets on Saturday for the grandstand. He put the change of ten dollars in his pocket, and when he sat down it was gone. Someone had transplanted it.

Mr. S. Oliver found a purse at his stand, which he advertised in the Found column of The Post. Mr. Dave Logan, a farmer near Bobcaygeon, was robbed of $9 by pickpockets."

Buffalo Woman's Awful Crime; Murders Her Three Children

Then Went to Shop Where Husband Was Working and Told Him What She Had Done,

Special to the Review.

Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 24th.—Mrs. Bertha Mund, 37 years old, wife of Fred Mund, murdered her three children about 8 o'clock this morning, by strangling. The slaughtered children were Christian, 8 years old; Helen, 2 years old, and Fred, 8 months old. The children were all sleeping when their mother destroyed them.

After killing the children Mrs. Mund went to the Pennsylvania Round House, where her husband works, and told him she had killed the children. She was taken to police headquarters.

She is believed to be insane.

Everything in Readiness For the Exhibition Opening

Directors Met Last Night--Tents Being Put Up at the Grounds--Barnardo Home Children Admitted Free

At the meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Fair last night, a general review of the business in connection with the exhibition was made. There were present:—President Leary, Secretary Hall and Directors Bell, Elliott, Conway, Garbutt, O'Shea and Gillespie.

All those in attendance were well satisfied with the way everything relating to the fair had progressed.

"I am pleased to note that we are so well up with the work," said President Leary.

MANY TENTS.

The fair grounds are beginning to assume a business-like appearance, and many tents have been pitched. The exhibit building is so crowded that many large local concerns cannot secure space to display their exhibits, and as a consequence have been forced to put up tents for that purpose. Two 60 foot flag poles are being erected today for the purpose of displaying the largest flag in Canada.

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS.

The special attractions this year will be away ahead of those of former years, and, to use Director Bell's expression, "The Midway will be immense." The grand stand performance is sure to be a great drawing card, and the talent engaged are the best that the society could secure. A good grand stand performance is the spice of any fair, and the directors of the local exhibition are to be congratulated upon their enterprise in engaging high class vaudeville performers to entertain and amuse their patrons.

There will be lots of starters in the dog race this year, and this amusing feature of last year's fair promises to be more closely contested than ever.

BENEVOLENCE OF DIRECTORS.

The directors deserve credit for their generous action in instructing Secretary Hall to inform the superintendent of the Barnardo Home that all the children of "Hazel Brae" would be admitted free to the exhibition.

Sept. 26th, 27th and 28th bid fair to be the three most prosperous days in the history of the Peterborough Industrial Fair.

Disastrous Blaze on Charlotte St.; Parker's Dye Works Damaged

Nearly Every Thing in the Laundry Destroyed—Front Portion of the Building Saved—Firemen Had Fierce Fight—Arrangements Made for Carrying on Business.

Shortly after eight o'clock last evening, Peterborough's extensive dyeing and cleaning works, on Charlotte street, was visited by a disastrous fire.

The laundry and dye works departments were completely destroyed. The residence and office to the front of the works were saved. The loss will be a heavy one, but just what the amount is, could not be learned, as Mr. Alfred Parker, proprietor of the establishment, is out of the city. The fire occurred at a particularly busy time of the year, and several large orders from all the agencies of the works were in to be attended to. Being the first of the week, there also was a great quantity of goods to be cleaned. It is estimated that considerably over one thousand dollars' worth of goods, either to be laundered, pressed or dyed have been destroyed.

Almost everything in the laundry was burned, but until the condition of things is carefully investigated, just what was lost cannot be ascertained.

Mr. Robert Beach, manager of the works, stated to the Review today that the business would be continued and orders taken the same as ever. The work will likely be done at the Hamilton or Ottawa works of Mr. Parker.

While the origin is not exactly known, it is thought the fire started from a live wire. No other reason can be advanced, as just a few minutes before it started, Mr. Beach made a thorough inspection of the whole building. He then left for the Grand Opera House to play in the orchestra. Mr. Beach did not leave his shop until five minutes past eight opening overture, when he was and had not commenced to play the called away. Thus it can be seen that the blaze started very quickly.

Mrs. Beach was first notified that the place was on fire by two men who came rushing into the house. Mrs. Beach ran out and opening the door into the press room, found the whole place illuminated by a great blaze. She was greatly surprised as not five minutes before, the room was all right. A few minutes after the fire began the electric lights went out, and this shows, in the opinion of some, that there must have been a defective wire.

One minute after the alarm was pulled, the fire brigade was on the scene of the disaster. Soon three streams were playing on the building and from then until after one o'clock the firemen worked hard and heroically to save the works. Had there been any wind, it is likely the whole structure would have been wiped away.

Fortunately there were no chemicals, such as gasoline or benzine in the place or the blaze would have quickly spread. Mr. Beach's home narrowly escaped being burned. The flames started to come in, at the head of the back stairs, and an immense hole in the ceiling marks the place where they burned through. Fortunately, Mr. Thomas Hooper, who was an indefatigable worker at the fire noticed this in time and had the hose turned on. Mr. A. A. Hollingshead, Mr. Robt. Neill and others also worked like Trojans to save the building, and to these gentlemen Mr. Beach feels deeply grateful.

The firemen were again called to the scene this morning about five o'clock, and worked until all signs of smoke or fire were extinguished.

Mr. Beach stated this morning that a large quantity of drugs used for dyeing purposes were destroyed and from these there would be a loss of from five to six hundred dollars, there being no insurance on them. Mr. Beach also lost a set of orchestra bells, valued at forty dollars, which were only purchased a short time ago.

The business is owned by Mr. Alfred Parker, but for the past two years has been managed by Mr. Beach.

LOSS $6,000.

Mr. Alfred Parker, proprietor of the works, arrived in the city at noon from Hamilton, and in conversation with the Review, stated that the loss to the laundry and dye works combined would be in the neighborhood of $4,000, and very little was covered by insurance. The loss of goods would be about $2,000 making a total loss of $6,000. Mr. Parker further stated that the building would be rebuilt at once.

Mr. Percy Hetherington managed the laundry business, while the dye works were controlled by Mr. Beach.

AMUSEMENTS

LITTLE DOLLIE DIMPLES.

The largest audience of the season was at the Grand opera house last night when the "two act musical playlet, Little Dolly Dimples," was presented. And it proved to be a stellar attraction. The opinion was unanimously expressed that it was one of the best productions of its kind ever seen in Peterborough. "Little Dollie Dimples" is described on the programme as a "musical playlet," and no matter what that means the piece is all to the good. There was variety enough to satisfy everyone. While based on the same lines as the average musical comedy there was considerable vaudeville throughout, a well defined "plot" that worked out as it should have, and incidentally there was a touch of melodrama just before the close of the first act. In fact there was a little bit of everything and it all combined to make an ideal attraction.

Grace Cameron, as "Dollie," became a favorite as soon as she appeared on the stage and completely captivated the audience before the curtain was rung down. As the unsophisticated country girl in the first act and in the role of the French maid in the second, she showed great ability and was repeatedly encored. She also has a pleasing voice and her vocal numbers were received with much enthusiasm. Al. Lawrence, as "Hiram Skinner," was comedy personified and a look from him was sufficient to set up a roar of laughter. He was something different from the ordinary comedian and a big improvement in many respects. The company was strong throughout, a feature being musical turns by several talented artists. The chorus was pretty to look at and could sing and dance too. The costumes were numerous and varied and the general stage embellishments most pleasing.

Drader's planing mill at Chatham, was burned yesterday with a net loss of at least $10,000.

Found Dead on the Track; G. T. R. Sectionman Meets Death

Body Found a Short Distance East of Birdsall Station This Morning—Dr. Gray Notified and an Inquest is Being Held.

Harry Kelly, aged 33 years, a section man in the employ of the Grand Trunk, was killed about a quarter of a mile east of Birdsall station last night thy being run over by a train. The body was found this morning by the section men as they started out for their day's work. It was badly mutilated and anything but a pleasant spectacle to gaze upon. Coroner Dr. Gray, of this city, was notified and left this morning for the scene of the accident.

Kelly, it appears, in company with another section hand, Wm. Thompson, walked to Hastings from Birdsall yesterday, and according to the story from Hastings, had been drinking considerable. His companion wanted to return with him early in the evening, but Kelly refused to accompany him. He apparently started out later, and was run down by train No. 11, which leaves Hastings at 7.300 p.m., and arrives at Peterborough at 8.10 o'clock.

The body was found about a quarter of a mile east of Birdsall station. It was discovered by Mr. Robert N. Redpath, section foreman at Birdsall, under whom Kelly was employed. The wheels of the train had passed over one of the unfortunate man's legs, and his skull was also fractured. The body was taken to Birdsall, where Dr. Gray is holding an inquest this afternoon. So far as can be learned there is no evidence of foul play although there are rumors to that effect. There seems no reason, however, to believe anything else, but that Kelly was run over by the train.

Deceased was a Scotchman and had only been in Canada a few months. He had been working for this railway company for about a month. As far as is known he has no relatives in this country. He boarded at Mr. Wm. Puffer's at Birdsall. It was six miles between Birdsall and Hastings.

The inquest is being held this afternoon.

Peterboro' Man Was Sailor On Sailing Brig "Nautilus",

In connection with the announcement that the Admiralty of Seamen in some of His Majesty's ships have decided to re-instate the old "mast and sail system" of instruction in the harbor training ships, Mr. W. J. Cooper, who resides in Driscoll Terrace, East City, informed the Review today, that he put in six month's training on the sailing brig "Martillus," some forty years ago. This system of sail drill, running aloft and such things, was abolished seven years ago. It was thought by several that it should never have been done away with, as it trained the men in confidence and daring. The authorities have discovered that it was a good thing, and now it is to be reinstated. The "Nautilus" is again to be used for that purpose. It was in the Irish Sea. Mr. Cooper served his time on this brig. Mr. Cooper is a competent sailor and relates many interesting stories of his experiences at sea.

Mr. McCollum and Mr. Lee are both experienced liverymen, and are thoroughly familiar with all phases of the livery business.

Cement Company Makes Assignment

The Raven Lake Portland Cement Company, of Raven Lake, Ontario, has assigned to H. R. Morton, of Toronto. The cause of the assignment appears to have been simply that the company was not turning out enough cement to pay dividends. The company has been in existence for about three years, and has a capital of about $500,000, nearly all paid up. The machinery is of the newest type.

Boiler Let Loose When Fireman Didn't Expect it

A severe accident befell Mr. Robert Wintell at the canning factory on Saturday. Mr. Wintell is engineer and fireman at the factory and at noon hour on Saturday the steam had gone down rather low. In order to get the steam up in a hurry Wintell decided to run some water out of the boiler. He opened the blow-off valve of the boiler, but the water did not come. Just as he attempted to examine it, the mud and water came out with great force striking him in the face and forehead, and scalding him badly. Fortunately the mud came first or otherwise the unfortunate young man would have had his sight ruined. The injury is a very painful one, and he will be laid up for some time. Dr. Powers is in attendance.—Port Hope Guide.

Activity Reigns in Mines In Vicinity of Havelock

Valuable Strike of Copper Made on the Seabrook Mine Property—Shafts Are Being Sunk and Other Developments Going On.

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Sept. 19.—The Seabrooke mines property, three miles east of Havelock, on the Marmora road, which was supposed by the owners to contain large values in gold, has turned out to be very valuable in copper, and the Speer's Canadian Mining Syndicate, who hold an option on the property, has men at work now, making extensive examinations.

Mr. Geo. R. Rogers, a mining prospector from Australia, has a number of men employed just at present, and two shafts, each about 25 feet deep have been sunk lately.

This mine came under the notice of the syndicate about three months ago, but development has been in progress for about a month. Three weeks ago, a vein was found which at the surface was two hundred feet wide and went down to an unknown distance. A sample of this was taken off the surface and sent to Toronto to be examined and has been pronounced satisfactory.

Mr. Rodgers has expressed himself as highly pleased with the mine so far as he has examined and after investigating at a few more points in the mine he will report to the company, and it is likely the mines will then be purchased and opened up.

The mine covers 283 acres, and the price named in the option will place the Seabrooke Bros. on easy street, although it has been reported lately that one of the Seabrooke Bros. has sold his interest in the mine.

It is confidently expected in this vicinity that the mines will be purchased and opened up at once. Farmers in the neighborhood, whose farms border on the Seabrooke mine, are in hopes that it continues on into their property. An examination of the property of Mr. John A. Sexsmith, has revealed a moderate percentage of copper.

Stray Breezes From the West Impressions of an Eastener

Interesting Letter From Mr. T. J. Begley Who is Attending the Labor Congress at Winnipeg--A Visit to North Dakota.

The Review has received the following interesting letter from Mr. T. J. Begley, the delegate from Peterborough to the Trades and Labor Congress in Winnipeg.—

Arriving in Winnipeg on September 13th, and having several days at my disposal, before the opening session of the Trades and Labor Congress, the writer boarded one of "Jimmy" Hills' Great Northern trains on a trip to friends in North Dakota. To an easterner who has visited this portion of Uncle Sam's domain for the first time, the sights to be seen prove a revelation. The train plunges through the prairie ripe with golden grain, "boundless and beautiful," relieved here and there by a small—very small—growth of trees, and the dwelling of a farmer. There are no hills and dales to remove the monotony, but a vast expanse of territory, through which the train rushes with lightning speed. Occasionally can be seen the threshers at work, the smoke from the traction engine curling skywards, while at a short distance is stationed the cooking car, an innovation that one does not see in the east. Threshers receive $2.75 per day and board, and excellent board it is. The cook (usually of the female persuasion) receives $35.00 per month. The wheat crop is only a fair one in North Dakota, this year, the average yield be this acre being about fifteen bushels. Your correspondent was asked at a small railway station on the prairie if he would accept a job with the threshers, but the occupation was a little too strenuous and he declined. The farmers thresh their grain in the open, the large barns, which dot the farms of Ontario, being conspicuous by their absence.

The prairie is dotted with innumerable towns and villages, some of them reaching an size, and James Hill, the railway magnate, has been most liberal in supplying them with railway accommodation. They have as a rule no industries to give them life air that Peterborough enjoys as an industrial centre, the only tall buildings being huge elevators. These eyesores, which may be dubbed as an "oasis in the desert," are remarkably clean. Their thoroughfares are in excellent condition, and their sidewalks constructed of cement. Many of them are lighted with electricity, and several pretty little churches stand as a monument to the fact that religion flourishes. The inhabitants are principally farmers (native and retired). A short stop was made at Gaufton and it was ascertained that quite a few Canadians had settled at this point, several of them coming from the Midland District. In some sections, however, the Canadian settlers have pulled up stakes, and travelled to more profitable fields. There are a large number of Icelanders in North Dakota, and they prove most desirable citizens, many of them owning splendid farms. In Minto, a rather important centre, many residents of Lindsay and vicinity can be found, and the fates have been most kind to them. In Grand Forks, Dakota, a city of ten or twelve thousand, everything is booming. This is an exceedingly pretty city, with splendid thoroughfares and handsome buildings. A Peterborough boy, and by this way, an ex-printer, is one of the foremost business men, in the person of Mr. George K. Monroe, brother of Mrs. John Carlisle, East City. This gentleman conducts a large jewellery store, and is immensely popular in the city. The writer is indebted to him for many courtesies extended. Mr. Wm. English, another Peterborughinian, as a typo in the Grand Forks Herald. The acquaintance was formed of Dr. Wheeler of that city, who figured prominently in the battle between citizens of Rockwood, Minnesota, and the Younger brothers in the celebrated bank robbery. He shot and killed Cole Younger's brother, and has the rifle which laid him low, hanging in his office.

Across the Red River, is the town of East Grand Forks, in the State of Minnesota. This place is connected with Grand Forks by a bridge, and has a population of 2,000. There are 55 saloons, and a "red light" district. In the spring, the Red river at this point rises to a height of 40 feet. Flat bottom steamers are used on the stream, which is navigable as far as Winnipeg. Why it is called Red River is more than I can tell, for at this point the water is very muddy, and the same can be said of the stream all along its course. Grand Forks has its quota of Canadians, too. Dr. Henry O'Keefe, an old Lindsay boy, has amassed considerable wealth in his profession, and is one of the prominent citizens in the city. Another centre, which was settled by people from Victoria County is Ops, many former residents of Lindsay and vicinity, residing here, and all are prosperous. The same might be said of another settlement in the State called Omemee.

Your correspondent spent Saturday evening and Sunday in Cavalier, and came in contact with several former Lindsayites. You will be interested to know that a former Peterborough man resides here in the person of Mr. Robert McConnell, who will be remembered by many residents of the city, as well as the townships of Smith, Ennismore, and Otonabee. Mrs. McConnell is also a Peterborough County lady. A relative of Mr. Switzer, of your city, resides here. Mr. Robert McConnell is classed as the first settler in Cavalier. There was only a buffalo trail through the prairie when he came there, exactly thirty years ago, with only $23.00 in his pocket. Today, he is living retired, having amassed a snug fortune. Mr. John O'Keefe, an old Lindsay boy is in the drug business there, and fortune has greeted him with a smile.

In another communication the writer will deal with other matters bearing on my visit, here, such as prohibition, as it is seen here, and others, which it is hoped will interest your readers. However, reference must be made to a pastime out here, which is indulged in by everyone, capable of carrying a gun—that is hunting the prairie chicken and duck. The prairie chicken is somewhat similar to our partridge, but larger, and proves excellent eating. The game laws of the State are rigidly enforced, and no one is allowed to bag more than twenty-five. The season is now on, and Sunday, in a drive over the prairie, many hunters could be seen indulging in this sport. The people are like a good many Canadians in the question of running on the Sabbath. The duck found here are like the Canadian bird, only the meat is somewhat darker.

En route to Winnipeg Monday morning to attend the great labor convention of which you will hear more later, your correspondent was surprised and delighted to meet an ex-Peterborough student in the person of "Joe" McDonald, who boarded the train at Neche, North Dakota, with the Geo. D. Sweet's "A Messenger Boy," Company. "Joe" will be remembered as one of the students, who attended the late Mr. F. J. Lynch's private school on Rubidge street, about twelve years ago along with Rev. Father A. E. Burley, Dr. Adolphe Letellier, Pat Ryan, Cook, Burke and others. Joe has achieved continental reputation in the musical and dramatic world. He toured America with the Mapleson Concert Company, and has filled engagements in Europe. As a dramatist he ranks as a top-notcher and in "A Messenger Boy" he enacts the difficult role of Count Cardinal. His wife, an estimable lady, also portrays one of the leading roles in this production. "Joe" sends regards to Peterborough friends.

Physicial Work At the Y.M.C.A.

An Enthusiastic Meeting Held—Classes Start Next Week

An enthusiastic meeting of the Physical Committee of the Y.M.C.A. was held last evening, when the work from the department for the fall and winter season was discussed and outlined.

Sub-committees were appointed on Supervision, Enrolment and Equipment, with strong chairmen for each. Upon the co-operation of these with the physical director will rest the success of the work.

Mr. C. H. James, the new physical director, has created a most favorable impression. The Peterborough Association has this season secured in him a physical director with better qualifications and experience than any of those who have preceded him. This is saying a good deal because Peterborough has had a number of able men. Mr. James was for years an instructor in the Sandow school, and in all has had eleven years' experience in England and India as an instructor in military work, as well as boys' schools. The task of military gymnastics in Y.M.C.A. physical work is always popular, so that good times are in store for all who attend the gym—both men and boys. The classes open next week as follows:—

Juniors Boys—Tuesday, Oct. 1st, 4.15, and Saturday, 9.15 a.m.

Senior Boys—Wednesday, 4.15, and Saturday, 10.30 am.

Officers Elected by Young People

Annual Reports Presented at St. John's—Prospects for Season

The St. John's Young People's Anglican Association, after a successful summer season on the Nicholls Oval at tennis, met last night in the Guild room for the election of officers and the annual report. Both sections showed a working balance on hand and the reports were adopted. Rev. Canon Davidson was in the chair.

Officers were elected as follows:—

Hon. President—Rev. Canon Davidson.

President—Mr. Mat. Drysdale.

Vice-President—Miss Lily Pratt.

Secretary—Mr. S. Richardson.

Assistant Secretary—Mr. R. J. Devey.

Treasurer—Miss Birdie Dawson.

The convenors of committees are;

Literary—Miss Horsfield and Mr. C. Downs.

Fellowship—Miss P. Smith and Mr. G. E. Chandler.

Refreshment—Miss Layfield.

Visiting—Miss Roberts.

Musical—Mrs. R. J. Devey.

Dramatic—Mr. C. Coleman.

Biblical and Historical—Mr. J. S. Bell.

It was decided to adopt an entrance fee of 25 cents this season, instead of taking up a collection, as last season.

The season opens on Oct. 7th, with a "Surprise" social, an exceedingly interesting evening being assured, as the arrangements are in the hands of Mrs. R. J. Devey, Miss Layfield and Miss Pratt. The executive committee this season is very strong, and augurs well for energetic and aggressive work. All members and intending new members are asked to place a special mark against the date, Monday, Oct. 7th, so that the season may be opened with a record attendance.

This afternoon many of the tennis games will wil be brought to a conclusion on the Oval, and the tournament will be wound up on Saturday.

The "Sailor Boy" brand of canned goods are the best that are put up. They never fail to please. Try a few cans.

Esquimalt may again become a naval station, since the United States has sent a fleet to the Pacific.

Mr. R. Durston An Enthusiast

Is Identified With Raising of Aristocratic Chicks and Barkers

Mr. R. Durston, Deputy Superintendent of Post Offices, who is in the city in connection with the delivery service, is well known to some citizens of Peterborough, and was here on a former occasion seven years ago, when he officiated as judge at the Peterborough Poultry and Pet Stock Association's show. Mr. Wm. Collins was secretary of the Association at that time.

Mr. Durston makes a specialty of raising high class Minorca fowl, and has been very fortunate with his "birds" in the different places he has shown them. He is regarded as an authority on all matters pertaining to poultry, and has been secretary of the Toronto Poultry Association for the past seven years.

Besides being a fowl fancier, Mr. Durston goes in for the breeding of blue-blooded Irish terriers, and several well known winners have given their first licks yelp at his kennels at 42 Austin Avenue, Toronto.

Mr. Fred Dixon Returning Home

Is Once More on Canadian Soil —Has Been Seriously Ill

Mr. Fred Dixon, who for the past two years has been cashier in the office of the Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada, at Hong Kong, China, is once more on Canadian soil. Mr Dixon and wife arrived last week on a Japanese steamer at Vancouver, and they are now at Maple Creek, Alberta, where they will visit his brother-in-law, Mr. Fred Davidson for some time. Mr. and Mrs. Dixon are now on furlough. They left Peterborough two years ago and went direct to Hong Kong. Of late the climate has not been agreeing with Mr Dixon. It has been excessively hot and some weeks ago he suffered a severe sunstroke. Since then he has slowly been improving. It is expected that Mr. and Mrs. Dixon will in the course of a few weeks arrive in Peterborough on a visit to relatives and friends.

Rev. Dr. Harris of Toronto Addressed Large Gathering

The Bible study rally on Sunday at the Y.W.C.A. was very well attended. Nearly 200 were present to listen to Rev. Dr. Harris' helpful address on Bible study. He reminded us that most of the great statesmen had been diligent Bible students, that in the works of John Ruskin there were no less than 900 Bible references, and in Tennyson's works there were 500. The Bible, he said, was the most wonderful book in the world. It had taken 1,500 (fifteen hundred) years to write it. It purified the life; it was a mirror which reflected the life of Jesus Christ. After suggesting various ways in which the Bible could be studied advantageously, he spoke for a few minutes on the Epistle to the Ephesians, as this book has been chosen for study this winter by most of the Associations in the Dominion.

Mrs. (Dr.) Scott presided at the meeting, and Miss Sanderson rendered a solo, which was very much appreciated. Special reference was made to Mrs. G. H. Williamson leaving the city, as she has been our most faithful Bible class teacher for some years. Our Sunday afternoon meetings will be continued next Sunday, and we are especially anxious to see at this service the young women who cannot get out in time for Sunday school.

Section No. 7, from Healey Falls to Hastings, will be deepened to nine feet, which will be all the work required.

Last of the Logs Has Arrived

The last drive of 4,000,000 feet of logs for the Peterborough Lumber Co. has been brought down the Otonabee river. The company has brought down about 8,000,000 feet all told this summer. The past season has been a busy one and the mill has been run to its fullest capacity. It will continue to operate until the ice forms on Little Lake.

Decorating for Harvest Festival

Elaborate Preparations Being Made at St. John's Church

For the harvest festival in St. John's church on Thursday next, the decorations are already in hand, and many willing workers will be on hand on Wednesday afternoon, when the actual work of fixing will be commenced.

Rev. Canon Welsh, of St. James' Cathedral, Toronto (whose visits to Peterborough are all too few), will be the special preacher on Thursday at the 3 p.m. evensong.

Bright Thanksgiving music will be led by the choir, who will also sing a harvest anthem during the offertory. The special Thanksgiving Eucharist is fixed for Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

INTERESTING TO DEER HUNTERS

This year marks an epoch in the annals of the deer hunter. The Canadian Northern Ontario running trains between Toronto and Parry Sound makes the shores of the Muskoka Lakes and that country of innumerable waterways west of the lakes to Georgian Bay and Parry Sound easily reached by rail. In addition to this service they will run trains for a few days before the open season through to the Magnetawan and Still Rivers to enable hunters to reach those districts from which more deer come than any other part of Canada, and where this year they are reported more plentiful than ever. North of Parry Sound the line runs in close proximity to Lorimer, Helger, Deer and Ka-she Lakes, giving easy access of McKeller, Whitestone and Dunchurch, and across the Shawabaga, Magnetawan and Still Rivers, opening up direct communication with the townships of McDougall, Ferguson, Burpee, McKenzie, Burton, etc. To reach these districts hitherto has involved a long trip down the Magnetawan or up the Georgian Bay and 50 mile drives over colonization roads. The area thrown open to the hunters is so large that there will be plenty of room for all. Write C. Price Green, Passenger Agent, Canadian Northern Building, Toronto, for free map and copy of "Big Game Hunting," also full information as to the service north of Parry Sound.

THAT DOWNIE STREET CREEK

Legal Committee Looked Over the Ground To-day

With a view to getting as much information as possible, regarding the trouble that has existed for some time, in connection with the blocking of the creek, near Dublin street, the Legal Committee of the City Council visited the locality this afternoon and went over the ground thoroughly. The creek is partially filled in on Mr. Jas. Bogue's property, and the residents living north of there, are afraid that their lots will be flooded next spring.

At the last meeting of the City Council, the Legal Committee was instructed to deal with the matter and will have a report to make at the next meeting of the council.

COW TESTING IS VALUABLE

Some Further Information of Interest to Agriculturists

Editor Review.—I am very pleased indeed to see that you take such an interest in the work of the cow testing Association around Peterborough, and that the summaries are published and read by a great many farmers. Now, there are a great many who do not fully understand the reports as sent. Of course everyone understands that the herd average gives the average of the milk yield, the fat yield and the test of each cow in the herd. In the other two columns headed respectively highest and lowest individual milk yields is where the trouble lies. Notice that these columns are entitled milk yield and it is the highest individual milk yield that is given. With this is given the test of the cow that gave this amount of milk and not the highest test of the herd as many suppose. Similarly it is the test of the lowest amount of milk given by one cow and not the lowest test of the herd.

It is a matter of surprise to me that some persons do not value the work which is being done by the Government for their own good. Some have gone to the trouble of purchasing a testing outfit and after having it will "doctor" their samples by putting in the strippings to make the test appear big. If the object of the test is to ascertain the true value of each cow how can this be done if the samples are tampered with? Not many weeks ago I tested a herd which tested all the way from 3.1 to 9.2 per cent. of butter fat and with what result? The time and supplies used in weighing, sampling, testing, washing the sample bottles, figuring the report, etc., were wasted and the data obtained were of no use to myself, the farmer who took the samples nor to anyone else. Many people rail at the Government because they get none of the money which is spent for the good of the country, yet when the Government does try to do something for their good they will not take advantage of it. Men of this stamp do not deserve any assistance. Let the sampling and weighing be done fairly and squarely and the farmer doing so will be repaid by receiving data upon which he can depend.

Safest Medicine for Women's Complaints

Women certainly do neglect themselves. They work too hard—over-tax their strength—and then wonder why they suffer with diseases peculiar to their sex.

Most cases of female trouble start when the bowels become inactive—the kidneys strained—and the skin not cared for. Poisons, which should leave the system by these organs, are taken up by the blood and inflame the delicate female organs.

GRAVE FEARS ARE ENTERTAINED

That Park St. Church Building May Collapse While Being Removed

A prominent citizen who was present at the Young People's meeting in the Park Street Baptist Church today expressed the belief that there was danger of the building collapsing. The structure is being removed from its present site across Park street to make room for the erection of the new sanctuary, the tenders for which will likely be awarded this week. Last night the edifice was quite shaky. The doors and windows were out of kilter and in the wind, the frame building swayed considerably.

"It all goes to show," remarked the Review's informant, "the unsubstantial character of the old building and to emphasize the need of a new structure. If the edifice is successfully moved and braced up, it will answer for a place of worship until the new church is completed, but in the meantime, conducting service therein while the frame structure is in process of removal, appears to be a rather hazardous undertaking. I think the majority of those present at last night's meeting will bear me out in this statement."

Large Party of Barnardo Girls

Arrived at Hazel Brae Last Evening—Had Rough Passage

A party of 35 girls arrived at Hazel Brae last evening, from England. They came across the ocean on the Dominion, and had a rough passage. They are all feeling well, however. The girls landed in Quebec on Sunday morning, and reached here at seven o'clock last night. On the same boat were 132 boys bound for the Barnardo Home in Toronto. The party was in charge of Mr. Owen, superintendent of Barnardo Homes in Canada. Miss Pierce, superintendent of Hazel Brae, stated to the Review today, that nearly all the girls, who range in age from 6 years to 17 years, had been spoken for. Some would go out to their new homes this week, but the great majority would remain until next week.

Four parties of girls have arrived at Hazel Brae this season, numbering about three hundred in all.

Miss Harris, who for seven years was assistant secretary at Hazel Brae, and left last month for the Old Country, has returned to resume her former position here. This will be pleasing news to her many friends, who are glad to welcome her back. She came across on the Dominion.

DEAN PATTERNS

6824, 6825.—ONE OF THE NEW CLOTH GOWNS.

The new cloth gowns for street wear are most fetching and have an air of elegance which even their more elaborate forerunners could not boast. The costume shown consists of a waist showing pleats extending over the shoulder which lend becoming lines and a fanciful yoke effect, which reaches a deep point in front. This feature provides opportunity for one's favorite color next the face, while a charming note of contrast may be struck in the band of velvet or braid which borders it. The sleeves are far from ordinary with their tucks and fanciful cuffs and they may be finished in long or shorter style.

The skirt is a seven gored one with tucks at the side seams and box pleats in back. The modish trimness about the hips is conspicuous while the graceful ripple at the hem adds an air of cache which many skirts lack. Any of the seasonable cloths or silks may serve for the gown, voile, panama or ponges being suggested. For the medium size 7 5-8 yards of 44 in. material are needed.

Two Patterns.—6824—6 sizes, 32 to 42 inches bust measure. 6825, 7 sizes, 20 to 32 inches waist.

The price of these patterns is 10c but either will be sent upon receipt of 10 cents.

Leave your order and 10 cents at this REVIEW OFFICE and pattern will be sent you by mail.

Presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Chas. McGee at Springbrook

Mr. Chas. McGee, late of Springbrook, has purchased a residence in Peterborough, and is now residing in this city. Before leaving Springbrook Mr. and Mrs. McGee were waited upon by a number of their neighbors, and made the recipients of handsome gifts, accompanied by the following address.—

To Mr. and Mrs. Chas. McGee and Master Willie,—

Dear Friends,—We, a few of your friends and neighbors, have gathered here onight to spend a social evening with you, and to bid goodbye before you leave us to take up your residence in Peterborough. We regret very much the loss our neighborhood will sustain by your removal from us, and we wish to express our appreciation of the many worthy qualities which you possess.

You are seeking for yourself a permanent residence in Peterborough, and we hope and trust that your life may be filled with the sunshine of prosperity, and that by industry and honesty, and by your many sterling qualities, you may be enabled to take a noble part in the building up of your new home.

We would ask Mrs. McGee to accept this rocker, Mr. McGee this chair, and Master Willie, this Bible, as a slight token of our friendship and esteem for you, and we wish to assure you, that as you go from us you take with you, our best wishes for your good health and prosperity in your new home.

Signed on behalf of your friends,
MRS. C. H. BOARDMAN,
MRS. D. W. ROBLIN.

Mr. McGee's residence is at 590 Downie st., and he purchased it from Mr. Coleman Hewett, the well-known real estate dealer.

OF LIFE IN AUSTRALIA

LADY SARAH WILSON TELLS OF POSSIBILITIES FOR SETTLERS.

What Southern Continent Offers—Prosperity in Its Large Towns—Conditions in the Country—Sheep Farming Pays — Good Prices Obtained for Wool—Irrigation by the Government—Crops Are Plentiful.

Lady Sarah Wilson writes in The London Daily Mail, of Australia, as follows:

"There is an appearance of solid prosperity in both the great towns, Melbourne and Sydney. The shops are excellent, the streets present an extremely busy appearance, smart motor cars go buzzing about, and the ladies and children who throng the pavements are all very well dressed. But it is not of town life but of bush or country life that I want to write, so I shall ask my readers to follow me a couple of hundred miles from the capital to a station in one of the many fertile parts of Victoria; then, four or five hundred miles further on, to a similar property on the vast plains of New South Wales.

Sheep and Their Value.

"In Victoria the nightmare of 'drought' is not so greatly dreaded as in other localities. Of course, there are good and bad seasons, but as a rule the rainfall is generally to be counted on with average regularity. Here are to be found small farms with fine crops of grain and potatoes, the soil rich enough to grow anything, interspersed among the larger sheep stations. In the station we were at in Victoria the pasture is so good that it carries as many as two sheep to an acre, whereas in New South Wales about one sheep to an acre is the most that can be reckoned. Each sheep is supposed to produce about ten pounds of wool a year, and at the almost record price at which wool is now selling the fleece of each animal should be worth at least ten shillings yearly. In addition, lambs are worth ten shillings a head.

"All sheep are now shorn by machinery, and a record shearer can shear up to one hundred and seventy a day—one hundred being about the average.

Government Irrigation.

"One large landowner near where we were staying has gone in extensively for irrigation, and has made 150 miles of canals on his property, by dint of which he can grow lucerne, which carries up to twenty sheep to an acre, and improved other land to enable it to carry two sheep to an acre. This landowner paid thirty shillings an acre for his property eight years ago, and now would not sell it for £3 10s. an acre. In consequence of this example, the Government have even now commenced a system of irrigation on a large scale in this part of New South Wales, which, in the almost immediate future, will render a large district now only fit for sheep suitable for closer settlement, which means the cultivation of fruit, grain and vegetables—a great inducement for new settlers.

Young Men of Energy.

"A successful squatter said to me the other day: 'All that Australia wants is settlers—young men from the Old Country, with small capital and great energy, who would thoroughly enjoy this bush life, and who, under good advice from friends largely settled here, should do well.'

"It is a mistake to think Australia has had its day. Wood has never been in greater demand than it is now, and it is conceded that no wool is as good as the wool from the Commonwealth. The Japanese market is beginning to be opened to the Australian wool producers, for with European manners comes the necessity for European clothing; and it is possible that China, looming large with its myriads of inhabitants may follow suit."

Necklaces Were Costly.

Two magnificent single row necklaces realized big prices at Christie's. The first necklace, composed of fifty-one large graduated pearls of fine orient, with a single brilliant snap, at £3,700 ($18,500), was knocked down to a private bidder, Mr. Wellesley. The second necklace, in which were forty-nine pearls, was sold at £4,400 ($22,000) to a private bidder named Hollis.

COLLAPSED IN FEW SECONDS.

Says Witness Who Saw Quebec Bridge Totter and Fall.

Quebec, Sept. 24—Five to 15 seconds was the time occupied in the collapse of the Quebec Bridge, according to the evidence of witnesses of the catastrophe heard yesterday by the Royal Commission.

F. E. Cudworth, engineer in charge of the field instruments, being asked to describe the occurrence, said that at the time he was in the little house at the approach, a thousand feet away from the collapsed section. Hearing a peculiar rumbling noise, he turned about and looked over, his notice being then first attracted to the movement of the tops of the main posts and of the main post peaks.

He did not happen or have time to notice the anchor arm at the moment. The main posts assumed a succession of distinct motions. They moved sideways and then out towards the river. Then the peaks followed towards Quebec, and the posts seemed to sink straight down. The peaks apparently kept the same distance apart as they went down.

MAN GORED TO DEATH.

President of Bee Growers' Association Meets Tragic End.

West Selkirk, Sept. 24.—A fatal accident happened at Gonor, Saturday afternoon, by which J. J. Gunn lost his life, being gored to death by an enraged bull.

Upon entering the stable to attend to the stock he found the bull loose. It immediately attacked and killed him instantly.

Mrs. Gunn came along a few minutes later, and noticing what had happened, fought the bull off with the pitchfork and dragged Mr. Gunn out.

Mr. Gunn is widely known, especially in connection with the apiary he kept and his brand of honey. He was president of the Manitoba Bee Growers' Association.

Guns For Dreadnought.

London, Sept. 24.—At the Admiralty it is said that all the vessels of the Dreadnought class now building shall be armed with eight new type 13.5 guns, so disposed that they all can be fired on either broadside.

The new weapon will be over 50 feet long, and a shell from it, it is calculated, will pierce 20-inch Krupp steel armor at a range of 3,000 yards.

Telegraphers Want Funds.

New York, Sept. 24.—The striking telegraphers have appealed to the Central Federated Union for funds. An appeal for the same cause was made by Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, and met with the hearty endorsement of the meeting. For weeks there has been a strong movement in one union to donate $100,000 to the men now out.

Man Swept Overboard.

Montreal, Sept. 24.—Struck by a terrific wave, and swept overboard to death, was the fate of William Roberts, a seaman of the steamship Dominion of the Dominion Line, which arrived in port yesterday, after a stormy passage.

T. J. Rowlands, another of the crew, was hurled by the wave against the side of the ship and had two ribs broken.

Locomotive Explodes.

Orrville, Ohio, Sept. 24.—The boiler of a locomotive pulling a westbound Pennsylvania freight train, while running 20 miles an hour, blew up at Burton City on Sunday.

Conductor Bookhill, Brakeman Crum and Engineer Bray were killed, and Fireman Frank Rifle was probably fatally hurt.

Sir Lauder Brunton Improving.

Montreal, Sept. 24.—Sir Lauder Brunton, the distinguished English physician who was taken ill in Montreal last Thursday while on his way home to England from a tour through Canada, has successfully undergone an operation at the Mount Royal Sanitarium.

Drove Over His Son.

Brantford, Sept. 24.—Lewis Williams, aged 12, son of William Williams, Indian reserve, was killed on Saturday night. He was in the field. Feeling a fit coming on he started to run to the house, but fell by the way. His father with a heavy load of grain drove over the body, the wheels fracturing the neck. The lad was subject to fits.

Strayed Away and Died.

Davidson, Sask., Sept. 24.—The body of Vernon, the two and a half year old son of W. A. Kirkwood, who strayed from the residence of Sherman Code last Tuesday, was found yesterday about six miles from the place where he was last seen. It is thought he had been dead about three days.

Son Dead; No Joy In Life.

New York, Sept. 24.—Maurice Remi, a retired merchant, aged 52 years, and his wife, yesterday were found dead in their apartments in the Bronx. A letter left by them explained that after their son Victor, 19 years old, died at Liberty, N. Y., in August a year ago, they found no joy in life.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 23.—At the Montreal Stock Yards' West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 21 were 2279 cattle, 2525 sheep and lambs, 1388 hogs and 747 calves, while the supply offered on the market for the local trade to-day consisted of 1550 cattle, 1600 sheep and lambs, 700 hogs and 200 calves.

The offerings of cattle this month showed an increase of 300 head, as compared with a year ago, on account of the fact that pasturing thruout the country is poor, and, with feedstuffs and hay ruling at such high prices as they are at present, farmers have evidently decided not to fatten their stock, and are marketing them freely, therefore considerable half-finished cattle are coming forward and really choice beeves continue to be scarce.

There was also considerable demand from canners, and all the poor stock met with a ready sale at 1½c to 1¾c per lb. There was no demand from exporters, as calves on Saturday from Liverpool were weaker, and noted a further decline in prices of ½c to ¾c per lb., and, as they had ample stock on hand to fill their freight contracts, they were not forced to operate. Choice beeves sold at 4c to 4¼c; good at 4½c to 4¾c; fair at 4c to 4¼c, and lower grades at 2½c to 3½c per lb.

Lambs sold at 5¼c to 5½c, and sheep at 4c to 4¼c per lb. Receipts of calves continue fairly good for this time of year, for which the demand is good, and prices are maintained at $3 to $12 each, with a few very choice ones selling up to $15.

There have been no new developments in the hog situation since this day week, prices having ruled steady on account of smaller arrivals, and the fact that foreign advices on Canadian bacon have been somewhat firmer. There was a good demand from packers and jobbers this morning, and a fairly active trade was done, with sales of selected lots at $6.12½ to $6.30 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Sept. 23.—CATTLE—Receipts, 3600 head; steady on good; 25c to 15c lower on common. THE MARKET REPORTS

Peterborough Market

Saturday's market was a fine one, and the number of sellers and buyers was large. Despite the fact that there were many farmers present and the quantity of produce offered was large, the prices remained rather high. Being a great demand, it was little trouble to get the figures asked. Upstairs twenty-seven cents was the prevailing price for a pound of butter. Eggs were quickly picked up at nineteen cents a doz. Fowl was plentiful. Chickens ranged in price from 60 to 80 cents per pair, ducks went at $1.00 per pair, and geese, of which there were only a few, sold at $1.00 apiece.

On the outside market, lamb was sold at 11 cents for the front and 13 cents for the hind quarters. Pears were in large quantities and ranged in price according to size. From 20 to 35 cents per peck, were realized. Potatoes sold at $1.00 per bag.

BENNETT IS A LIKELY ONE

Youth Who Won in Lindsay May Develop into Fast Distance Runner

Bennett, the local Longboat, the lad who won the five mile race at the Lindsay fair gives promise of developing into a good long distance runner. He is fairly tall and rather slimly built and steps along in true professional style. Concerning this showing in the Scugog town the Lindsay Post says:—

"Bennett, an English lad, showed remarkable form; a light and easy runner, he sprinted again and again. The last lap he had a big lead, though Geo. Thornbury, who is a husky runner, galloped after him and finished some fifty feet behind, a good and fast second. W. J. Bennett is a new Peterborough discovery."

Bennett will start in the Examiner road race and Mr. Ambrose Regan, manager of the Hotel National, at which Bennett is employed as bell boy, may have the boy put into good hands to prepare him for the Ward Marathon in Toronto.

He went to Lindsay with hardly any training and considering this handicap his showing was highly creditable.

Senior Boys.—Wednesday, 4-15.

Business and professional men.—Thursday, 5 p.m.

Workingmen's and Professional Men.—Mondays and Thursdays, 5 to 6.

All who are coming in should be in at the start.

Will They Enter the Intermediate Ranks?

Rumors That Strathconas Will Have Team in That Series of the O.H.A.

It is rumored around the city that the Strathconas, last year's city league champions, will enter a team in the intermediate O.H.A. series this winter. As the Lindsay Midgets, Port Hope and Cobourg will probably have teams in the intermediate series the Strathconas would be a welcome addition.

The Strathconas have five of last year's men to choose from and should make a good showing in intermediate company.

From a source it is learned that nothing definite has been decided in the matter.

THE TURF

Black Cloud is being worked out at the Driving Park today. Mr. Kelly, his owner, says he will start him in the 40 class at the Lakefield fair and possibly in the same class at the local fall fair.

BOWLING

The bowlers will meet tonight at eight o'clock at the Majestic Alleys. Prospects for a good season are particularly bright and it is expected that a large number of enthusiasts will attend the meeting.

PEDESTRIANISM

REYNOLDS IS READY.

Considerable interest is being manifested in Port Hope over Scatterwood's attempt to cover the Port Hope-Toronto trip within the 38 hours, and Port Hope's veteran pedestrian, Jimmy Reynolds, is greatly worked up over it. Reynolds' first one-way walk to Toronto was accomplished in 19 1-2 hours, on a 24 hour limit. His second attempt, last June, to cover the round trip in 38 hours, was almost successful, but, owing to the extreme heat, Reynolds out at Newcastle, on the return journey, after having covered 116 miles in 32 1-2 hours, thu sleaving him 5 1-2 hour sto travel the remaining 18 miles from Newcastl eto Port Hope. Reynolds offers today to bet $300 to $300 that he can cover the round trip between Port Hope and Toronto in 35 hours, and wants to start tomorrow morning, when Scattergood reaches Port Hope. Reynolds is in his 57th year, and Scattergood is said to be only 24. Reynolds' latest offer cuts three hours off his last wager.

Formal Opening Of "The Crystal"

Large Number Were at the Pretty Theatorium Last Night

If last night's audience may be accepted as a criterion of coming business at "The Crystal," the new theatre opened on George street last night. Manager Edwards will have to hang up the "standing room only" sign the remainder of the season. And the attraction deserved all the patronage bestowed upon it. Miss Edwards, who sang illustared songs, is the possessor of a soprano voice of fine quality, and her singing was a revelation into those who expected to hear a singer of ordinary calibre. "Jim's Apprenticeship," the moving picture, was enthusiastically received by the audience. The picture of the Mayor and aldermen of Peterborough were thrown on the slide and were greeted with much applause. There will be a change of bill at "The Crystal" every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday.

FREE MAIL DELIVERY

Now that free mail delivery is being inaugurated it is desireable for householders to make provision for receiving mail matter. We are prepared to take orders for letter box plates, and put the same in place by careful workmen. Plates from 35 cents to $1.25. Orders may be left at Peterborough Hardware Co., or by 'phone at No. 365 (Machine), when samples will be sent.

PLUNGERS AND BOOKIES.

Precious Few of Either Succeed—Many Financial Gales.

In the last twenty years there has been only one man who is known to have been successful at beating the race-track game to a conspicuous degree, says the Broadway Magazine. That was George E. Smith, better known as Pittsburg Phil.

He was a genius, and genius are rare.

He paid for his success with his life. He got so that he was a monomaniac. He thought, talked and had interest only in racing. The passion consumed him.

Nearly all the men who were prominent as big bettors on the turf have fallen by the wayside. Michael F. Dwyer, whose wagers were colossal, went broke, suffered complete physical collapse and was a wreck during the last few years of his life.

Riley Grannan, whose pyrotechnic rise made him a national figure, has been lucky enough of recent years to get occasional employment as a bookmaker's clerk. Joe Yeager, who thought nothing of betting $5,000 a race, lasted one season.

Of the crop of plungers that followed this quartet not one is known to be ahead of the game. Davy Johnson, who was the biggest bettor last year, has gone broke more times than it is pleasant to recall, and he finished the season with very little money despite the fact that in Roseben he has had one of the most remarkable horses the world has ever seen.

The bettor thinks the bookmaker has the best end of it. He has, yet comparatively few of the bookmakers weather the financial storms incident to the game.

Of 100 who weighed in at the beginning of last season less than fifteen were doing business at the end of the racing year. One of the most experienced bookmakers in America, Eddie Burke, lost six bank rolls in one season. The bank roll, in the parlance of the ring, is the capital stock of the bookmaker.

The public hears much of the winnings made by the bookmakers, but the losses are announced rarely. One of the things the public does not appreciate is that many of the bookmakers are only managers or partners in the books they make. Wall street men, saloon keepers, business men and politicians frequently subscribe to the bank roll of bookmakers, and occasionally a woman is the backer of a bookmaker.

The bettor also thinks that the horse owner has superior opportunities for beating the racing game. This time he is wrong. Few horse owners get rich. Most of them die poor.

There are few owners who have so good judgment in regard to the horses under their charge as have the really observant men who make a business of betting. If anything, the opinion of the dispassionate handicapper or student of form is more desirable. The majority of horse owners get financial indigestion from betting on their own horses.

The Great Assouan Dam.

Sir William Garston has recommended that the great dam at Assouan, Egypt, be raised nearly twenty-three feet, which would more than double the present water supply. The dam now supplies about a quarter of the water which eventually will be needed in Egypt. With the proposed enlargement about 950,000 acres of land would be brought under cultivation. The change would cost about $7,500,000. Since the establishment of the Assouan reservoir the sale value of lands already provided with perennial irrigation has increased by about $122,500,000, and this figure, when canals now under construction are completed, will be increased to approximately $140,000,000. In addition to this the cotton crop, which last year amounted to $140,000,000, has been assured.

His Good Fortune Fatal.

It is possible to live long in melancholy and to die swiftly from joy. So it has proved with a Paris carpenter named Fermet. He had worked for years in a chronic state of melancholy, aggravated by want of money, and all the circumstances seemed to point to a long continuance of this condition of things when suddenly and quite outside the poor fellow's expectations there came to him the news that he was the possessor by bequest of $10,000. Fermet almost went frantic with delight. His nerves stood the recurrence of thrills all day, but in the evening he got among the Longchamps cafes and was relating his luck for about the twentieth time when he fell dead.—London Globe.

The Nation of Shopkeepers.

Napoleon must have been right after all. We are a nation of shopkeepers. There is nothing in the shop we are not ready to sell at a price. We would no doubt sell the great seal if we could get a good enough offer from Pierpont Morgan. Shakespeare folios, first editions of Walton, the portraits of Reynolds, of Romney—these and any other national heirlooms, only given a fat enough offer we are happy to part with to any foreign nation that has the taste and money to buy them. We can put them up as coolly as Carrie Nation did her hatpins.

FIRE AT PORT HOPE

The barge Mills had a narrow escape while up the lake recovering the spreads and dipper of the dredge Sir Wilfrid, says a Port Hope despatch. Fire started around the boiler, and spread rapidly. The tug Diver was near at hand, and the fire was extinguished.

Insurance Men Met Last Night

Held Regular Meeting in the Offices of the Mutual Life

The regular meeting of the Central Ontario Life Insurance Underwriters' Association was held last night in the office of the Mutual Life Assurance Company. A number of the principal agents in the city were in attendance. A constitution was drafted and social, membership and other committees selected. There was also a general discussion of affairs relative to life insurance.

The reports of the local delegates to the last convention at Toronto were not discussed at any length, owing to the wide publicity given the proceedings at the convention by the insurance companies and daily press.

A fuller account of the meeting will be published in tomorrow's issue of the Review.

4221.—A PRETTY DRESS FOR A YOUNG GIRL.

The popular over blouse effect is charmingly simulated in this youthful costume, which skillfully combines a unique suggestion of the Japanese in the waist with the most modern ideas of shaping in the seven gored skirt. The waist owes much of its distinction to the fact that the body and sleeve caps are cut in one, while in the skirt the circular side and back gores, lapped over the straight gores, provide precisely the graceful effect which is most sought after in gowns for developing girlhood. This dress is suitable for modelling in any of the popular soft-draping fabrics, including rajah, foulard, voile and colienne; while it may either be decorated as pictured or trimmed with ribbon, embroidery or braid. To develop the medium size 7 3-8 yards of 27 inch material will be needed.

The price of this pattern is 10c.

Leave your order and 10c at the REVIEW OFFICE and will be sent you by mail.

Peterboro' Taxes Lowest Per Head Of Any City in This Province

Interesting Statistics Gathered From Municipal Bulletin of Ontario Bureau of Industries—Peterborough Debt Per Head is Also Very Low.

From the Municipal bulletin, No. 1, of the Ontario Bureau of Industries, some interesting figures are taken which show that the taxes per head and the debt per head in Peterborough are lower than any city in Ontario from 12,000 to 40,000 population.

This is a very gratifying position to hold and evidences that the management of civic affairs in this thriving centre has after all been very good.

Dominion Tool Company Has Been Granted Charter

Peterborough Men Behind New Concern That Will Have Plant and Headquarters in This City—Capital of New Company is $100,000.

Peterborough will have another new industry at an early date. A provincial charter has been granted the Dominion Tool Company with a capitalization of $100,000, divided into 1000 shares at $100 each. The headquarters of the new company will be at Peterborough and those behind it are all local men, as follows:—Jas. Davidson, F. R. J. MacPherson, P. J. Creedon, F. C. Cubitt, Dr. F. P. McNulty and W. H. G. Higgins. The provisional directors are Jas. Davidson, P. J. Creedon, F.R.J. MacPherson, Dr. McNulty and F. C. Cubitt.

The company's charter entitles them to carry on the manufacture and sale of augurs, bits and other tools and appliances for boring and drilling; (b) to carry on the manufacture and sale of bolts, rivets, screws and nails and to carry on the manufacture and sale of machinery for the manufacture of the same.

The company intend starting operations at once and will employ a fairly large number of hands to start. It is understood that a building has been secured and that the installation of the necessary machinery will start at once. The new industry will be somewhat similar to the Rapid Tool Company, and as several valuable patents have been secured the new concern has bright prospects.

A TRAINED NURSE

After Years of Experience, Advises Women in Regard to Their Health.

Mrs. Martha Pohlman of 55 Chester Avenue, Newark, N. J., who is a graduate Nurse from the Blockley Training School at Philadelphia, and for six years Chief Clinic Nurse at the Philadelphia Hospital, writes the letter printed below. She has the advantage of personal experience, besides her professional education and what she has to say may be absolutely relied upon.

Many other women are afflicted as she was. They can regain health in the same way. It is prudent to heed such advice from such a source.

Mrs. Pohlman writes:

"I am firmly persuaded, after eight years of experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that it is the safest and best medicine for any suffering woman to use.

"Immediately after my marriage I found that my health began to fail me. I became weak and pale, with severe bearing-down pains, fearful backaches and frequent dizzy spells. The doctors prescribed for me, yet I did not improve. I would bloat after eating and frequently become nauseated. I had pains down through my limbs so I could hardly walk. It was as bad a case of female trouble as I have ever known. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, however, cured me within four months. Since that time I have had occasion to recommend it to a number of patients suffering from all forms of female difficulties, and I find that while it is considered unprofessional to recommend a patent medicine, I can honestly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for I have found that it cures female ills, where all other medicine fails. It is a grand medicine for sick women."

Money cannot buy such testimony as this—merit alone can produce such results, and the ablest specialists now agree that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most universally successful remedy for all female diseases known to medicine.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful periods, weakness, displacement or ulceration of the female organs, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement.

The needless suffering of women from diseases peculiar to their sex is terrible to see. The money which they pay to doctors who do not help them is an enormous waste. The pain is cured and the money is saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It is well for women who are ill to write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., The present Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, her assistant for many years before her decease, and for twenty-five years since her advice has been freely given to sick women. In her great experience, which covers many years, she has probably had to deal with dozens of cases just like yours. Her advice is strictly confidential.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds where Others Fail.

Higher Protective Duties Wanted by Manufacturers

Canadian Manufacturers' Association Meets at Toronto.

President Cockshutt Says Manufacturing is Not Gaining in Home Market—Advocates Export Duty on Pulpwood — References to Labor Situation and the Transportation Question.

Toronto, Sept. 25.—A plea for more adequate protection was the keynote of the address delivered by Mr. H. Cockshutt, the retiring president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, at the opening of the 31st annual convention of that body in the King Edward yesterday. Nearly 300 delegates registered in the course of the day, and others are expected later. Shortly after 10 o'clock a beginning was made with the business of the convention, five different sections, the manufacturing grocers, furniture, engine and boiler, manufacturing jewelers and agricultural implement manufacturers, holding meetings to discuss their respective interests. At noon the woollen, stove and paper box sections met, and at 2 o'clock the first general meeting was held. After reports had been submitted by the secretary and treasurer, an address on "Progress of Canada in the Twentieth Century" was delivered by Mr. Archibald Blue, chief officer of the Dominion census.

President's Address.

The president, Mr. H. Cockshutt, in his address dwelt on the importance of manufacturing, giving statistics to show its growth and pre-eminence among the industries. Substantial as the growth had been, however, Canadian manufacturers had no more than kept pace with the expansion in other directions. At any rate, they had not materially strengthened their hold on the home market. Relatively speaking, they were in the same position to-day that they were five years ago. Their capital had increased, their wage-bill had increased, their output had increased, but their share in the Canadian market had remained practically at a standstill. The trade and navigation returns gave further evidence of the fact that they were not progressing as they should. Ever since 1901 their imports had been increasing much more rapidly than their exports, with the result that a balance of trade in their favor that year of $8,672,100 had for the twelve months ending June last been converted into an adverse balance of $104,476,142. By the adoption of a policy sufficiently protective, such as the association had always advocated, capital would be irresistibly attracted by the opportunities afforded in Canada. Their home market would be supplied by home industries, manufacturing would become more specialized, the cost of production would be reduced, and a substantial beginning would be made towards the development of an export trade that would successfully carry them over any ordinary period of domestic depression. He regretted that the significance of the figures did not appeal to the Government when making their revision of the tariff. They asked for a tariff whose minimum protection would be high enough to reserve the home market for the Canadian manufacturers. They realized, however, that there were many articles they did not and could not produce in Canada, and when it became necessary for them to go abroad they believed in a preference which would give the Mother Country and their sister colonies the refusal of their trade before passing it on to foreigners. Their motto was: "Keep your money in circulation at home by buying goods made in Canada, and when you cannot get what you want at home buy within the British Empire."

The Labor Situation.

A further obstacle to natural expansion of the manufacturing enterprises was the scarcity of skilled labor, and to solve the difficulty they must either import more artisans from other countries or provide educational facilities whereby young Canadians would be able to qualify themselves for the most important positions in their factories. He regretted that the Government had not seen its way clear to meet the wishes of the association in regard to the immigration of skilled mechanics and had hesitated to act in the matter of technical education. One of the most regrettable features of the labor situation was the steady growth in the number and importance of industrial disputes, and the association would be undertaking a noble work if it would devise means of reducing the number of industrial disputes.

Transportation Question.

The president then emphasized what he regarded as the inadequacy of their transportation facilities, contending that the present equipment of Canadian lines was far from sufficient to meet the demands made upon them by the Canadian shipping public. He quoted figures to show that the companies were making little progress towards taking care of the growing volume of traffic on the older portion of their lines, and regarded the condition of affairs thus created as a national calamity. Railway companies had spent their money in building new lines through undeveloped country when they should have spent it in properly equipping the ones already in operation.

Asleep on Track.

Brockville, Sept. 25.—In an intoxicated condition, Nelson Blair, a local character, laid down on the tracks in the G. T. R. yards here and fell asleep. A light engine crushed his two limbs, and amputation was made. He is a middle-aged man and will likely recover.

CRAZY MOTHER'S DEED

Murders Her Three Babes as They Were Sleeping.

Strangles Little Ones With Clothesline—Then Calmly Told Her Husband to Come Home and See What She Had Done—Had Sudden Attack of Insanity—Does Not Realize Enormity of Her Crime.

Buffalo, Sept. 25.—Early yesterday morning, Mrs. Bertha Mund, aged 37, strangled her three children, Christopher, aged 8 years; Helen, aged 2 years, and Freda, aged 8 months, to death at their home, 925 Clinton street.

Immediately after committing the deeds, she went to the Pennsylvania Railroad yards, where her husband is employed, and informed him of her action.

The children were all sleeping when their mother killed them. She murdered the boy, Christopher, first. He was asleep on a mattress in the parlor. She wrapped a blanket about the boy's head, covering his face, and then tied a clothes-line about his neck, turning it around three times and then drew it tight and fastened it by tying several knots.

The girl, Helen, was asleep in a crib in the parlor. Mrs. Mund wound a clothes-line around the little one's neck twice, and, after strangling the child, she carried the body into the bedroom and put in on the bed, covering it with a quilt.

Freda, the baby, was her next victime. She was asleep in a baby carriage in the kitchen. Mrs. Mund tied a piece of clothes-line about the little one's neck once and fastened it in two knots.

When Mrs. Mund met her husband, she said: "Fred, I have made away with the three children; come home and see."

Mund hurried home, taking his wife with him. When they reached the house, Mrs. Mund sat down at a table and began to cry. Mund notified the police, and the woman was taken into custody. To Superintendent of Police Regan Mrs. Mund made a statement, in which she said: "I killed the children because I did not want them to grow up and be crazy like me."

The police say the woman does not realize the enormity of her crime, and that she killed the children while suffering with an attack of insanity that suddenly seized her. She had been ill with nervous trouble for about six months, but had never, prior to yesterday morning, manifested signs of mental derangement.

JAPS FLOCKED TO SHIPS.

Attorneys Said to Be Acting For Canadian Employers.

Winnipeg, Sept. 25.—"I know of two attorneys, residents of Hawaii, who have gotten up shiploads of Japanese for emigration to British Columbia. It was supposed and understood in Honolulu that these attorneys were acting for parties who would be employers in Canada. There were also a general understanding among the Japanese that work would be provided for them on reaching Canada. They therefore flocked in large numbers to those who were organizing the shiploads, and they had no trouble whatever in filling their vessels."

This was the statement made yesterday by J. G. Kingsbury of Honolulu, who will be married to-day at high noon to Miss S. Jones, sister of the American consul, Dr. Jones.

John Redmond Will Not Retire.

Boston, Sept. 25—John O'Callaghan, secretary of the United Irish League of America, stated last night that there was no ground for the report published in certain newspapers in this country, that John Redmond had decided to retire from public life and that John Dillon had joined the Sinn Fein movement. Mr. O'Gallaghan received a cable from Mr. Redmond late yesterday, stating that the report was a "ridiculous fabrication."

Dropped Dead.

Brockville, Sept. 25.—While at work yesterday excavating for a gas main, George McKay, aged 69, dropped dead of heart failure. He leaves a widow and large family.

HINTS ON HOME BUILDING.

The man who is thinking of building a home (and who is not, in these prosperous times) must have prominently in mind, economy, durability and appearance.

The wise builder will select materials that are good and inexpensive, as well as handsome in appearance. Take the roof, for instance. It should be proof against lightning, fire and water, and should also possess a handsome appearance.

Wood shingles have had their day. As now manufactured, they soon rot and crack, thus making it necessary to reshingle.

"Safe Lock" Galvanized Steel Shingles solve the problem in every way. They lock at the top, bottom and both sides, so that they are absolutely proof against every element. Being heavily galvanized, they cannot rust and are practically indestructible. Moreover, the smooth surface of the shingle will not permit dust or dirt to lodge on the roof, and defile the rain water.

The Metal Shingle & Siding Co., Limited, of Preston, Ont., offer to send you, free, their literature containing names of those who have used "Safe Lock" Shingles in your own locality. 47

GENERAL TO CHASE TRIBES.

French Soldiers In Morocco Have Orders to "Sleep Out."

Paris, Sept. 25.—The Matin yesterday says it understands that Gen. Drude received instructions which permit him to "sleep out." This means he is not to return to the main camp at the close of each day of operation, as the tribes, who have not accepted the French terms of peace, have retired to such a distance that it would be impossible to reach them otherwise.

The correspondent of The Matin at Casablanca telegraphs that the delegates, at the conference on Monday, refused for a long time to surrender their arms. They urged that they would be at the mercy of the other tribes, but finally their objections were overcome by a few judicious concessions. M. Malperthuy, the French consul at Casablanca, is of the opinion that the three tribes may be allowed to retain their arms provisionally to preserve order in their territory and force the other tribes to submit. After the conference, which lasted three hours, M. Malperthuy gave a banquet to the delegates and lodged them in the city.

The correspondent of The Matin at Tangier telegraphs that the famous consignment of rifles at Mazagan has been carried off and that the weapons are now on their way to Morocco City. The governor will be held responsible for the disappearance of the weapons.

LINER IN COLLISION.

Allan Steamer Disabled With Many Passengers on Board.

Montreal, Sept. 25.—Brief reports of an accident that seems to have been almost a terrible tragedy have come to hand by telegram from Fame Point, which indicate that a collision occurred some time on Sunday between the Allan Liner Mongolian and the freighter Hurona of the Thompson Line, probably in the Straits of Belle Isle.

No definite account of the accident has yet been forwarded, as neither boat carried a wireless apparatus, but the Mongolian was evidently seriously injured and is now on her way back to Quebec with the big freight boat standing by her.

The Mongolian had on board 150 passengers, and the first intimation of the collision came to hand yesterday afternoon when Messrs. H. and A. Allan received a telegram from Fame Point stating that the steamship Mongolian had signalled that she had been in collision with the freight ship Hurona, and had been so seriously injured that she was compelled to return at slow speed to Quebec with her hundred and fifty passengers.

Further details of the affair will hardly be available until the two vessels reach Quebec, which will probably be some time to-day, according to the speed of the disabled Mongolian.

CALGARY GETS GRANT.

Dominion's $50,000 Will Go to Western City.

Ottawa, Sept. 25.—Ottawa has lost its chance of securing the Federal grant of $50,000 for the Dominion exhibition next year. Calgary, Alberta, was beforehand and as recently as the 17th inst., secured a promise from Hon. S. A. Fisher, that the grant would be given to the Calgary Exhibition Company for 1908.

This year the Dominion exhibition grant was secured by Sherbrooke, and the Minister of Agriculture was very glad when the occasion offered to arrange that it should next year go to the west. That has been the arrangement for some years past. After Toronto came the turn of Winnipeg. Then it came east again to Halifax. Last year it went to New Westminster, and, as stated, this year Sherbrooke had it.

It is expected the formal order in council will be passed in a day or so.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for an yeass of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

HUSBAND'S BRUTAL ATTACK.

Strikes His Wife With Shovel—Woman In Critical Condition.

Montreal, Sept. 25.—A new point of law was laid down yesterday evening by the chief of police of Longueuil, just across the river from Montreal, to the effect that if a man assaults his wife and nearly kills her, but does not make any apparent mark upon her, no arrest can be made.

Early in the evening John Lapointe loaded up on whisky blanc and then proceeded to correct his wife with a shovel, and caught her a blow on the back of the head that laid her out apparently dead.

Lapointe then jumped into a neighbor's rig and drove off, evidently thinking he had killed his wife. The chief of police was called and found the woman still alive, after which the children brought Lapointe back, telling him that their mother was not going to die.

The chief of police declined to arrest Lapointe, claiming that as he could not find any marks upon the woman's head he was not justified in making an arrest.

In the meantime at a late hour last evening Mrs. Lapointe was still lying unconscious, and her physician states that she is very likely to die. Lapointe is being watched, and if his wife should die, he will be arrested on a charge of murder, otherwise he will probably go scot free.

AIMED AT CHINESE.

Kingston, Jamaica, Asks Government to Keep Out Undesirables.

Kingston, Ja., Sept. 25.—The influx of Chinese here is a serious matter. One section of the press is urging the Government to take steps to prevent their landing here as being detrimental to local traders.

Kingston's city council has adopted a resolution calling on the Government to amend the pauper alien immigration law so as to prohibit the entrance of undesirable foreigners.

The resolution is aimed at the Chinese, who, it is said, are over-running the island.

Assist White Immigration.

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 25.—At the banquet of the Board of Trade Monday night to commemorate its 20th anniversary, Hon. J. Bowser, Attorney-General, announced that the Government had in hand a policy to bring white immigrants from the old country by assisting them, and that all possible work would be done without the Japs or Chinese.

Another announcement was made by R. Marpole of the C. P. R., that that railway was going ahead with development in all parts of this province, and especially in the port of Vancouver.

Ready For War Again.

Berlin, Sept. 25.—According to information received here yesterday from President Davila of Honduras, Guatemala will support ex-President Manuel Bonilla of Honduras in the latter's effort to regain the Presidency of Honduras.

This is taken to mean that war between Guatemala and Honduras is likely to begin immediately.

Suicide at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Sept. 25.—From "long brooding over injuries received to his leg from an accident at the Grand Trunk Pacific construction camp, and his subsequent incapacity for work and ill-health, Louis Olsen, a Norwegian, committed suicide yesterday morning about 8 o'clock in the Scandia Hotel by shooting himself in the mouth with a revolver.

Chicago, Sept. 25.—A few flakes of snow fell on Monday. The fall was not sufficiently large to be recognized by the weather bureau, but for several minutes snow was plainly visible in the air.

The Last Stroke.

BY LAWRENCE L. LYNCH,

Author of "A Woman's Crime," "John Arthur's Ward," "The Diamond Coterie," "Against Odds," Etc.

Ferrars was learning to know this man, and he knew that the time might soon come when Doran would be his closest confidant and strongest assistant in Glenville.

"We look for Brierly in a day or two," the detective said, casually, as they bowled along. "He will bring a profesional gentleman with him," and he turned his head and the eyes of the two met. Ferrars had found that Doran could extract much meaning from a few words, at need.

"Something in the detective line, for instance? 'S that it?"

"That explanation will do for Glenville, Doran."

"Cert. Glenville ought to know it, too. We've been thinking 'twas about time one of 'em appeared," and Doran grinned.

Ferrars smiled, well satisfied. He knew that the dignified family lawyer and friend, who was coming to Glenville with Robert Brierly by his own desire, would be promptly accepted as the tardy and eagerly looked for "sleuth" who would "solve the mystery" at once and with the utmost ease.

And that is what happened.

The two men arrived a day earlier than they had been expected, and the moment Robert Brierly found himself alone with Ferrars he drew from his pocket a letter, saying, as he unfolded it with gentle, careful touch:

"This letter, Mr. Ferrars, is the last written me by my brother. It was in the city, passing me on the way, before I had arrived here, and I found it, among others, at the office. I have not spoken of it even to the doctor. Read it, please."

Ferrars took the letter and read.

My Dear Rob.: Since writing you, I have found in an old newspaper, quite by accident, something which has almost set my head to spinning. I know what you will say to that, old boy. It brings up something out of the past; something of which I may have to tell you and which should have been told you before. It's the only thing, concerning myself that is, which you do not know as well as I, and if I have not confided this to you, it was because I almost feared to. But then, why try to explain and excuse on paper when we are to meet, please God, so soon. Brother mine, what if that flood tide which comes, they say, to each, once in life, was on its way to you and to me? Well, it shall not separate us, Rob.; not by my will. But stop. I shall grow positively oracular if I keep on, (no one ever could understand an oracle, you know) and so, till we meet, adieu,

Brother Charlie.

When Ferrars had read this strange missive once, he sat for a moment as if thinking, and then deliberately re-read it slowly, and with here and there a pause, when at last he handed it back to Brierly, he asked:

"Do you understand that letter?"

"No more than I do the riddle of the sphinx, Ferrars," he leaned forward eagerly as he put a question, and his eyes were apprehensive, though his voice was firm. "Do you connect that letter in any way with my brother's death?"

For a moment the detective was silent, thinking of the newspaper, and the missing clipping. Then he replied slowly as if considering between the words.

"Of course it's possible, Mr. Brierly, but as yet I cannot give an opinion. If you will trust that letter to me for a few days, however, perhaps I may see more clearly. It's a surprise, I'll admit. I had fully decided in my own mind, howsoever much the murderer may have premeditated and planned, his victim was wholly unaware of an enemy—of his danger."

"You were about to say, of an enemy!"

"Yes. It is what I have been saying before seeing that letter." He put out his hand and as Brierly placed the letter in it he added, "Let us not discuss this further. Does your friend, Mr. Myers, know of it?"

"Not a word."

"Then, for the present, let it rest between us."

Two days after this interview, Doran dropped in at the doctor's office, and before he left had managed to put a newspaper, folded small, into the hands of the detective, quite unperceived by the other occupants of the room. For, while since Brierly's return, accompanied by his friend, these two had occupied together the rooms at Mrs. Fry's, the doctor's cottage was still headquarters for them all, while Ferrars now had solitary possession of the guest chamber, formerly assigned to Brierly.

Mr. Myers was a shrewd lawyer, as well as a faithful family friend. He had felt, from the first, that there was mystery as well as crime behind the death of Charles Brierly, who had been near and dear to him, as dear as his own son, for the two families had been almost as one ever since John Myers and the elder Brierly, who had been school friends and fellow students, finally entered together the career of matrimony.

There had been no children in the Myers homestead, and the two lads soon learned to look upon the Myers house as their second home, and "Uncle" John Myers had ranked, in their regard, only second to their well beloved father. So that when the young men were left alone, in a broken and desolate home, that other door opened yet wider, and claimed them by right of affection.

Mr. Myers had been taken to the scene of the murder, had visited Hilda Grant, and, by his own desire, had examined the books, papers and manuscripts in Charles Brierly's rooms, and on the day of Doran's call, a longer drive than he had yet taken had been arranged. He was going, accompanied by Brierly and driven by Doran, to look at the skiff, still unclaimed and waiting upon the lake shore below the town.

Ferrars, much to Doran's regret, had declined to accompany them from the first, and when he found himself in possession of the coveted newspaper he joined the others in their desire that Doctor Barnes should take the fourth seat in the light surrey behind Doran's pet span; and the day being fine and business by no means pressing, that gentleman consented.

CHAPTER XIV.

When Ferrars found himself alone he lost no time in locking his chamber door and beginning his study of ancient news.

Taking the newly-arrived paper from beneath his pillow, where he had hastily thrust it, he spread out the mutilated copy beside it and speedily located the clipping which should explain, or interpret, Charles Brierly's letter.

Putting the perforated paper over the other, as the quickest means to the end, he drew a pencil mark around the paragraph which appeared in the vacant space, and then, without pausing to read it, reversed the two sheets and repeated the operation.

This done, he took up the marked paper and sat down to read and digest the secret.

"It won't take long to tell which side of this precious square of paper contains the thing I want, I fancy," he meditated, as he smoothed out the sheet.

The printed paragraph outlined by his pencil was hardly three inches in length, and he read it through with a growing look of comprehension upon his face. "I wonder if that can be it?" he said to himself at the end. And then he slowly turned the paper and read the pencil-marked lines upon the other side.

When he had perused the brief lines over, his brow knit itself into a frown, and he reread them, with his face still darkened by it. Then he uttered a short laugh, and laid the paper across his knee.

"I wonder if the other fellow will know which side was which!" he muttered, "I'm blest if I do!" He sat for half an hour, with the paper upon his knee, looking off into space and wrinkling his brow in thought. Then he got up and put the two papers carefully away.

"I'm very thankful that I did not speak of this to Brierly," he thought as he went out and locked his door behind him. "It would be only another straw, yes, a whole weight of them, added to his load of doubt and trouble."

The two paragraphs read as follows, the first being an advertisement, with the usual heading, and in solid nonpareil type:

"Charlie: A. has found you out. He will not give me your address. Be on your guard at all times for there is hanger. All will be forgiven if you will come back; and F. will help you to avoid A. You are not safe where you are. The city is better and we cannot feel at ease knowing the risk you are running. At least stay where you are. Your brother or some friend ought to know. For your own sake do not treat this warning as you did A.'s other threat. He means it. Still at G. street. M."

The second paragraph was in the form of a would-be facetious editorial paragraph, and ran thus:

"Not to have a fortune is sad enough, but to go up and down in the land a millionaire and never know it, is wretchedness indeed. Many are the foreign fortunes seeking American heirs, if we are to believe the advertising columns; and the heirs seeking fortunes are as the sands of the sea in number.

"There have been the Frayles, and the Jans, and a long retinue of lost heirs to waiting estates, and now it appears that the great Paisley fortune rusts in idleness and shamelessly accumulates, while the heirs of a certain Hugo Paisley, an Englishman who was last heard from in the Canadas many years ago, are much to be desired now that the home supply of English bred Paisley stock is run out."

There was more of this screed below the line which marked the lower end of the clipping, but it contained no further reference to the Paisleys; merely dilating in a would-be humorous manner upon the degenerating influence of the foreign legacy upon the American citizen. But the advertisement upon the other side had been cut out in full, and exactly at the beginning and end.

It was puzzling and disappointing in the extreme. Ferrars had really looked upon this cut newspaper as his strongest card, when he should have found the missing fragment, and now—! He thought and wondered, and re-read letter and clipping again and again, but to no good purpose, and at last he locked away the puzzling documents and went out to make a morning call upon Mrs. Jamieson.

That evening he talked, first with Robert Brierly, and then with the family lawyer, and to both he put the same direct questions. "What could they tell him of the early history of the Brierlys? of Mrs. Brierly's family and ancestors? Had they any relatives in England or Scotland, say? Were there any old family papers in the possession of either?

Of Robert Brierly he also asked if, to his knowledge, his brother had had, at any time, a love affair; not serious, but amusing, perhaps; a student's flirtation, even. Also, when and for how long, if at all, had the brothers been separated since their school days?

GOOD ADVICE TO INVESTORS

Put some of your money into the new gold fields of Larder Lake, Northern Ontario.

It is going to make more money for investors than any gold district ever before known in the history of gold mining.

Don't wait or put it off another day, DO IT NOW. Every dollar you invest at the present time will return to you a hundredfold, buy and hold, follow our advice, buy shares of the HIGHLAND MARY GOLD MINES, LIMITED, of Larder Lake, at the present price, 10c per share. If you buy now at this price you can never be called upon to pay anything more, as the shares are fully paid and are forever non-assessable. The shares of Highland Mary will never sell for less than the present price, but every share you buy now will, we believe, eventually be worth a hundred times more.

Our previous advertisements have stated that the Highland Mary Gold Mines were situated at Larder Lake, the new gold fields of Northern Ontario, and consist of thirty well-located, forty-acre gold claims, 1,200 acres in all, located on the north-east arm of the Lake, in the same locality as the Dr. Reddick properties—The Proprietaries Gold Fields Company, the Lucky Boys and the Blue Bell Companies—and that there were no indebtedness or encumbrances; that many great gold-bearing veins were found on the property; that engineers and miners estimated that there were many thousands of tons of ore that would produce millions of dollars in gold available, and only waiting for the installation of the stamp mills that are to be installed.

We have also stated that when we advise investments in Highland Mary, and make the statements regarding that Company and the Larder Lake district, that we know what we are doing. We have been all Summer with our engineers and assayers in the Larder Lake Gold Fields, making thorough examinations; we have spent thousands of dollars in the last three months in this manner for the purpose of satisfying ourselves, beyond any doubt or question, that the Larder Lake district is what is claimed for it; and, further, we have spent this money and satisfied ourselves in order that we might not mislead our clients, who rely upon us and make investments through our advice.

We have done everything in the way of ascertaining facts that could be done or that could be desired of us by our clients. Our business is to select good, profitable investments that we can recommend without reservation. Thousands of letters from satisfied clients testify that our efforts are successful. That has been the principle and policy of the house of Law and Company for the past seventeen years. "Be sure you are right, then go ahead," has been our motto, and the results from the investments made by thousands of clients is a standing recommendation as to whether having followed this policy and motto has proven profitable to the investors.

We have heretofore made this statement, and we now make it again: Any investor who has invested money through Law and Company, since their house was established in 1890, through any misrepresentations or misstatements, can, by making such fact known to us, receive the return of the amount invested, together with interest thereon. We have never been called upon to return a single dollar, and have never had such a claim made, and we do not believe there will be regarding any representation or statement made by us up to the present time. We know that we have always adhered to the truth and proclaimed the facts as we have found them.

We probably do as large a business as any financial brokerage house in Canada. It is growing rapidly. Our responsibility and integrity in the business world is beyond reproach. Investors who have done business with us in the past have learned to rely absolutely upon our advice regarding investments in mining shares.

We were the first to offer shares in companies owning properties of established values in the Larder Lake district. At the very outset we placed our engineers and assayers in the field. We obtained exhaustive and reliable reports. We then came out boldly over our signatures and told the world what was there. Our advertisements told the world of the golden north, and predicted the great stampede which followed. World-famed mining engineers and mining experts of Europe and America have since visited the Larder Lake camp, and have not only confirmed the reports sent out by our own trustworthy engineers, but have endorsed all that we have claimed for Larder Lake, as to its present and future.

Take our advice and act quickly. Place all the money you can in shares of the Highland Mary. It is the best stock at the present time to buy. Do you ever consider that one hundred, five hundred, or one thousand dollars placed in a bank, at three to four per cent. interest per annum, must stay there something like twenty years to double itself, and even then would you have had any pleasure, enjoyment or luxury from it, or through its benefits? Certainly not, but perhaps someone else would. It might be invested over and over again by someone who would make many thousands of dollars through investing it in profitable undertakings. You certainly understand that no concern could afford to pay you interest unless they have the legitimate privilege of using it in order to make a profit over and above what would have to be paid to yon for the use of it. If you have not thought of this, you should understand it now, and you should understand further that you could take your own money and make investments with it, in this the greatest of countries for profitable investments, and make as much money with it as anyone else could, and receive the pleasures, enjoyments and luxuries from the great profits therefrom, instead of the other fellow.

Put some money in the Highland Mary. You won't lose, you will make big money, and you won't be long doing it. One eminent engineer from London, who ought to know what he is talking about, says that Larder Lake mining shares will advance to a higher level than did the shares of gold companies in the Rand of South Africa, where some of them advanced to over $500.00 per share.

It has been estimated by engineers and mining experts who have visited Larder Lake, and have made conservative calculations that there is already ore that can be counted upon as available in the Larder Lake District, containing more value than the total capitalization of all the Larder Lake companies.

We say again, buy HIGHLAND MARY, and buy it quick, before the big advance that is sure to come.

Foremost British Manufacturer Speaks Highly of Peterborough

Mr. John Brinton, the Venerable Head of Brintons' Limited, of Kidderminster, England, is Deeply Impressed on His First Visit to This City—Some Interesting Information About the Pioneer Carpet Manufacturer and the Building Up of a Great Industry.

A brief note appeared in yesterday's Review regarding the presence in Peterborough of Mr. John Brinton, head of the firm of Brintons' Limited, of Kidderminster, England, one of the largest carpet manufacturing concerns in the world. Mr. Brinton is in Canada on a business trip in connection with Brinton Carpet Company, of Canada, this being his second visit to the Dominion and his first business trip to Britain's premier colony.

A Review representative who called on Mr. Brinton at the Brinton Carpet works this morning was pleasantly received by the prominent English manufacturer who chatted interestingly for a half hour. Although eighty years of age, Mr. Brinton has the appearance of a man of fifty and the virility and energy of a person in the twenties. It is almost a safe assertion that there is not a man in Canada of Mr. Brinton's age who retains such a youthful appearance.

"No, this is not my first visit to Canada," said Mr. Brinton in response to a query from the newspaperman, "but it is the first time I have been here on business. I was in Canada thirty-one years ago, but at that time I came to see the country, being on a business visit to the United States on that occasion."

A LEADING MANUFACTURER

Before proceeding it might be stated that Mr. Brinton holds a high position in the English manufacturing world. He is chairman, or president, of Brinton's Limited, whose works are located at Kidderminster and who employ 1200 hands. The firm is one of the largest of its kind in the world and was founded by Henry Brinton. Mr. John Brinton's father, in 1819. Until 1848 the business was only carried on in a small way, but as soon as Mr. Henry Brinton took his two sons, Henry and John into partnership in 1848 the business commenced to expand. It was just at this time that the power looms came into use and revolutionized the carpet industry. The Brinton company was the first firm to install the power looms, the first machines being for the manufacture of printed tapestry carpets. At the first great international exhibition in London in 1851, the power loom for the making of Brussels carpet, invented by Biggerloe, an American, was exhibited, and almost immediately came into general use. The Brinton people were also the first to install the Biggerloe looms, their motto being to always be a little ahead of their competitors. The business was carried on under the name of Henry Brinton & Sons, until 1870, when the founder of the business, Henry Brinton, and his son, Henry jr., both died within a few weeks of each other, leaving the entire management of the business to the only surviving son, Mr. John Brinton, the gentleman who is in Peterborough at present.

A BRITISH M.P.

Mr. Brinton has held many important public positions, and in addition to his connection with the carpet industry, has many other business interests. He has been a member of the British Parliament, representing Kidderminster. He entered the House during the eighties as a supporter of Hon. W. E. Gladstone. However on Mr. Gladstone declaring in favor of Home Rule for Ireland, a section of the Liberal party broke away, and, under the leadership of Lord Harrington, now Duke of Devonshire, formed what has since been known as the Unionist party, being opposed to Home Rule for Ireland. In addition to being a member of Parliament, Mr. Brinton has been a chairman of the Poor Law Union of Kidderminster—a very important organization—and at the present time is manager of the County Lunatic Asylum at Kidderminster, an institution where there are 1,200 patients. Mr. Brinton has been connected with the management of this important public institution for the past twenty-two years.

PLEASED WITH PETERBOROUGH

In reply to the reporter's question as to what he thought of Peterborough, Mr. Brinton said: 'This is the first time I have ever been in your city, and although I have only been here a few hours, I have been struck by the business spirit and energy of the people, and the general note of progress. I like to see progressiveness, and in this respect I am greatly impressed with Peterborough. It gives me a sense of satisfaction to know that our branch in Canada is located in a centre where the people are industrious, honest-living and progressive. Perhaps we might have made more money if we had established our branch in the States, which many British manufacturers have done, but we felt that it was our duty to go to a country where our own flag is flying and under our own Sovereign. That's why we established our branch in Canada, and you cannot realize how pleased I am that it is situated in a progressive city like Peterborough."

Mr. Brinton is greatly pleased with the management of the Brinton Carpet Company of Canada, and in this connection speaks highly of the Canadian manager, Mr. G. P. Preen. "Mr. Preen deserves great credit," said Mr. Brinton. "The erection and equipment of this splendid plant, where nothing existed but a bare field a few months ago, was a task that few men would care to tackle. The work has been done in a manner that leaves nothing to be desired, and I want to say that the business here has been built and is going ahead along the right lines. I noticed that as soon as I stepped inside the factory. If I had not found things as they should have been, not one word of compliment would I have uttered. Mr. Preene deserves great credit for what has been accomplished."

Incidentally Mr. Brinton referred to the fact that Mr. Preen's father has been associated with him in the carpet industry in the Old Country for the past thirty years.

Mr. Brinton will be eighty-one years of age in January, and, being a lover of the esthetic both in art and nature, is greatly pleased with the natural beauties of Peterborough. He arrived here Monday night and will remain in Canada about ten days, sailing from New York for home on October 4th. He has travelled extensively and has visited many countries. Of course, he sees great changes in Canada since he was here thirty-one years ago, and has a high opinion of the empire's leading colony.

Serious Accident to the Chairman of Board of Works

Ladder on Which Ald. Duncan Was Standing Slipped Throwing Him to the Ground—Sustained Fracture of Left Arm and Other Injuries.

While superintending some work in connection with the painting of a house that is being built on Sherbrooke street by Mr. Kelly, of Toronto, Ald. Duncan, chairman of the Board of Works, had his left arm broken at the wrist, the nail torn off one of the fingers of his right hand and his left eye badly discolored.

He was standing on a ladder placed against one of the walls of the house when the ladder slipped hurling him to the ground 18 feet below. His eye came in contact with one of the stakes that was holding in position one of the forms of the new pavement that is being constructed on Sherbrooke street and it was just by the merest chance that that organ was not destroyed. Ald. Duncan is able to be around again to-day and although he naturally feels very much the shock of his severe injuries, he says he will be a regular attandant at the City Council and committee meetings.

His many friends will be pained to hear of the serious accident that befell him and trust that no complications will set in to prevent his complete recovery at as early date as possible.

Inquest Held on Platform At the Station at Birdsall's

Investigation Commenced to Ascertain How Harry Kelly Came to His Death—Adjourned Until Monday.

Gathered together on the platform at Birdsall's station yesterday afternoon, Coroner Dr. Gray and a jury of "twelve good men and true," commenced an investigation into the death of Harry Kelly, who was found dead on the Grand Trunk track, a short distance east of Birdsall's. Owing to the fact that the jurymen had to be secured at Westwood, 2 1-2 miles from Birdsall, considerable time was spent in preparing for the inquest, and owing to the late hour only one witness was heard. There was no room or building in which to hold the inquest at Birdsall, so the coroner and jury assembled on the station platform, and after viewing the body, commenced the taking of evidence. Dr. V. McWilliams, of Keene, who was called when the body was found, gave evidence of an unimportant nature.

It was decided to have a post-mortem examination of the body, and this was done at Westwood this morning by Drs. McWilliams and Harrison, of Keene, and the remains were buried at Westwood this afternoon.

The inquest was adjourned until Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, at the town hall, Westwood.

There seems little reason to believe anything else than that Kelly came to his death by being run over by a train.

Scattergood Fails in Attempt to Outrival James Reynolds

Collapsed Near Pickering on His Way Back From Toronto—Was Trying to Cover 128 Miles in 38 Hours.

Special to the Review.

Pickering, Sept. 25.—William Scattergood, the Oshawa walker, seems to have failed in his attempt to walk to Port Hope, then to Toronto, and return, a distance of 128 miles in 38 hours.

Two men driving east in a waggon report him as having broken down at Highland Creek on his way back from Toronto this morning.

No details could be learned.

Scattergood is 24 years of age, and weighs 145 lbs.

A few months ago, James Reynolds, barber, of Port Hope, tried to cover the distance from that town to Toronto and return—128 miles in 36 hours. He gave out at Newcastle on this return journey, about 18 miles from Port Hope.

Oshawa, Sept. 24.—Walker Scattergood returning from Port Hope, reached Newtonville 1.20 p.m., Newcastle 2.30, Bowmanville 3.45, and Oshawa at 5.58. He had a bath and supper here, and left at 7.30 for Toronto, where he expects to be at 4 a.m., tomorrow morning. He is scheduled to arrive back in Oshawa at 3 p.m., tomorrow, and be taken to the Fair Grounds in Mr. Will Eaton's automobile. He was in excellent condition when leaving Oshawa and felt confident of making good.

Appeal Heard on Power Question

Argument as to McAllister Company's Lease

In Divisional Court, Toronto, yesterday, before Messrs. Chief Justice Falconbridge, Justice Britton and Justice Riddell, argument in the appeal took place in the action of the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co. vs. McAllister.

Osgoode Hall reports contain the following reference to the case,—

Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co. vs. McAllister,—James Bicknell, K. C., and G. B. Strathy, for third parties, appealed from judgment of Boyd, C., dated 3rd June, 1907, on the question of costs, and also that part of the judgment dismissing the claim of the defendants against the third parties. Action was brought by the plaintiffs against the McAllister Milling Co. for $750, being three months' rent of the Otonabee Mills, which the plaintiffs rented to the defendannt Co. The McAllister Co. compromised their indebtedness of $69,000 to the Ontario Bank for $10,000 and some securities, the bank agreeing to indemnify them against all liabilities in connection with their business, but in December, 1906, abandoned the premises. The lease has still seven years to run. At the trial plaintiffs recovered the $750 sued for against the defendants, and the defendants recovered judgment over and against the Ontario Bank, for that sum and costs. The Ontario Bank, appeals from that judgment. Daniel O'Connell and G. N. Gordon, Peterborough, for defendants, and F. D. Kerr, Peterborough, for plaintiffs, opposed appeal. Not finished.

Belleville citizens have appointed a committee to report on the water power of the Moira river.

Largely Attended Meeting of Life Insurance Underwriters

Constitution Adopted and Committes Formed—Important Business Transacted—Next Meeting Will be Held in Lindsay.

A representative meeting of the Life Underwriters' of Central Ontario, was held in the office of the Great West Life, on Monday, 23rd inst.

Immediately preceding this meeting the executive met and recommended the addition of the following committees to the constitution:—The Social committe, consists of S. E. Sills, convener, W. H. Hill, W. F. Nelson and Geo. Pope.

Finance committe, D. H. Moore, convener, W. F. Nelson and G. B. Stevenson.

Membership committe H. P. Lindsay convener, W. R. Widdes and Thos. Marks.

At eight o'clock, the president, H. P. Lindsay, called the regular meeting to order, when after roll call, it was found that the majority of the companies were represented, especially was this in evidence with the standard companies.

The Secretary, W. F. Nelson, read the minutes of previous meeting, which were adopted.

The constitution was adopted and the secretary was instructed to have same printed for distribution along with application forms to those residing outside of Peterborough.

The next regular meeting will be held in Lindsay on the third Monday of October, at which prominent insurance men will give short addresses on different phases of the work.

Although the association members derive many benefits from the different essays and discussions at each meeting, yet the most striking feature to a causal observer is the good feeling showed by the members to each other, no tonly in assemblies but in daily business.

The association was formed because the life insurance agents saw an opportunity to greatly improve the condition of their work by uniting.

Peterborough Industrial Fair Will be Opened To-morrow

Everything in Readiness for Most Successful Exhibition in History of Peterboro'—Busy Day at the Grounds—Fair Will be Worthy of Patronage of Public.

Tomorrow will see the opening of the Peterborough Industrial Fair, which will be continued on the 27th and 28th, the two days following. All arrangements have been made in connection with the conduct of the exhibition, which, from all indications, will smash all previous records.

The entries in all classes are very numerous and there are 500 for the poultry show alone. The old poultry pens have been removed and the fowl will be shown in a large tent. The other exhibits will be proportionately large.

Today is a busy one at the grounds and they are astir with exhibitors in preparation for the opening tomorrow. Tents are being put up and men are moving getting everything ready for the big show.

The committee in charge of these events will be Messrs. Brooks, Winch and Baptie.

WEDDING BELLS

ROY—CAVANAH

A very attractive September wedding was solemnized this afternoon, at St. John's church, at 2.30 o'clock, when two of the city's most popular young people plighted their troth.

It was the marriage of Miss Mona Morris Dott Cavanah, eldest daughter of the late J. H. Cavanah, of Lethbridge, Alta., and of Mrs. Cavanah, 198 London street, to Mr. Frederick Lewis Roy, youngest son of Mr. R. M. Roy, of this city. The bride is an estimable and accomplished young lady and possesses a wide circle of friends, while the bridegroom is an energetic and popular young man. He is held in the highest esteem by his associates and the business and professional men of the city.

Punctually at 2.30 o'clock the bridal party entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by the organist, Mr. R. J. Devey. The scene was a very pretty one. The procession was led by the ushers, followed by the bridesmaid and the maid of honor, and then the bride, who was given away by her uncle, Mr. Wm. Green. The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of white silk peau de soie, with trimmings of Irish rose point lace and brussels point lace. She wore the conventional bridal veil, surmounted with orange blossoms. The veil is an heirloom of the family and was worn some 35 years ago in St. John's church by an aunt of the bride.

A shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley was carried by the bride. The maid of honor, Miss Ola Cavanah, sister of the bride, was gowned in white silk organdie, trimmed with silk and lace and insertion. She wore a white picture hat and carried pale pink asters. The bridesmaids were Misses Gladys Roy, sister of the groom, Eva Green and Lela Crookshank, of Blenheim, cousins of the bride. Miss Roy's dress was pale blue with hat to match, while Miss Green was gowned in pale green with hat to match, and Miss Crookshank in pale pink with hat to match. They carried pale pink asters. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Will Cavanah of Rochford, Vt., brother of the bride. The ushers were Messrs. Graham Ferguson, Ross Cameron and Ernie Ford. While the register was being signed, Mr. R. Rice, of Montreal, sang an appropriate solo. The guests included only the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties.

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the residence of Mrs. Wm. Green, 375 Brock street, where a reception was held and hearty congratulations bestowed upon the bride and groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy left on the 4.48 C.P.R. train for Toronto, Buffalo and other American cities. The bride travelled in a suit of navy blue serge with trimmings of tan leather. She wore a hat to match. On their return they will reside in the Grand Central block. The best wishes of a host of friends for many years of happy wedded life follow them.

COX—McKINTY

A very pretty wedding was solemnized this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, at the residence of Mr. Robert Cox, 161 Douro street, when Miss Ethel Amelia McKinty, daughter of Mr. John McKinty of Lakehurst, was united in marriage to Mr. Frederick Charles Cox, sixth son of Mr. Henry Cox of Otonabee.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. H. Coon, pastor of Mark street church, in the beautifully decorated drawing room. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a gown of cream silk colienne, trimmed with bebe frish face and satin ribbon. She wore the conventional bridal veil, decked with orange blossoms. She carried white roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Jennie Fawcett, cousin of the bride was becomingly attired in white silk. She carried pink roses. The groom was ably supported by his brother, Mr. Clifford Cox.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome quarter-cut oak dining suite, to the bridesmaid, a pearl crescent, and to the groomsman gold cuff links. After the ceremony, hearty congratulations were bestowed upon the bride and groom. A choice wedding repast was partaken of. About 65 guests were present.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents, including a beautiful oak parlor table from the employees of the packing department of the Quaker Oats Co., and a silver pickle dish from a number of girl friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Cox left on the 4.48 C.P.R. train for Toronto, and points west. The bride travelled in a suit of navy blue broadcloth with blue hat to match.

BEATTY—HUNTER

A quiet wedding took place today noon, at the residence of Rev. J. R. Webb, 344 Rubidge street, when Mr. Roland Beatty, son of Mr. Guy Beatty of Verulam township, Victoria county, was united in marriage to Miss Cora May Hunter, daughter of Mr. John Hunter of Verulam, township. The bride was assisted by Miss Zetta Robertson, while Mr. Garfield Kennedy, supported the groom. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Webb, pastor of the Murray street Baptist church. Mr. and Mrs. Beatty, after a short wedding trip will reside in Verulam township.

A USEFUL LESSON

No man occupying a responsible position—one especially where the life and safety of the public depend on clear headedness and good judgment—has a right to imbibe during business hours or to report for duty after a night of moist dissipation (far better for all concerned if such employees did not indulge at all. The railways generally recognize this and have adopted rigid rules. The companies are doing more practical work for the advancement and observance of temperance principles than possibly any other agency or movement. They know that such steps must be taken and their aggressiveness in this respect is worthy of all commendation.

Perhaps no position is more responsible than that of a telegraph operator despatching and reporting departures of trains. Any neglect or the slightest error, means possible death. There is too much over-taxing and lengthening train operatives' hours in railway management, but the company have the right to exact sobriety of those employed, especially when on duty. It is an abuse of any position in any line of commerce to have it represented by a man under the influence of liquor, and the employer suffers from the adverse reflections natural in such cases, but it is nothing short of a criminal offence in a case of this kind, where it might cost the lives of many passengers.

ON BUSINESS BASIS

It was thought when Sir Wilfrid Laurier took the portfolio of Railways and Canals from a maritime province representative and handed it over to an Ontario man that a start was being taken to remove the Intercolonial Railway from political graft and graft, and run it on sound business principles. Too long have there been constantly recurring deficits; too long has the road been run in the interests of the Liberal party and been a powerful lever for patronage and graft. Mr. Graham, the new Minister has promised to change all this, but if he is in earnest he should check some of the utterances of his new colleague. Dr. Pugsley, who has been promising the people of St. John all sorts of things, as if it required only a wave of the hand or a magic word or two to carry things out. Time and time again have recommendations been made that the control and management of the Intercolonial Railway would be removed entirely from the political arena. Such a pledge was made by Mr. Emmerson when he took office and in the next election year, the record a deficit of nearly two million dollars made by campaign expenditures on the railway. The business management of Mr. Graham's predecessor involved the Moncton land deal, the Truro land deal, the Halifax land deal, the Eastern Supply purchases, the oil contracts, and other transactions which savor more of politics and of graft, than of straight railway business. Mr. Graham may intend to do better, but he is not beginning well, for in this very week, when he is promising a business management, his colleague, Mr. Pugsley, in running an election in St. John in the same old manner promising revised railway rates, increased accommodation at the stations, more suburban trains, more conveniences, increases of railway men's pay, and all sorts of concessions with which Mr. Pugsley, as Minister of Public Works, has nothing whatever to do. Mr. Graham makes himself a party to this political use of the railway by allowing it to be so, thus showing that his pledges are false and that he is following the evil old path.

PEN POINTS

Are you ready for the postman?

Do you like the change in the atmosphere?

How is your furnace working after the summer holiday?

A speculative question! Will the price of milk and coal be advanced?

With good weather, the record of the Peterborough fair, this year, will surpass all its predecessors.

Peterborough's big fall fair opens tomorrow. Be sure to attend and do everything in your power to help make the exhibition a success.

Guelph is going to hold a big Old Boys' Re-union next year. Why should not Peterborough get in line and hold a similar gathering? It is years and years since this city had a big demonstration.

There has not a day passed for some time, but what the Canadian papers have recorded a fatality under the heading "Gored to death by an angry bull." When will owners learn to deborn such animals?

In baseball this rule is three strikes and out. Not so in yachting. Here is that gay old acquatic sport, Sir Thomas Lipton, who has been put out of the game with three Shamrocks, now coming forward with another challenge for the America's cup and with a fourth Shamrock. Talk about Robert Bruce's spider after that!

Three soldiers have died and seven are still laid up with typhoid fever contracted at Petawawa camp. Doubt exists as to how the disease was contracted. An examination should be made of the water supply. Of the hundred men who composed the British and Canadian artillery teams, who remained there ten days last summer, over fifty were made ill, apparently by the water.

The New York Engineering and Building Record thinks the American Society of Civil Engineers ought to make an investigation of this Quebec bridge collapse, "solely in the interests of engineering," as it is confident that "until such a strictly professional investigation is made, the cause of the disaster will not be definitely known, and it may not be then." It suggests that the influence of secondary stresses may have to be considered in connection with the causes of the disaster.

Liberal newspapers are having severe spasms of virtuous indignation over the fact that Hugh Graham of the Montreal Star, contributed $21,000 to the Conservative campaign fund in Quebec in 1904. The Winnipeg Tribune (Independent Grit) refers to this assumed Grit indignation and says,—"No one will suspect this Tribune of any desire to condone the pouring of money into constituencies by either Grit or Tories—nevertheless this journal cannot suppress a few convulsions of laughter, when members of the Ottawa Government and the Government newspapers pretend to be shocked by a discovery that leads to the allegation, that corruption was practised in an election! With Brandon, Brockville, Huron, London, Oxford, and Shelburne and Queens, still on the map of constituencies, a Government member or a Government paper that refers in terms of denunciation to the use of money in any amount in elections, is almost too delightfully humorous to be held responsible for moral obliquity."

IN MEMORIAM

Lines written on the death of Bridget Ann Herr, of Dummer, who died of pneumonia, Sept. 9th.

O Bridget, thy gentle voice is hushed
Thy warm, true heart is still;
And on thy pale and peaceful face
Is resting death's cold chill.
Thy hands are clasped upon thy breast
We have kissed thy marble brow;
And in our aching hearts we know,
We have no sister now.

When we see the precious blossom,
That we tended with such care,
Rudely taken from our bosom,
How our hearts almost despair.
Round the little grave we linger,
Till the setting sun is low;
Feeding all our hopes have perished
With the flower we cherished so.

This lovely bud, so young, so fair,
Called hence by early doom;
Just came to show how sweet a flower,
In paradise would bloom.
Ere sin could harm, or sorrow fade,
Death came with friendly care;
The opening bud to heaven conveyed,
And bade it blossom there.

Through all pain, at times, she smiled
A smile of Heavenly birth;
And when the angels called her home,
She smiled farewell to earth.
Heaven retaineth now our treasure
Earth the lonely casket keeps,
And the sunbeams long to linger,
Where our sainted Bridget sleeps.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber,
Peaceful in thy grave so low;
Thou no more will join our number,
Thou no more our sorrows know.
Yet again We hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled;
And in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed.

Loving friends weep not for me,
I long to be at rest;
How happy, happy, I shall be,
When pillowed on My Saviour's breast.

Oh! the hope, the hope is sweet,
That we soon in Heaven may meet;
There we all shall happy be—
Rest from pain and sorrow free.

MARY ELLEN.

Poor Treatment Given Employees

Havelock Man Speaks Strongly Against Food Given C.P.R. Construction Gang

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Sept. 17.—Mr. John Seaney has returned to his home from Maynooth, where he has been employed all summer on the construction work of the C.P.R. Mr. Seaney speaks very strongly against the treatment the men working under contractors there receive in regard to food and sleeping quarters. The first thing, and one which causes much rebellion on the part of the men as the cooks, who, are very often inexperienced. Besides this the apparatus for cooking is very limited, as well as the varieties of food, consisting for the most part of fat pork, potatoes, beans and badly baked bread, with very few vegetables or fruit. The food is eaten off a long dirty table, and the saying "fingers before forks," is quite general as the supply of knives and forks is very small.

The sleeping quarters are just as bad, the men being huddled together where the air is impure and close.

Mr. Seaney, who strongly denounces anything of this sort, is at present looking for one hundred men to work in lumber camps.

NO ASSAULT.

The assault charge laid against Mr. Geo. Alley of Belmont by Mr. Ezekiel Munroe, alleged to have been committed on August 16, arising from differences of opinion as to ownership of some marsh hay, was tried here on Monday, by Magistrates S. S. Joyce and Wm. Mathison. It was found out that no assault took place so the case was dismissed, Mr. Munroe having to pay the costs of court, amounting to $5.35.

Rev. C. S. Lord of Grafton Accepts The Invitation to Fenelon Falls

Encouraging Reports of Mission Fields Presented at Presbytery Meeting—Much Business Transacted at Regular Quarterly Session Held in Knox Church.

The Presbytery of Peterborough held an important regular meeting on Tuesday, at which considerable business was transacted. The sederunt was in Knox church and lasted from early in the morning until late in the afternoon. The ladies of Knox church, furnished a substantial dinner, which was served in admirable style, and this put the brethren of the cloth in a good working mood.

Rev. C. S. Lord of Grafton and Vernonville, accepted the call to Fenelon Falls. The call was presented and deputations were present from Fenelon Falls and also from Grafton and Vernonville.

The latter desired that Mr. Lord remain, owing to the importance of the work, his increasing usefulness and influence.

The Fenelon Falls representatives presented their needs in impressive terms. Rev. Mr. Wallace of Lindsay, moderator of Fenelon Falls session, supported their claim. The call was then placed in the hands of Mr. Lord, who accepted it, and the Presbytery also sustained the call. The pulpits at Grafton and Vernonville, will be declared vacant on the second Sunday in October.

Mr. Gilbert Gomm of Hamilton was appointed to take charge of Pontypool, Janetville and Ballyduff.

Rev. Mr. MacKenzie and the session of Centreville church were requested to continue the fortnightly services at Stewart's Hall in Otonabee for six months. The services have been well attended.

MISSION FIELDS.

Rev. S. S. Burns reported on the state of the work at Lakehurst mission. Rev. H. J. Keith, on the mission fields in Chandos, Mr. Currie on the fields in the northern part of the Presbytery, and Mr. Reeves on Cordova, Beaver Creek, and Marmora. The reports were all very encouraging.

There will be no application for a grant from the augmentation fund from Ballyduff, Janetville and Pontypool, where Mr. Gomm will labor for the coming year. He succeeds Rev. D. P. Oswald, who has gone to the North West.

OTHER BUSINESS.

The report of the Presbyterial W. F. M. Society, was read by Rev. D. A. Thompson, clerk of the Presbytery, and a vote of thanks was tendered the society for their excellent work and the success of their efforts.

The ladies of Knox church were also thanked for the excellent dinner provided for the members of Presbytery.

It seems that the Board of Managers of Brighton Presbyterian church recently mortgaged the church property to the extent of $1,500 without first obtaining the sanction of the congregation and the consent of Presbytery. This matter was reported upon, and the mortgage sanctioned, but the Presbytery expressed regret that the managers had taken such action without proceeding in accordance with the law of the church in respect to the pinning of mortgage on church property.

Rev. G. A. MacLennan of Norwood, presided at the morning session and Rev. Peter Duncan of Colborne, moderator of the Presbytery, who arrived by the noon train, was in the chair during the afternoon.

Those present were Rev. Messrs. MacLennan, Norwood; Reeves, Campbellford; Thomson, Hastings; Keith, Peterborough; Lord, Grafton; Duncan, Cobourne; McLeod, Brighton; MacFarland, Warkworth; Johnson, Millbrook; Dr. Marsh, Springville; Peckover, Omemee; Burns, Lakefield; Currie, Warsaw; McDonald, Keene; and Gomm, late of Hamilton.

The elders in attendance were Wm. Cuthbertson, Norwood; Larmer, Centreville; Alex. A. Stewart, Stewart's settlement; R. Harrison, Wm. Fowler, J. C. Silcock, J. W. Bennet, Peterborough, and others.

Collegiate Institute Field Day to be Held October 4th

And the Cross Country Run on September 30th—Committee is Looking After All Arrangements.

The annual field days of sports of the local Collegiate Institute will be held on Friday, October 4th, at Nicholls Oval, and the cross country run will take place on Monday, September 30th. The dates were decided on at a meeting yesterday afternoon when the following committee was appointed to look after all arrangements: C. Lees, M. O'Brien, M. Dobbin, H. Hall, A. Brawender, A. Cameron, G. Mimorgan, K. Crane, J. O'Brien, J. Creedon, E. Kelly and R. Brand.

It is expected that the sports this year will be better contested than ever before as there are all kinds of athletic material at the Institute and the entries for the different events promise to be numerous. The list of events for the field day will be the same as last year with the exception that a 100 yards race for ex-students has been substituted for the pick-a-back contests. The ex-students race is certain to prove one of the best events on the programme and should furnish considerable excitement.

The start on the cross country run will take place at the corner of Murray and Water streets on Monday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock. The runners will cross the creek by the McDonnel street bridge and recross it by the Smith street bridge, turn at the corner of Smith and Water streets and then return to the starting point.

The usual number of prizes and medals will be offered and there will be a special prize for the ex-students' race.

The committee is working hard for the success of the field day and expect good contests and a large number of spectators.

In connection with division between junior and senior entries, it may be stated that all those who were not fifteen on the first of September will be allowed to compete as juniors.

Lakefield Man Cut Off Piece Of His Ankle Bone With an Axe

Mr. Charles Grylls Will be Laid up for Some Time as Result of Mishap—Many Residents Leave for Different Points—Political Gossip as to Parliamentary Candidates.

Lakefield, Sept. 25.—Mr. M. W. Clifford, who has been a welcome visitor in Lakefield for several months past, left the village on Tuesday last en route for England.

The past week has witnessed a regular exodus of people from Lakefield.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, who passed two or three days in Lakefield last week, departed some days ago for the West, and Mr. and Mrs Fred. Hayward, the well known artists, who have been spending a long time here in the pursuit of their art, have left this week for a few weeks' outing at Gores' Landing, preparatory, to their departure for England.

Miss Ethel Hayward, a former resident of the village, left for Ottawa on Tuesday last.

Mr. King, mining engineer, of Cobalt, was a visitor for a few days last week at "Uplands," the residence of Mr. LeFevre.

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Davidson, who have been spending their holidays in a round of visits to Toronto, Minden and other points, returned home on Monday last.

Mr. Britton Osler, of Toronto, spent the week end at "Uplands," leaving for home on Monday.

Miss Helen Traill, of Rochester, who has been visiting her aunt, Miss Traill, left for home on Wednesday, 25th Sept.

Prof. Michael MacKenzie, of Toronto University, paid a brief visit to "The Grove" on Saturday last.

FIRST RACE.

The first race in the series for the Seaforth Handicap at "The Grove" took place on Monday, the winner being Eric LeFrey, of Millbrook. There are five races in the series, the boy winning the maximum number of points in the series gaining the championship and the silver cup.

AN ACCIDENT.

Lakefield is having its own share of distressing episodes and accidents. We have already had to chronicle two or three, and now we have to add to the list the severe accident that has befallen our well known townsman, Mr. Charles Grylls. Mr. Grylls, who has been in charge of Dr. Rase's yacht all summer, had the misfortune last week to cut his ankle very badly with an axe. In addition to the cut Mr. Grylls sliced off a portion of the ankle bone. Dr. Race brought the sufferer down on his yacht, and Mr. Grylls is now at his home under the doctors 'hands. He is getting along well towards recovery.

OTHER NOTES.

Mr. W. Grieve arrived in the village from Vernon, B.C., on Thursday last.

Rev. W. J. Creighton was in Millbrook on Sunday last in connection with the harvest festival at that place. Rev. A. W. MacKenzie took the incumbent's duties for the day.

Miss Creighton, of New York, who has been paying a short visit to her brother, Rev. W. J. Creighton, left for home on Saturday last.

The Children's Day services were held in the Presbyterian church on Sunday morning last. The church was very nicely decorated by the ladies of the congregation. Rev. S. S. Burns conducted the services.

Mrs. Ridpath, who has been visiting her son, Mr. J. W. Ridpath, returned to Toronto on Friday last.

SHIPPING CATTLE.

Mr. Trude Waldon, of Douro, passed through the village on Friday last with several cattle and horses, which he was driving through to Peterborough, for shipment to Grimsby, Ont. The animals are the property of Messrs. Dunn, formerly of Lakefield, who are now operating a large fruit farm at Grimsby.

Mrs. Lingwood, accompanied by her sister, Miss Florence Atwood, leaves on Thursday, for her home in Simcoe, Ont.

HARVEST FESTIVAL.

Ven. Archdeacon MacKenzie, of Brantford, is expected in Lakefield during the first week in October. He will probably preach the harvest festival sermon in St. John's church. Mr. MacKenzie is a very eloquent and forceful preacher, and, moreover, a man of magnetic personality.

ELECTION TALK.

Incipient signs are looming up in the air of the approach o the Federal battle. Already the names of Messrs. W. H. Casement and J. R. Stratton are mentioned as likely candidates for the East Riding in the Dominion Legislature, on the Liberal side, and Mr. R. C. Strickland for the Conservatives.

Havelock Needs Good Creamery

Proposal to Erect One Steadily Gaining Ground With Farmers

Havelock, Sept. 25

The farmers in this vicinity are taking up the watchword of Havelock, named, "Keep Going," and in illustration of this we mention that matter which forms the discussion of the farmers near Havelock at present, "What about creating a creamery in Havelock?"

The need of a creamery in Havelock is quite evident, and, since the destruction of the Melrose Abbey cheese factory by fire, the idea has steadily gained ground with the farmers, and it is altogether likely that a creamery will be erected in the near future for the origin of the idea is half; the other is easily done.

A meeting of all those interested in the subject will be held in a few weeks, when the matter will be fully shown to the farmers and some action taken towards the creation.

Among a certain class of farmers the opinion seems to reign that butter making does not pay. Most of the creameries of Ontario pay nearly as much per 100 pounds of milk as the cheese factories in the same neighborhood. Besides this, the value of the skim milk must be taken into consideration, which varies from 10 cents to 25 cents per 100 pounds, according to the way it is cared for and used. The whey received from the cheese factories might be put up against the skim milk, but in order to get the best results the whey must be fed sweet, which rarely happens. Every farmer knows the value of skim milk and the number of ways it may be used. By careful examination it has been found that a ton of cheese shipped out of this country contains about 29 times more fertilizing material, which is taken out of the soil than does a ton of butter. The last mentioned matter is a very important one in most districts.

Wife Murderer is Insane; Verdict of Jury at Whitby

Adam Lodwick Saved From Gallows, Will Go to Asylum.

Little Daughter Gives Evidence In Whitby Court—Father Had Been Injured and Was Never Right Afterwards—Pitiful Scenes at Trial—Child Tells How She Discovered the Awful Crime.

Whitby, Sept. 25.—Adam Lodwick is saved from the gallows, but adjudged insane, for shooting his wife last July, as a result of the finding of the jury at the Assizes here yesterday.

Two talesman from Brock Township, where the tragedy occurred, were challenged and relieved from service during the empanelling of the jury. Many witnesses were relatives and neighbors of the prisoner. All agreed that since last March he had become a changed man, despondent, morose and fearful of dying.

The evidence of Drs. Blanchard and Boynston, who attended prisoner last spring, was very clear that he was suffering from melancholy. The latter advised then that he be sent to a sanitarium if a recovery was to be expected.

Dr. Warren, jail surgeon, under whose care prisoner has been since the shooting, pronounced him insane, and Dr. Bruce Smith, inspector of jails and asylums, and Dr. Beemer of Mimico asylum, accorded in the view of the local physicians.

The whole mass of evidence was so clear as to insanity that Mr. T. C. Robinette, counsel for prisoner did not think it necessary to address the jury. Mr. Arnoldi also refrained from doing so, and Judge McMahon charged strongly in favor of finding the prisoner insane, which the jury did after being out half an hour. It now remains for the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to dispose of his custody.

Tells of Murder.

Alma Lodwick, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Adam Lodwick, was the first witness called. She wept greviously upon going into the box. Mr. Arnoldi in lieu of examination read the young girl's evidence at the preliminary trial. Then Mr. Robinette asked a few questions. The facts elicited were that the daughter last saw her mother alive on the night of the 19th. Both father and mother were in the kitchen. In the morning she was awakened by a sound like a door slamming. When she came downstairs she found her mother lying upon her bed, dressed, with the baby on her arm, the top of her head shot off, blood and brains scattered over the bed, and even blood over the baby's face. The latter was crying. Alma carried the baby to the kitchen, where her father sat. She saw the shotgun, which was usually kept over the cellar door, lying on the table. She said nothing to her father about her mother, being afraid. She gave baby to father to hold and went out. In a few minutes she returned and saw the gun in its place.

Took Shells From Gun.

The previous day her father had taken the gun down and asked her mother to go into the yard to see him shoot a bird. She expressed the opinion that there was something up. She succeeded in getting the gun and extracting the shells from it. She afterwards told her daughter she was afraid.

Last January Mr. Lodwick had been injured by a tree at Mr. Thompson's, a neighbor. Since the accident her father had said queer things and her mother had desired to keep the fact from the neighbors. For weeks her father had not gone to bed at night, fearing to die. Often he said he was going to die.

True Bills Returned.

Whitby, Sept. 25.—The grand jury returned true bills against Conductor Cook and Engineer Kyle for criminal negligence in the Myrtle railway accident case, and are likely to do the same for Train Despatcher Wilkinson. The hearing opens this morning.

General Booth at Halifax.

Halifax, Sept. 25.—General W. S. Booth of the Salvation Army was accorded a reception in the City Hall yesterday afternoon. Lieutenant-Governor Fraser, Premier Murray, Judge Longley and other prominent citizens were present.

A special meeting of the city council was called and an engraved address presented on behalf of the city corporation.

The general, in reply, outlined the work of the Army, after reading of an address and reply, a largely attended informal reception was held.

Trouble at New York Primaries.

New York, Sept. 25.—Two men, one of them a policeman, were hurt in West 57th street, just before the polls opened at the primaries. In this district there is a hot contest for the Tammany leadership. A number of shots were fired, a great crowd gathered and for a time the police were unable to restore order. The injured men were taken to a hospital with scalp wounds.

No Naval Station.

London, Sept. 25.—(C. A. P.)—Asked by the Canadian Associated Press if the report was true that the Admiralty had decided to re-establish a naval station at Esquimalt, the Secretary of the Admiralty replied, "Absolutely untrue."

Tie Contracter Killed.

Parry Sound, Sept. 25.—On the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway at Foots Bay on Monday, Alexander Fraser, a tie contractor, was killed. The man, who had been drinking some, was walking along the track, and when overtaken by the train attempted to get out of the way, but stumbled and fell in front of the engine, both legs and an arm being cut off. The unfortunate man was picked up and placed on the train and an effort made to get him to Parry Sound for treatment, but he died on the way. He was conscious to the time of his death, and told of his attempt to escape.

Sir John Reade Dead.

Montreal, Sept. 25.—Word has been received here of the death of a famous Canadian in England, where Surgeon Major-Gen. Sir John Reade, surgeon to King Edward, has passed away. Sir John Reade is a native of Perth, Ont., and won his way to high rank by merit in the Crimea and Indian Mutiny. Rev. G. H. ACTIVITY IN LINDSAY Y.M.C.A.

New Secretary and Physical Director Have Been Engaged

The recent lassitude in Y.M.C.A. circles has changed to one of activity, and at a recent meeting of the Board of Directors a new secretary and physical director was engaged, and the Association promises to boom from now on.

The new men are Messrs. Cook and J. J. Thompson, of the Toronto West End Y.M.C.A, and these men will start active work in the near future. With two "hustlers" such as these men are, the work is bound to go forward. The physical department of the "Y" will receive better attention than heretofore. All members are requested to redouble their efforts to make the Association a decided success in Lindsay.—Lindsay Post.

Caterpillars are Destroying Trees

"I took a drive yesterday," remarked a George street business man to-day, "and I notice that several fine fruit and shade trees are being destroyed by caterpillars. I hope you will call attention to this matter and that all persons will be alive and make a strong effort to get rid of the pest. Now is the time of the year to be watchful. We do not want a repetition of what occurred six or seven years ago. Maple trees, plum trees, apple trees, shrubbery, etc., are subject to a visitation from caterpillars. All tree owners should be vigilant and immediately destroy the pest on its first appearance."

Anyone Can Mix This at Home

Fine Prescription to Relieve Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble

A large health publication tells its readers of a number of simple and safe prescriptions that can be made at home. The following, however, for the cure of rheumatism and kidney and bladder troubles receives the greatest praise, viz.: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. These simple, harmless ingredients can be obtained at any good prescription pharmacy at little cost and are mixed by shaking well in a bottle.

The dose for adults is a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime, drinking a full tumblerful of water after each dose. It is further stated that this prescription is a positive remedy for kidney trouble and lame back, weak bladder and urinary difficulties, especially of the older people, and one of the best things to be used in rheumatic afflictions, relieving the aches and pains and reducing swellings in just a short while.

A well known local druggist states that this mixture acts directly upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys; cleanses these sponge-like organs and gives them power to sift and strain the poisonous waste matter and uric acid from the blood which is the cause of rheumatism.

Cut this out and hand to some sufferer which would certainly be an act of humanity.

MEMBERSHIP IS GROWING

There was a large attendance of members at the quarterly meeting of Court Stanley, A.O.F., held last night in the S.O.E. hall. C.R. Bro. T. Hendry presided. Two propositions were received for membership. Bro. Gilpers read the auditors' report, which showed a good increase in the different funds. It was moved by Bro. H. Hanwell, seconded by Bro. S. Adlum, that a hearty vote of thanks be tendered the auditors for their report and their services. The Chief Ranger, Bro. Hendry, appointed a committee of younger members of the court to take charge of good and welfare, and arrange a programme for each meeting after the business had been concluded.

THREW STICKS ON THE STREET

Yesterday afternoon some small boys who amused themselves by throwing sticks on Chambers street badly frightened a horse that was passing along the street. This habit has become so common that it has developed into a nuisance and P.C. McGinty was called to give the official "stop!" The stick tossers were advised to desist from their troublesome practice.

AMUSEMENTS

SUMMERS STOCK CO.

After an absence of two years Mr Geo. H. Summers and his excellent company, appeared at the Grand opera house last night and presented that screaming farce "His Other Wife," to a crowded house, which judging from its applause and laughter thoroughly appreciated the production. "His other Wife" is a cleverly constructed play and the plot is an exceedingly complicated one. To attempt to delineate it would be an impossible task. Suffice to say that the many knots were happily unravelled at the conclusion of the piece. During its presentation the audience fairly shook the walls of the theatre with their loud and incessant laughter.

Geo. H. Summers, as Father Abel, "who raises Cain," was needless to say, the most conspicuous and funniest member of the cast. His conception of the role was ludicrous in the extreme and his every appearance on the stage was the signal for a succession of laughs of the heartiest character.

Miss Belle Stevenson is better known to Peterborough theatregoers for her work in serious roles than in comedy, but at last night's production she proved herself a clever and pleasing comedienne. Beatrice G. Lee, as Laticia, Harry Walthouse as Richard, son of Father Abel, Fred Doherty, as Willie Crow, Arthur Stone as Arthur Howe and the other members of the company all interpreted the different roles assigned them in an intelligent and original manner.

The specialties are particularly strong this year and between the acts some very entertaining turns are introduced. Nagel and Adams, novelty humorists and comedy jugglers, have an act that caught the fancy of the audience and they were enthusiastically received. Arthur Stone, monologue comedian and parody singer, Beverley Benton, interpreter of picture songs, and Gordon and Hayes in their character change specialty, were also warmly greeted and forced to respond to numerous recalls.

Mr. "Al" Harding, who was the musical man at "Scott's Coliseum," when that concern was doing business here, is musical director of the Summers" show and has acted in that capacity for several other companies. He is a pianist of more than ordinary skill. Mr. Harding is well known as the author of the words and music of that pretty song success, "Katie, my Irish Colleen."

Re-opening of Bethany Church

Edifice Has Been Renovated and Now Presents a Bright Appearance

The Presbyterian church at Bethany has recently been repainted and repapered. It now presents a cheery attractive appearance, and on Sunday last, when the re-opening services were held, the worshippers scarcely recognized the place of worship so decided has been the change.

In the morning Mr. Gilbert Gomm of Hamilton, preached and in the evening Rev. Dr. Marsh of Springville, conducted a limelight service.

Many were unable to gain admission so great was the attendance.

On Monday evening an entertainment was held. "Ye old days" was was represented. The members of the choir were dressed in old fashioned garments, tableaux depicting the conditions and dress of 50 and 75 years ago were presented and the old way of harvesting, reaping, etc., was shown on the stage.

Mr. Gomm sang several songs while Mr. and Mrs. John McIntosh, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sanderson, of Springville, were present and materially added to the enjoyment of the programme. "Ye old time days" was a great success and much appreciated by the large number present. Rev. Dr. Marsh is the energetic and popular pastor of Springville and Bethany churches which are making great progress.

The service in Springville church on Sunday evening was conducted by Mr. Gomm, who delivered a most acceptable sermon.

Cheese—Firm, unchanged; receipts, 4678.

Eggs—Firm, unchanged; receipts, 15,774.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Easier—Hogs Again Higher at Buffalo.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—London cables are firmer at 11c to 12½c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 10c per lb.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Sept. 24.—Receipts of live stock at the city market since last Friday, as reported by the railways, were 90 carloads, composed of 1251 cattle, 476 hogs, 2123 sheep and lambs, with 186 calves.

Exporters.

Few exporters were on sale, but there was one lot of 14, the best on the market for some time, brought in by M. McConvey, his own feeding, weighing 1340 pounds each, that were bought to fill a special order, by Mayhew, Wilson & Hall, at 5c per cwt. These cattle were equal in quality to the best Chicago cattle and are being shipped to Bermuda. Export bulls were quoted at $3.25 to $4.50 per cwt. It must be remembered that this sale is no criterion to go by, as there were no other cattle on the market approaching them in quality.

Butchers.

Picked lots were reported at $4.75; best loads, $4.25 to $4.60; medium, $3.75 to $4.15; common at $3.25 to $3.60; cows, $2 to $3.75; canners, $1 to $2.

Feeders and Stockers.

Few feeders or stockers are being offered. There is a demand for distillery cattle, steers at $3.25 to $3.50, bulls at $2.25 to $2.50.

Milch Cows.

Several Montreal buyers looking for choice milkers and springers caused a good trade for the best class, but common, inferior cows were slow of sale. Prices for the best ranged from $40 each, while common to medium ranged from $25 to $35 each.

Veal Calves.

There was a good demand for the best class of veal calves; prices ranged from $3 to $4.25, with a few choice new milk-fed calves at $7 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts were large, export ewes selling at $4.25 to $4.40; rams at $3 to $3.50; lambs, $4.50 to $5.75 per cwt.

Hogs.

The run was light. Mr. Harris reports prices unchanged at $6.12½ for selects and $5.87½ for lights and fats. Packers are complaining of the quality of hogs being marketed. There are far too many light pigs, and pigs with coarse, heavy frames, that are unfinished, coming on the market. Packers are determined to remedy this by discriminating in price against both these classes. Drovers will do well to leave all such hogs with the farmer to finish.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Sept. 24.—Cattle — Receipts, 250 head; slow and a shade lower; prime steers, $6.10 to $6.50.

Veals—Receipts, 200 head; active and steady; $5 to $8.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 3300 head; active; pigs steady; others, 5c to 10c higher; heavy, $6.30 to $6.60; mixed, $6.30 to $6.35; Yorkers, $6.20 to $6; roughs, $5.25 to $5.75.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 2600 head; sheep active and steady; lambs, slow and 10c to 15c lower; lambs, $5 to $6.15.

New York Live Stock.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Beeves — Receipts, 1440; no trade reported; feeling steady to firm; exports to-day, 800 cattle and 2600 quarters of beef; to-morrow, 6400 quarters of beef.

Calves—Receipts, 338; market steady, but westerns slow; veals, $5.50 to $9.50; culls, $4 to $5; tight westerns, $5; grassers, nominal.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 2300; steady; good lambs in fair demand; sheep, $3.50 to $5.50; lambs, $6.50 to $7.75; no prime lambs offered; culls, $4.50 to $5.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 7100; steady at $6.10 to $7 for state and Pennsylvania hogs.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—Cattle—Receipts, estimated, 10,000; market, best steady, others lower; steers, $5.35 to $7.30; cows, $2.30 to $5; heifers, $3 to $5; bulls, $3.60 to $5; calves, $3 to $8; stockers and feeders, $3.40 to $6.

Hogs—Receipts, estimated at about 14,000; market weak to 5c lower; choice heavy shipping, $6 to $6.75; light butchers, $6.40 to $6.55; light mixed, $6.25 to $6.40; choice light, $6.45 to $6.60; packing, $5.40 to $6.20; pigs, $4.25 to $6.35; bulk of sales $6.35 to $6.55.

Faster Boats For C. P. R.

London, Sept. 25.—(C. A. P.)—Mr. Baker, the European manager of the C. P. R., interviewed by The Westminster Gazette, said the shareholders at the meeting in Montreal on Oct 2, would be asked to sanction the building of two 22-knot liners for the Atlantic service, so as to make the passage from Liverpool to Quebec in five days. The C. P. R. expect to cut the time from London to Brisbane down to twenty-four days.

Bank Robber Gets Ten Years.

Montreal, Sept. 25.—Robert Hazleton, convicted of robbing the Provincial Bank at St. Croix, Que., of $3,500, was yesterday sentenced to ten years' imprisonment.

W. M. Cleland was sentenced at Winnipeg to a year in jail for biting a policeman's thumb.

COLLISION ON GEORGE STREET

Horse and Buggy Ran Into Load of Wood

A horse and buggy and a load of wood, collided on George street last night about nine o'clock, and for a little considerable excitement was created. One of J. E. A. Fitzgerald's wood waggons, loaded with wood was being driven north, while two young men with a horse and buggy, belonging to Eastwood's livery were driving south. Evidently they did not keep much control over their horse. The first they ran into a telegraph pole, and a few minutes later collided with the load of wood. The shafts of the buggy were smashed. The horse was unhitched and taken to its stable, as was also the buggy. The teamster with the load of wood drove on, none the worse of the collision.

Mail Carriers Not Yet Chosen

All of the Men Will be Selected To-morrow

It was thought that all the mail carriers for the free postal delivery service would be selected to-day. It is understood that the majority of the men have been chosen, but the names of all selected will not be ready for publication until to-morrow. Mr. R. Dyraton, Deputy Superintendent of post offices and Mr. R. R. Hall, M.P., were both seen by the Review this afternoon, but had no information to give concerning the appointment of the men.

High Praise For Dr. Coughlin

Commissioner Snow Comments His Work at D. and D. Institute

The report of Mr. A. J. Russell Snow, barrister, of Toronto, who conducted an investigation into the management of the Deaf and Dumb Institute, Belleville, praises the work of the late principal, Mr. R. Mathison, and also his successor, Dr. Coughlin.

The investigation was ordered as a result of the charges made prior to the resignation of Mr. Mathison as principal. The commissioner's report reflects credit upon Mr. Mathison's conduct of that institution and as for the charges, which were of a trivial nature, they are dismissed.

The commissioner inspected the buildings and reports most favorably upon the management of the institution. There are no fire escapes, but Dr. Coughlin since taking charge has instituted fire drill.

ORAL TEACHING.

The commissioner makes several recommendations—The adoption of the oral system of instruction, with requisite additional teachers, there being about 112 pupils capable of receiving this training, is among the recommendations.

The commissioner finds that there can be little or no improvements in the system of discipline adopted by Mr. Mathison, and he notes that the new Principal, Dr. Coughlin, has already achieved success both as manager and as an educator of the deaf and dumb.

Mr. S. Hoolihan Is Now Manager

Mr. Sam Hoolihan has been appointed manager of the Palace pool rooms and cigar store, Mr. M. Pappas' fine establishment on the east side of George street. Mr. Pappas has been fortunate to secure such an excellent manager. Mr. Hoolihan entered on his new duties on Monday.

Miss Daisy Sproule Now With the Musical Success "Cupid at Vassar"

The many friends of Miss Daisy Sproule, niece of Mrs. John Huggart, of this city, were disappointed when they did not see her in the cast of "Little Dolly Dimples" Co., when that talented company appeared here on Monday night.

Miss Sproule was with "Little Dolly Dimples" last year, but this season is appearing with "Cupid at Vassar," an exceedingly tuneful and original musical play by Owen Davis and Totten Smith, with music by A. Baldwin Sloane, the composer of "Sergeant Kitty," "The Gingerbread Man," and other comic opera successes.

Miss Sproule is well-known in Peterborough and lived for many years with Mr. and Mrs. Huggart.

Mr. H. Hamilton Fyfe is writing a series of letters to The London Daily Mail on the "Land of the Future," to wit, Canada. Mr. Fife draws this picture of the Cobalt mining district:

"It is an easy place to see, Cobalt, for all the big propositions lie close around the lake, which is itself to be burrowed under in the hope that beneath its waters lie rich deep veins of silver. The Right-of-Way and Larose shafts are within a biscuit-toss of the station. The Nipissing just across the lake, the University but a short walk, and so on. The miners' wooden shacks, with hotel, restaurant, stock exchange (which is also the theatre), and a few stores all cluster together on one little hill just above the railway track. It looks, of course, like a place that was only started yesterday. Upon the permanence of the vein hangs the question whether it shall grow into a big town, or whether the hillside, now a busy human ant-hill, shall in a few years be deserted again, and the wooden buildings left to rot in silent loneliness. Whatever happens, Cobalt will always be an interesting memory by reason of certain peculiarities, which mark it off from all other mining camps. There is no Bret Harte element about it—no Cousin Jacks in red shirts, no promiscuous revolver-shooting, no lawlessness, very little gambling, and, strangest of all, no drink. I never thought to see a teetotal mining camp, but that is what Cobalt professes to be. The hotel provides no stronger stimulant than ginger ale. At the restaurant you drink water or go dry. There is smuggled whisky in some of the shacks—and capital whisky, too, as I discovered, my prospector being a hospitable soul, even when he found I was not a buyer. But no liquor is openly on sale, and anything like disorder is put down with a heavy hand.

"Usually a mining camp is in the wilds, far from railhead and civilization. To this one you can travel in a Pullman car, and it is nothing unusual to see well-dressed women picking their way through the mud, visitors for the day from towns within easy reach. But to miners of long experience Cobalt is a mining camp de luxe. They may grumble about the ban on alcohol, but they appreciate the plentiful supply of food as well as the fact that "Tarawnter" is only twelve hours off. For "Tarawnter," they tell me, is one of the finest jag-places on earth."

Tempered Copper.

Copper is stated to be so hardened as to take a cutting edge by adding to it while in a molten state about 2 per cent of potassium ferrocyanide. The color is not affected. The reason for the change is not clear, but it is supposed to result from the introduction of iron and possibly carbon.

Elephant Tusks.

The average weight of a pair of elephant tusks is 180 pounds, but a single tusk has been known to weigh 200 pounds.

The Rebel Leader of India.

An idea seems to prevail that Lala Lajpat Rai, whose deportation has caused so much discussion in India and the British Commons is merely an ignorant fanatic, imbued with a fierce hatred of English rule. As a matter of fact, Rai is an exceptionally clever as well as successful man. The son of a teacher in a Government school, he distinguished himself at every stage of his student career, and when he entered the legal profession soon obtained a wide practice in the Chief Court of Lahore, which is practically the High Court of the Punjab. Ultimately he decided to devote himself to the service of his country, and actually imposed upon himself the pledge to spend his future income from his profession for the benefit of the Indian public. Mr. Lajpat Rai is also a man of business. He is a director of the Punjab National Bank, the first and largest of the native banks in Lahore, and is also interested in several cotton mills and presses in the Punjab, being, in some cases, on the board of directors.

Dog's Homing Instinct.

The other day, writes a correspondent, a dog was sent by carriage to Brandon Station, in Norfolk, en route for London, from Buckenham Hall. At Ely it slipped its collar as the guard took it out to give it water; the time was after dark on a winter evening and the dog dashed away and could not be found.

At 6.30 on the following morning one of the stablemen at Buckenham heard a dog whining and howling under the window. It was the same dog returned. The distance from Ely to Buckenham is computed at seventeen miles.

The dog is a female spaniel and it is virtually certain that its local knowledge of the country about Buckenham on the side toward Ely was limited to a mile from the former. This would leave it an unknown tract of sixteen miles to travel through the dark in a single night. By what sense was it guided?

India's Sacred Fires.

India's sacred fires have not all been extinguished. The most ancient which still exists was consecrated 12 centuries ago in commemoration of the voyage made by the Parsees when they emigrated from Persia to India. The fire is fed five times every two hours with sandalwood and other fragrant materials, combined with very dry fuel.

Flour Not so High as Stated

Mr. Mulhern Says That Prices Were Misquoted

Mr. H. A. Mulhern of the Central Milling Co., rang up the Review today and said that the prices of flour as published in yesterday's issue, were quoted at a higher figure than they really are.

"The Central Milling Co., and the Peterborough Cereal Co. of this city are selling their best Manitoba wheat flour for $4.90 per barrel, and the next grade for $4.70 per barrel."

Mr. Mulhern said that the yield of western wheat last year, had been given as between 85 and 90 millions of bushels by best authorities and not 120,000,000 as stated in last night's issue of this paper. He said that it was impossible to state anything definite concerning this year's yield.

Holy Grail Found?

The London Express prints a story of the discovery, near Glastonbury Abbey, of a glass vessel of beautiful workmanship and apparently of great antiquity, which the discoverers believed is the Holy Grail of the Arthurian Legend. The Holy Grail is the cup which Christ is reputed to have drunk at the Last Supper, and according to ancient British tradition that was brought to England by Joseph of Arimathea, after the crucifixion.

The vessel is of bluish green glass of some kind, cunningly inlaid with silver leaf. A number of eminent persons, including some peers with ecclesiastical interests, have examined it. It is now in the possession of Prof. Wm. Crookes, who has undertaken to solve its history.

Confidence in Britain.

Speaking recently at the opening of the new University College School at Hampstead, the King referred to the fact that many colonial boys were educated there. His Majesty said it was gratifying to him that the colonies recognized the excellence of the British schools. He was convinced that the reliance placed in the Mother Country would not be in vain, in this or any other particular 6965.—THE NEW KIMONO COAT.

The up-to-date wardrobe is not complete unless it includes a long coat which may be used for travelling or driving or for general wear in cool or rainy weather, and the most practical of such coats are those which are semi-fitting and roomy. The kimono coat illustrated possesses all the essential qualities of a serviceable comfort-yielding garment, while its graceful shaping is most admirable, being so arranged that the coat fits easily across the bust and shoulders, widening thence to the hem, where it hangs in full loose folds. The long, sloping shoulder, with the wide sleeve, seamed as a continuation of the shoulder seam and set into the wide armhole without fullness, is a unique and conspicious feature, this being the "latest cry" in Parisian coat models. As shown, the coat is made of biscuit-colored broadcloth, with applied trimmings of black satin, and is most appropriate for afternoon or evening wear; but it may be developed in homespun, cheviot or tweed for ordinary wear, or in waterproof silk or lined cravonette if needed for a raincoat. To make the medium size will require 3 1-4 yards of cloth 54 inches wide.

6965.—Sizes 32, 36 and 40 inches.

The price of this pattern is 10c.

4244.—A PRETTY DESIGN FOR A MISSES CORSET COVER.

Daintiness and simplicity are the twin attributes realized in this attractive accessory of the young girl's wardrobe, here made of batiste decorated with shadow embroidery, and finished with trimmings of beading and lace. The making of the garment is so simple that the least expert of home sewers can easily accomplish it. The shield sleeves may be omitted, if desired, though most mothers like to have their young daughters wear them. For the 15 year size 1 5-8 yards of 27 inch material will be needed for making.

4244.—5 sizes, 13 to 17 years.

Lakefield Wants A Representative

Says Strong Conservative Candidate Should be Selected

There is a growing feeling in Lakefield and its vicinity, says the News, that Lakefield, having made such splendid strides in advancement during the past few years, and being easily the most important place in the East Riding of Peterborough should at the next nominations for the House of Commons, have a candidate from this part. For many years, Norwood and eastern and southern part of the Riding have produced the candidates. At present Mr. Finlay, of Norwood is the representative, and for many years, previous to his election, Mr. Laing of Otonabee sat in the House as our representative in the East. Lakefield and the country close about has many splendid men on both sides of politics, eminently qualified to worthily represent the East. As it appears probable that Mr. Finlay will again run in the Liberal interests, the News strongly advocates the selection of a Conservative from this part to contest the seat. Lakefield deserves to have a candidate and should one be selected from here, let us work for make him member.

Are Nets Used At Rice Lake?

Hastings Star Says 'Lunge is Being Sold at 3c Per lb.

Lunge must be very plentiful on Rice Lake these days, the Hastings Star says, when the Indians on the lake are offering lunge for sale at 3c. per lb. This is pretty cheap for a good game fish and it looks like a cheap way to kill out a good fishing ground by exterminating the lunge. Looks very much as though nets were being used.

Hazel Bell Won At Campbellford

Local Mare Defeated Joe. Allen in the 2.20 Class

Dr. Johnston's Hazel Belle cleaned up the 2.20 class at the Campbellford fair yesterday, winning in three straight heats. Joe Allen, Simpson, Lindsay, had to give way to the local mare, getting three seconds. Lady Gothard was third. The summary was as follows:

Hazel Belle	1	1	1
Joe Allen	2	2	2
Lady Gothard	3	3	3

In the 2.40 class, Major Hamburg, owned by the Harvest Ashley Stock farm, won in three straight heats. The green race was won by Jas. Anderson's mare.

The 2.20 class was the feature of the day and there was great applause when Hazel Belle came home a winner, carefully and skilfully piloted by Billie Kearns. Dr. Johnston is there to-day and is wearing a broad smile. He says he knew he had a good thing up his sleeve. The races at the local fair promise to be the best in years as the fastest ones in the city and district are entered.

A gentleman who has just moved to Peterborough from Petrolia, speaks in high terms of the splendid freight service of the Grand Trunk. He loaded his furniture and other belongings on a car at Petrolia at noon on Monday, and it was landed in Peterborough early yesterday morning. This is exceptionally fast time, in fact, it is not often the Express Companies do any better. The gentleman in question can hardly understand how the car came through so quickly and is naturally pleased about it.

Noted Author Is Bereaved

Death of Mother of Rev. R. D. Knowles of Galt

Peterborough people will learn with regret that the mother of Rev. R. D. Knowles, the noted Canadian author who lectured here last winter, has passed away. The deceased was the wife of Rev. R. D. Knowles and by her death removed the last member of what was considered in its day one of Toronto's most brilliant families. The father of the deceased, Mr. John Tyner, came to Toronto and to business on Yonge street in 1824 and was one of Toronto's leading citizens in its early days. Two of his sons, Clarke Tyner and Christopher Tyner, the former editor of the old Telegraph, the latter of The Liberal, and later of the Hamilton Times, were well known in the journalistic world. Mr. Christopher Tyner was considered one of the ablest leader writers Canada has produced.

Mr. Knowles died at Orillia on Sunday afternoon from heart failure. She was sixty-four years of age. The family had removed from Toronto to Orillia four years ago.

Deceased's son, Rev. R. E. Knowles was injured some time ago in a wreck while returning from preaching in Stewarton church, Ottawa, and for a considerable time was incapacitated from regular duties.

Public attention is called to Dr. R. Coughlan's advertisement, resale of his valuable properties in Hastings. See to-morrow and Saturday's Review.

Conductor Cook is Free; The Jury Says Not Guilty

Judge McMahon Severely Rebukes the Jury.

Remarkable Ending of Myrtle Collision Case—Mistake Was Not Crime Says Counsel — Jury Refused to Convict of Manslaughter—Feared Sentence Would Be Too Severe—Only One For Conviction.

Whitby, Sept. 26.—Conductor Cook was found not guilty. The jury returned the verdict after being out three hours. This was very much to the astonishment of nearly everyone present.

Judge McMahon said to the jury, after he had recorded their finding: "I hope none of you gentlemen are ever on a train when an accident happens, perhaps if you are, you will have a different opinion to that you have just expressed."

Talking with one of the jurors after they had been discharged, it was learned that only one of them had held out for conviction. That one felt in his conscience that Conductor Cook had broken the rules and should be punished.

Feared Severe Sentence.

The others took the ground that if their verdict was guilty, as the charge was manslaughter, his sentence might be unnecessarily severe, and so were for acquittal.

The judge's charge was quite pronounced against the prisoner. No witnesses were called by T. C. Robinette for the defence. Nothing new of importance was submitted by the prosecution beyond that brought out at the preliminary trials.

The grand jury returned a true bill for criminal negligence against Train Despatcher Wilkinson. The case goes over to the next Assizes and Wilkinson was given bail at $400.

Mr. Arnoldi Opened Case.

Mr. Arnoldi then opened the case for the crown by addressing the jury on the main points of the case. He emphasized the fact that the two men lost their lives by criminal carelessness, which amounted to a crime on the part of the prisoner. The prisoner, in accepting the position of conductor on the C.P.R. had undertaken to cross train 1,488 at Myrtle. He had not done so, and a charge of manslaughter resulted.

The rules of the C.P.R., the crown prosecutor went on, are perfect marvels of completeness. The Legislature has also provided rigid regulations for the running and operation of trains. These also had been disregarded by the prisoner in his capacity as conductor. Mr. Arnoldi then outlined the story of the wreck, and drew special attention to the alleged failure of Cook to read his train orders to his rear-end brakeman. On the contrary, Mr. Arnoldi alleged that Cook merely mentioned the fact in a casual manner that a train was to be passed at Myrtle.

The number of the train was not mentioned. As it happened, train 1,492 was on a siding at Myrtle, and, of course, the brakeman, not fully informed, concluded that 1,492 was the train they were to meet. The conductor, without thinking of train 1,488, let his train go on to a fate which resulted in the loss of two lives. There were two hours and a half in which to rectify the order, but Wilkinson, failing to raise Myrtle, had not notified his relief.

Is Too Much Attention Paid To Claims of the Labor Party?

Charge Levelled Against the Dominion Government.

Skilled Artisans Are Scarce — Yet Manufacturers' Association Says Their Entry Into Canada Is Not Encouraged—Revised Tariff Entirely Unsatisfactory—Industries Must Be Protected.

Toronto, Sept. 26.—The Canadian Manufacturers' Association believe that the powers that be show a great deal too much consideration for the Labor party. At least, this sentiment was very strongly expressed by speakers who participated in the discussions on the various reports presented at the convention yesterday. It cropped out when the meeting was considering the report of the Parliamentary committee, and it was also in evidence as the tariff committee's report was being dealt with.

The discussion on the latter document, which was presented by W. K. George, centred round a motion of E. G. Henderson of Windsor, that the report be amended by striking out the sentence, "We believe that, as in the past, our attitude on this question should be entirely outside party politics." He believed that it was better to eliminate all reference to political issues. This brought several members to their feet and for some time the debate was quite lively.

In the end the amendment was lost and, on motion of W. K. George, chairman of committee, the report was adopted as a whole. The report condemns the revision of the tariff as entirely unsatisfactory and declares the aim of the association to be to secure first, a tariff which would furnish relief to industries now suffering from unequal competition, and, second, one which would not only encourage a reasonable development of industries already in operation, but would also serve as an incentive to investors to establish new industries.

"We believe that the country, as a whole, is imbued with the idea that Canadian industries must be protected against the products of cheap foreign labor and specialized industries. We also believe that the public realizes more than it has ever done before, that the industries of Canada are providing a large and valuable home market for the products of the farm, and that everything should be done within reason which will develop them."

Is Labor Favored?

Strong protests against what was termed the indifferens of legislative bodies to the interests of manufacturers and their careful consideration of all the demands of organized labor were also voiced in the discussion of the various recommendations of the Parliamentary committee, and the report of the British office. The latter was presented by G. M. Murray. It showed that 70 applications had been received to date, coming from 61 different members of the association and asking for 840 workmen. The office was practically operating on a self-sustaining basis. Complaint was made that the Government had declined to recognize the London office to the extent of referring to it all applicants for information regarding the employment of skilled labor in Canada. This brought forth a vigorous protest from E. G. Henderson of Windsor, who thought it time that a body of so much importance as the association should receive a little better consideration at the hands of the Interior.

The first clause dealt with the labor situation, and stated that trade unionism had continued to follow an aggressive course in seeking to further its interests at the expense of the community at large.

The committee contended that the Government's immigration policy against bringing skilled labor was conceding too much to organized labor, which, it was pointed out, represented less than 10 per cent. of the workers in industrial establishments. It was recommended that the resolution urging the Dominion Government to encourage the immigration of skilled artisans should be reaffirmed.

Ships Seek Shelter.

Oswego, N. Y., Sept. 26.—A furious northwest storm on Lake Ontario for the past 24 hours has driven many steam and sailing craft to seek shelter in Oswego harbor. High winds and seas have damaged the breakwater, now being rebuilt. The velocity of the wind is estimated at 40 to 50 miles an hour.

Winnipeg Beach Fire.

Winnipeg Beach, Sept. 26.—Fire completely reduced to ashes the Waldorf Hotel at Winnipeg Beach yesterday morning between 6 and 7 o'clock. The fire caught from a pipe hole in the ceiling in the rear of the hotel, near the kitchen, and in the opposite end of the hotel from the office.

HALIFAX IRON WORKERS OUT.

Demand a Wage Increase of One Dollar a Day.

Halifax, Sept. 26.—The strike of about 200 iron workers, who were engaged in repairing the steamer Universe, on the marine railway on the Dartmouth side of the harbor, and the steamer Oscar II. in the drydock, took place yesterday morning. The men were working for the Drydock Co.

The company entered into contracts to repair these vessels, based upon the current rate of wages in Halifax. Heavy penalties were to be forfeited in case the work was not completed on the date specified.

The current rates of wages was $2.50 per day.

The local union, being unable to supply the number of men required, and the firm being unable to obtain men in any part of Canada, a score or more expert workmen were brought from England.

These men joined the local union Monday night. Yesterday morning the whole force of 200 men demanded $3.50 a day, a $1 increase. The company refused, and the men stopped work. Last night a deadlock exists, no agreement is in sight, and all work has been suspended.

PRIEST'S SOLEMN ADMONITION.

Diphtheria Epidemic In Quebec Village Caused by Negligence.

Ottawa, Sept. 26.—An epidemic of diphtheria is raging at Quyon, Quebec, near here. There have been two deaths there in a week. Three families are now down with the disease, the schools and churches are closed. The provincial health officer was asked to go there, and the village may possibly have to be quarantined.

At the Kennedy Hotel, the whole family of 12 had it.

Miss Nellie Casey, a relative who was there on a visit, contracted the disease. She came down to the Water street Hospital, but it was stated at the institution that she was immediately sent to the Isolation Hospital, where she died.

There appears to have been gross negligence somewhere, and, it is alleged, Rev. Father Kiernan, Sunday, said that whoever was responsible for handling death to his neighbor was equal to a murderer.

The disease has been in the village for five or six weeks.

CRASHED IN A TUNNEL

Express Train on French Railway Is Telescoped.

Twenty Passengers Seriously Injured —Were Traveling to Join Steamer Adriatic—Disaster Due to Negligence—No Red Lights Were Burning—Train Was Halted In Tunnel —Regulations Not Observed.

Nantes, France, Sept. 26.—The transatlantic train carrying first-class passengers from Paris to Cherbourg, where they were to embark on the White Star Line steamer Adriatic, was telescoped yesterday in the Braval tunnel. Twenty persons were injured.

The train taking passengers to Cherbourg for embarkation on North German Lloyd steamer Crown Prince Wilhelm, which was following the train having on board the Adriatic's passengers, proceeded to her destination by another route.

The disaster is said to have been due to the negligence of the crew of the train carrying the transatlantic passengers, as no lights were burning in the rear of the train, and no torpedoes were placed on the track behind it, as required by the regulations when a train halts in a tunnel. This neglect caused another train to run into the passenger train bound for Cherbourg.

The train was running in two sections. The first section was stopped by a signal, when the second section, running close behind, crashed into it.

ENGINEER LAY SENSELESS.

Narrow Escape of Passenger Train on Erie Railroad.

New York, Sept. 26.—While Henry Robertson, engineer of an Erie Railroad passenger train, lay senseless on the floor of his cab with a fractured skull yesterday, the locomotive, without a hand at the throttle, rushed full speed toward the Jersey City terminal, threatening destruction to the train and its passengers. Fireman Fleming, noticing that the speed did not slacken at places where the train should have been running slowly, climbed into the cab and found the engineer on the floor, where he had dropped after being struck by a pole when he placed his head out of the cab window.

BOND'S HANDS TIED.

Britain Forbids Enforcement of Colonial Fishery Laws.

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 26.—An Imperial rescript forbidding the service by any colonial authority of any legal process regarding fishery rights aboard any American vessel, and suspending all colonial statutes authorizing colonial officials to seize American vessels for alleged fishery offences, was proclaimed here yesterday.

This, it is believed, will make it practically impossible for Premier Bond to carry out his recently announced decision to enforce the colonial fishery laws.

ON CONSPIRACY CHARGE.

Toronto, Sept. 26.—Louis P. Bouvier was committed for trial yesterday on the charge of having conspired with certain other envelope manufacturers to prevent Maud McCann from securing employment.

Herbert Kent, superintendent of the W. J. Gage Co., said Miss McCann was incompetent and also made an insinuation concerning her which brought a warm rebuke from the magistrate.

Hamilton, Sept. 26.—Major F. M. Carpenter, ex-M. P., dropped dead yesterday while dressing at his home, Lakeview Hall, Fruitland. When he retired Tuesday night he appeared to be in his usual health, and in the morning got up between 5 and 6 o'clock. Without the slightest warning, he collapsed, and died in a few minutes. The deceased was a son of Gerhom Carpenter, a U. E. Loyalist. He was born in 1849, and was elected at the age of 29 years to the county council, where he sat for eleven years. He was elected to represent Wentworth in the House of Commons in 1882. Later he also ran for the Legislature. He was an ex-warden of the county.

The Last Stroke.

BY LAWRENCE L. LYNCH,

Author of "A Woman's Crime," "John Arthur's Ward," "The Diamond Coterie," "Against Odds," Etc.

And Brierly replied that he knew very little of his father's ancestors, beyond the fact that his grandfather Brierly was a Virginia gentleman, and his father an only son. The family, so far as he knew, had been Virginians for three generations, and what more pray could an American ask? As for his mother, she had been a Miss Louise Cotterell of Baltimore, her father a railway magnate of renown. In her desk, very much as she had left it, in a closed-up room in the old house, were bundles of old letters and ancient family papers, so his father had once told him; he had meant to examine them some time, but had not yet done so. If Ferrars desired it he would do this soon.

So far as his dead brother was concerned, Brierly was sure that there had never been a love affair of even the most ephemeral sort. In fact, Charles had always been shy of women, and used to shirk his social duties as much as possible. Hilda Grant was, without doubt, his first and only love. As to their separations, there had been several. To begin, Charlie had been in college a year after he (Robert) had been graduated, and the following year, "because the boy had seemed run down and in need of rest and change," he had spent a few months upon a ranch in Wyoming, with a college friend. Then the two had made their European tour, and since, their only long separations had been when his work, as journalist, had taken him away from the city, sometimes for weeks, until Charlie had taken this school, as a relief from his theological studies.

From Mr. Myers he could only learn that the father and mother of Robert and Charles Brierly were of good families, well known in their respective states, and both, he believed, "were as distinctly American as the war of the Revolution could make any American citizen of English descent." As to Charles Brierly, Myers "didn't believe the boy had ever looked twice at a girl, until he met with that lovely, sad-eyed sweetheart who, it was plain, was wearing out her heart in silent grief for him."

Then Ferrars went to see his supposed cousin, and asked her to review, mentally, her latest talks with her lover, and to see if she could not recall some mention of a discovery, a surprise, a perplexity possibly, which he wished to lay before his brother when he should come? But she shook her head sadly.

"Was he, to your knowledge, in the habit of collecting odd things from the newspapers?"

She shook her head. "He did not think very highly of our daily papers, and seldom if ever read beyond the news of the day. The scandals and criminal reports, he abhorred," she said.

"And he never alluded in any way to family history, you say? Think. Was there no mention of family facts or names?"

She looked up after some moments of thought. "I can only recall one thing which, after all, does not contain information, except as regards the two brothers. Charlie was speaking of the difference of their temperaments. Robert, he said, was intensely practical, living in, and enjoying most, the present, and by anticipation, the future, while he (Charlie) was a dreamer; loving the past, and idealizing its history. To illustrate, he told how, as boys, he loved to hear his mother, whom I fancy he resembled, tell the tales she had heard at her grandmother's knee, of the early days, the French convents, the Indians, the colonists, the quaint living, the speech, which had for him such charms, while Robert would only hear of the fighting and would run away from the ancestral history."

Hilda, grown accustomed to his numerous queries, and scant explanations, was not surprised at Ferrars' hurried departure at the end of the catechism, and he went back to the doctor's cottage with just one faint little possibility as a reward for all this interviewing. He had known Mr. Myers in the city, as a successful detective is apt to know an able lawyer, well by reputation and personally a little, and he was glad to find in him a friend to the Brierlys, dead and living.

Going back that night he said to himself:

"It's of no use to try to go on like this; a confidant will save me a lot of time, and Myers is the man. I can't call upon the doctor; he's got his profession, and he belongs here. Myers can make my business and Brierly's his at need. Besides, he's a lawyer and won't be knocked entirely out by my wild theorizing, and he's the one man who can get access to the ancestral documents at need."

He found the lawyer still upon the doctor's piazza, and without the least attempt at explanation invited him into his own room, where they were still closeted when, at midnight Robert Brierly went slowly toward the Fry cottage, and the doctor, who never got his full quota of sleep, went yawning off to bed.

Mr. Myers spent five days in Glenville, and then went back to the city, taking Robert Brierly with him, "for a purpose," as he said to the doctor and Ferrars. "He can come back in a day or two if he chooses," the lawyer added, "but in truth, Robert, unless you're needed here, which I doubt, you'll be better at work. Mr. 'Ferris-Grant,' here, will summon you at need."

When they were on board the train, and the lawyer had exhausted the morning paper, he drew close to his companion in that confidential attitude travelers fall into when they do not converse for the entertainment of all on board, and said:

"Robert, I want to tell you why I so insisted upon your company back to the city. I want you to rouse yourself, to open your house, and when you have first looked over your father's and mother's private and business papers I want you to turn over to me all such as are not too sacred for other eyes than your; all letters, journals — if there are such — all, in fact, that deal in any way with your family, friends and family history."

Brierly turned to look in his face. "This is some of Ferrars' planning," he said.

"It is, and it has my hearty endorsement. Don't ask questions. Frank Ferrars knows what he is about."

"No doubt of it. I only wish I did."

"You'll know at the right time. And if it will be a comfort to you, I'll admit that while I am to a certain degree in his confidence, I know no more what or whom he suspects than you do, for he won't accuse without proof of guilt, however much he suspects or believes. But I know this, Ferrars is convinced that the secret of your brother's death lies in the past."

"And in whose past?"

"In his own, in that of your family or of Hilda Grant."

At the beginning of the following week Hilda Grant resumed her duties as school mistress, the place of Charles Brierly being filled by a young student from the city.

Mrs. Jamieson, meantime, had called upon Hilda, the call had been returned, and the two were now upon quite a friendly and sympathetic footing; it was not long before the fair, black robed little figure was quite familiar to the children, to whom she gave generously sweets, pleasant words and smiles.

Sometimes she met Ferrars, who would look in now and then at the recess or noon hour to keep up his cousinly character and Hilda Grant's clear eyes saw day by day, the blue eyes of the pretty widow taking on a new look and noted that, while she was at all other times full of easy, charming chat, the approach of "Mr. Grant," would close the pretty lips and cause the white eyelids to quiver and fall.

The understanding between Hilda and the detective was now almost perfect and one day, Ferrars, having asked her if she had ever heard Mrs. Jamieson speak of leaving Glenville, or name her place of residence, Hilda replied.

"I have heard her express herself as well pleased with Glenville and I think she is in no haste to go. In truth, Mr. Ferrars, I am beginning to feel that, in seeing this lady as a means toward a selfish end, we, or I, have done wrong. That she is a woman of the world and has seen much of good society, is evident, but, she has lived of late, a lonely and much secluded life, she tells me, her late husband having been a somewhat exacting invalid, for two years before his death; and forgive me for my great frankness, I fear that because of your absorption in this trouble of mine, you have not thought, or observed, how 'much' your acquaintance is becoming to Mrs. Jamieson. One woman can read another as a man cannot, and, I must not let you serve me at the cost of another's happiness perhaps."

"Miss Grant, is this a riddle?"

"Mr. Ferrars, no. Must I say plainly, then, that you are making yourself quite too interesting to this lady?"

Ferrars turned his face away for a moment. Then he replied slowly, as if choosing his words with difficulty.

"My friend, I believe time will prove you the mistaken one. I cannot take this flattering idea of yours to myself and venture to belive it, but should it have the smallest foundation in reality, rest your conscience upon this candid declaration. The lady cannot feel more interest in my unworthy self than I in her; from the first moment almost I have taken an interest in Mrs. Jamieson, such as I have seldom felt for any woman. Shall we let the subject rest here? Be sure I shall not let my personal intercst conflict with, or supersede, the work I came here to do."

In later years Hilda remembered these words.

During the next two weeks, the wheels of progress so far as Ferrars' work was concerned moved slowly and even rested, or seemed so to do.

To be baffled in a small town, and by a small boy, was something new and surprising in the experience of Detective Ferrars, but so it was. Work as he would, finesse as he might, he could find no trace of the boy, "about half grown, with dark eyes and hair, freckles, a polite way with him and a cap pulled over his eyes," and this was the best description Mrs. Fry could give of the strange lad.

"If Mrs. Fry was not the honest woman she is," said the doctor, "I should call that boy a myth. How could he come and go so utterly unseen by all Glenville?"

Samuel Doran, who still believed that "Mr. Grant" was Mr. Grant, and thought it most natural that he should turn his attention to the mystery surrounding the murder of "his cousin's lover," thought otherwise.

"P'shaw!" he objected, "look at the raft of half grown boys racing up and down these streets from sunset to pretty late bed time, for kids, and how much different does one boy look from another, in the dark? Mrs. Fry, herself, only saw him, out in the twilight."

Ferrars reserved his criticism and opinions for the time.

Doran had taken upon himself the investigation of the "boat puzzle," as he called it, for the skiff remained, after many days, still drawn up, unmoored and unclaimed, by the lake shore, and at last by dint of much driving up and down the lake shore road and interviewing of boat owners, he brought to Ferrars this unsatisfactory solution.

Two weeks before the murder, the skiff had been owned by a certain Jerry Small, hunter and fisherman, by choice, blacksmith by profession. On a certain day, a man dressed in outing costume, had entered Small's shop, asked about the boat, and made him such a liberal offer for it that Jerry had at once closed with him. The shop stood on the outskirts of the town, and close to the lake. The man had said that he was coming out from the city in a few days for a few weeks in the country, meaning to secure board, if possible, near the lake shore. If Mr. Small did not mind, the boat might stay where it was until his return, the money was paid down and Small engaged to care for the boat.

One day, after much agitation, Small decided it must have been the day of the murder that he missed the boat; and one of his "kids" told him that "a gentleman with flannel clothes and whiskers" took away the boat "right early," and neither boat nor man had ever re-appeared.

Then Ferrars tore his hair and fumed at the long delay only to learn that Jerry Small had left his house, on the day after the murder to attend a sick brother and had returned just two days ago.

"It's of no use," fumed the detective to Doctor Barnes. "I shall put a couple of fellows I know in the Jerry Small vicinity; it's right in their line of work and probably they'll find the man and the boy together—in Timbuctoo."

"And you will remain in Glenville, eh?" queried the doctor, grinning openly.

"Yes," with an answering grin, which somehow the doctor did not quite understand. "I'll stay—for a while longer."

As they sat at lunch the next day a small boy brought Ferrars a note from the teacher.

"Come to me at once. "H. G."

That was all it said and Ferrars lost no time in obeying the summons.

"You may not see much in my news," Hilda said, as she closed the door upon intruders. "But I have got Peter's story out of him at last."

"The foolish boy? Ah, that is something after all, at least I hope it will prove so. Well?"

"It was slow work, for the boy has been terribly frightened. His story is most absurd."

"No matter, tell it in your own way."

"He says still that he saw a ghost, a live ghost. That it arose out of the bushes and waved its arms at him. It was dressed "all in white like big sheets," Peter said, and its face was black, with white eyes. It spoke to him very low and awful, and told him to lie down and put his face to the ground until it went back into its grave. If he looked or even told that he had seen a ghost, the grave would open and swallow him too. Then it held up a "shiny big knife" and he tumbled over in sheer fright. After a long time he began to crawl toward the road and when he at last looked around and saw no ghost anywhere, he ran as fast as he could. "I am afraid," Hilda added, "that you'll think as I do, that some of the school boys have played the poor child a trick, or else that he has imagined it all. It's too absurd to credit. Still, as you made a point of being told at once of whatever I might learn from Peter, I kept my promise. I'm afraid I've spoiled your luncheon." She finished with a wan little half smile.

The detective's face was very grave and he did not speak at once.

"Is it possible," she ejaculated, "that you find anything in the boy's story?"

Ferrars leaned forward and took her hand. "Miss Grant," he said gravely, "I believe that poor foolish Peter saw Charles Brierly's murderer."

He got up quickly. "Do you think the boy could be got to show you where he saw this apparition?"

"I asked him that. He thinks he might dare to go if he were protected by 'big mans.'"

"Then arrange to leave your school for a short time, at, say two o'clock I shall get Doran and his surrey. Have the boy ready—"

"Pardon me, I will say nothing to Peter. The surrey will be enough he is wild to ride."

"That will be best then. I shall lose no time. I have a strong reason for wishing to see the precise place where this ghost appeared."

The sight of the surrey filled poor, foolish Peter with delight and he rode on in high glee, sitting between Hilda and Ferrars, whom he had learned to know, and like, and trust. When they were abreast of the hill Hilda bent over him.

"Now, Peter, tell me just where you saw that ghost."

Instantly the boy's face blanched and he cowered in his seat, but Ferrars with gentle firmness interfered. Peter would show him the place, and then he would drive away the ghosts. Ghosts were afraid of grown men, he averred. And at last, hesitating much, and full of fears, Peter was finally persuaded, yielding at last to Doran's offer to let him sit in front "and drive one of the horses."

As they reached the lower end of the Indian Mound, the boy's lips began to quiver and one arm went up before his face, while he extended the other toward the thickest of brush wood before described by Ferrars. "That's where," he whimpered. "It comed up out there."

"From among the bushes?"

"Ye-us."

"Did it have any feet?"

"Oh-oh! My head and arms — ugh!"

"Turn around, Doran," said Ferrars sharply, and then in a lower tone to Hilda, "I shall go to the city to-night."

When Hilda reached her room, at the close of the school, she found this letter awaiting her, "left," Mrs. Marcy said, "by her cousin!"

"Dear Cousin—Even if you had been disengaged, I could have told you nothing except that what I have learned to-day impels me to look a little more closely to the other end of my line. For there is another end.

"Now that I shall have two men on duty in the south end of the county, and with the doctor and Doran alert in G—, not to mention yourself, I can go where I have felt that I should be for the past week or more. Will you keep me informed of the slightest detail that in any way concerns our case? And will you do me one individual favor? I trust Mrs. J— may not leave this place until I see you all again, but should she do so, will you inform me of her intention at once? You see that I am quite frank. I should deeply regret it, if she went away before I could see her again. Destroy this.

"Yours hopefully,

"Ferrars."

CHAPTER XV.

May had passed, and June roses were in late bloom. The city was horrid with the warm sun-filtered air after a summer shower, and Robert Brierly looked pale and languid as he stepped from an elevator, in one of the great department houses wherein Ferrars had his bachelor quarters, and walked slowly to his door.

Possibly it was the warmth of a very warm June, or there may have been other causes. At any rate Frank Ferrars' face wore an almost haggard look in spite of the welcoming smile with which he held out his hand to greet his friend, for friends these two had grown to be during the past weeks. Friends warm and true and strong, in spite of the fact that the mystery surrounding the death of Charlie Brierly remained as much of a mystery as on the day when foolish Peter Kramer led the detective to the scene of his ghostly encounter.

There were dark lines beneath the keen gray eyes, which, Bob Brierly had decalred, "compelled a man's trust," and the smooth, shaven cheek was almost hectic, symptoms which, in Ferrars, denoted, among other things, loss of sleep.

There was a moment of silence, after the men had exchanged greetings, and it seemed, almost, that each was covertly studying the other, and then Brierly tossed down his straw hat, and pulling a chair directly in front of that in which the detective lounged, said, abruptly:

"I shouldn't like to quarrel with you, Ferrars, but I've something on my mind, and I'm here to have it out with you."

"Oh! Then I am in it?" the detective spoke nonchalantly, carelessly almost, and as the other seemed hesitating for a word, he added: "Give us the first round, old man. I'm apprehensive."

"H—m! You look it. Ferrars, do you know that for weeks, ever since my return from Glenville, in fact, I have been under constant surveillance?"

"Constant sur—. Excuse me, it's not polite to repeat, Brierly, but what do you mean?"

"What I say. It's plain enough, somebody is watching me, following me day and night."

"Pshaw! You don't mean that, man!"

"But I do. And that is not all," he leaned forward and fixed his eyes upon those of his vis-a-visas if watching for the effect of his words. "I have been slowly discovering that I am being controlled—constrained—in many ways."

"I will. I'll make it so plain that there will be no room for misunderstanding. When I first came back from Glenville, I did not go out much, but when I did, I began to fancy that I was spied upon, followed, and, after a time, I became sure of it."

"Stop! When did you observe this first?"

"I think it was on the third night after my return. I was going down to the Lyceum Club rooms, when something caused me to glance at a fellow on the other side of the street. You know my eyes are good!"

"Unusually so."

"Well, I came out in a very short time, alone, and the same fellow was lounging so close to the entrance that I recognized him at once."

"A bungler, evidently."

"Perhaps. Well, I met two men whom I know, just outside, and they dragged me back with them. When at last I left the place, I started to walk home, and when I got upon the quieter streets I soon became conscious of someone keeping so evenly opposite me across the street, that I began to watch, and, as the fellow glided, as quickly as possible, under a street lamp, I recognized the same man."

"And you have seen him since?"

"Himself or another. A disguise is easy at night. I have been watched, at any rate, and followed, again and again."

"Ah! And could you imagine his motive?"

"No." A look that was almost of anger crossed Brierly's face. "But I have wondered if it was the same as yours, and Myers, when you have contrived to keep me from going here and there, or doing this or that, unless accompanied by one or the other of you two."

He bent forward again after this utterance. His eyes seemed to challenge an answer.

But it did not come. Ferrars only sat with that look of grave inquiry still upon his face. He knew the man before him.

"Ferrars," exclaimed Brierly, when he saw that no answer, no defense, was to be made, "Will you look me in the face and say that you, and Myers also, have not connived to keep me under your eyes? to accompany me when that was practicable, and to prevent my going when it was not? I can recall several occasions when—"

He stopped short, checked his utterance by a sudden, subtle change in the face of Ferrars, who had not stirred so much as an eyelid, but who spoke at once quietly, but with a certain tone of finality, of decision.

"Brierly, do you believe that James Myers is your friend, in the full meaning of the word?"

"I do! It is not that I doubt, or that—"

"And do you believe," went on Ferrars, putting aside his protest with a peremptory gesture; "do you believe that, while thus far I seem to have failed in unravelling the mystery in which your brother's death seems enshrouded, I have given it my most faithful study, my time, thought, effort and labor? That, in short, I have been true to your interest at all times?"

Vernon Kirkwood, of Davidson, Sask, aged two years and six months, who strayed away from home last Tuesday, was found dead six miles out on the prairie.

THE LATEST DEAN PATTERN.

6946—A BECOMING TUCKED WAIST

A charming model for a tucked waist with either full-length or three-quarter sleeves as shown in the accompanying sketch. A unique feature is the extension of the centre front box pleat to the lower edge of the belt; while the vandyke decoration of the wall fitting yoke is equally distinctive. The latter, while serving to secure the smart tucked pleats in position, at the same time gives a becoming effect of width across the chest. The waist as shown is made of white lawn, with yoke and collar of Irish crochet; but it may also be made with equal success of any thin or draping material, including bouland, chambray, batiste or mercerized gingham, while all-over lace or embroidery may be employed for the yoke. To develop the medium size 2 1-4 yards of 36 inch goods will be needed.

6946.—Six sizes, 32 to 42.

The price of this pattern is ten cents.

Leave your order and 10 cents at the REVIEW OFFICE and it will be sent you by mail.

Thirty Six Years As a Postmaster

Col. Rogers Has Been in Charge of Local Post Office Since Oct. 1st, 1871

Col. H. C. Rogers, the local postmaster, has held his present position for 36 years, having been installed as postmaster of Peterborough on Oct. 1st, 1871, and is probably the oldest postmaster in Canada to-day. When he first took charge of the Peterborough post office this fair city of ours was but a small place of about 6000 inhabitants and the postal revenue amounted to $6000 a year, as against $30,000 per annum as shown by the last annual statistics. At the beginning he was assisted by only two clerks, Ivan O'Beirne and Edward Carver, the last mentioned being the son of S. J. Carver, the postmaster who preceded Col. Rogers and whose postmastership covered a period of 33 years. Col. Rogers can remember the time when all the mails for Peterborough and eastern Victoria County, including Lindsay, were delivered in one large leather bag, being distributed by a carrier mounted on a pony.

Another Dog Passes Over

Poisoner at Work in South End of the City

The dog poisoner is keeping up his deadly work. During the past few days, several barkers of high and low degree have passed in their checks and made their exit by the now frequently travelled poison route. The latest member of the dog family to move out has been a St. Bernard pup belonging to Ab. Wilson, who lives on Albert street. The animal was found dead yesterday morning, and there is no reason to doubt but that he was poisoned. The owner feels his loss very much and would like to get his hands on the man who put the poison out.

Judging from the latest fatalities from poisoning, the perpetrator or perpetrators of this despicable business are not confining their work to any particular section of the city.

He Has Leased Larger Premises

Mr. J. J. Cooke, who has for the past two years conducted a successful grocery store at the corner of Water and McDonnel streets, has found it necessary to move into larger quarters. He has leased the premises at the corner of George and Dublin streets, formerly occupied by Mr. A. J. Werne. Mr. Cooke moved into his new premises today.

Considers He Was Lucky To Have Been Discharged

Conductor Cook Says That He Would Likely Have Met Death as Did Wansborough, His Successor.

Whitby, Sept. 25.—A tall, thin figure, wearing a brown moustache and smoking a long black pipe, has been a familiar sight about Whitby court house and grounds since the opening of the assizes. Most people take him for one of the jurors; few suspect that he, above all others, is most interested in the coming trial for criminal negligence in connection with the Myrtle wreck.

The tall man is Conductor James F Cook. In conversation with a newspaper man, he expressed some of his ideas regarding the charges against him. "Everyone is liable to mistakes," he said. "I made a mistake—I know exactly now how I did it. The question with me is this; why should a jury who know nothing of railroad matters judge me for what I did? How can they presume to decide the extent of my responsibility for my mistake when they, not being railroad men, cannot properly appreciate the conditions?

"The jury may think that by making an example of me they will prevent these accidents from happening. It's a mistake. Accidents will happen as long as trains run in opposite directions on single tracks.

"I have one thing to be thankful for. Poor Wansbrough, who was my successor, was killed three weeks ago at Manvers, in the same caboose, in the same bunk, on the same cushions that I would have been riding on had I not been dismissed. The chances are that I would probably have been killed instead of Wansbrough.

"I have given fifteen of the best years of my life in the service of the C.P.R., and during that time I made but one mistake, that at Myrtle."

Peterboro's Big Fall Fair Now Ready for Great Crowds

All the Exhibits are in Place and the Showing in Every Department is Excellent—Fine Programme of Attractions for To-morrow and Saturday—Busy Scene at the Grounds—Everybody is Going to the Fair.

Today is the opening day of the Peterborough Industrial Fair. It is a trifle windy, but that only gives the numerous flags and buntings a chance to play more gallantly in the breeze. There are more tents this year on the grounds than ever before, larger exhibits in all classes, and it is expected there will be greater crowds in attendance than there has been in any previous fall, owing to the increased excellence of the exhibition.

The poultry show will be one of the treat features of the exhibition, and 40 by 80 foot tent, with coop accommodation for 600 birds. The tent is a vast improvement over the old pens, and will be appreciated by both the exhibitors and the public. One peculiar fowl, a bittern, is being shown in the poultryt ent by Mrs. Tom Petrie, of Otonabee. This "water hen' will doubtless attract considerable attention by its persistent quacking and squealing.

MAIN BUILDING.

The main building will be more crowded than ever this year, and the showing of dairy products, cheese and butter, will be away above the average. The exhibits of vegetables, wheat and grain, generally, will also be unusually large. The ladies' fancy work and fine arts department will be well represented.

SPEEDING IN THE RING

The speeding in the ring events will be looked after by Mr. I. Watson, of Toronto, starter, and Mr. Fred Peake, Campbellford, judge.

The track is in the best of condition and the events promise to be very fast. Following are the entries up to the present time:—

2.30 class—City Queen, Peggy from Paris

Lady May, 2.08 1-4, the fastest horse in Canada, will go an exhibition mile Friday and Saturday afternoon. The entries for the speeding are by no means yet complete, and many other horses than those mentioned will start in the different classes. The dog race will be a feature of great interest to the juveniles, and an event that will afford considerable amusement for all.

LIVE STOCK.

A great many horses, sheep, pigs, etc. will be at the fair. There will be a more than ordinarily large number of sheep entered. The other live stock classes will all be filled with more than the average number of entries.

EVERYBODY BUSY.

There is no doubt whatever that Secretary Hall is the busiest man in Peterborough today. He hasn't a single moment to call his own and is besieged with entries and enquiries. He is never befuddled, however, and treats all exhibitors and enquirers with his customary politeness and cordiality. President Leary is casting a fatherly eye around the grounds, and has every reason to be proud of the systematic way all matters in connection with the affair are proceeding. Superintendent Bennett and his assistant both have their hands full in the discharge of their duties and the other directors present, are making themselves useful in their official capacities. Mrs. George Elliott, the lady superintendent is faithfully performing the arduous and exacting duties in connection with her office.

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS.

The midway is situated close to the main building and directly south and will be larger this year than ever before. Among some of the "show people," who will provide entertainment for the public are Mr. Chas Brownlee of this city, who has recently returned form Ottawa, and who will conduct a cane rack and automatic vaudeville tent, Prinmano, Queen Karletta, a scientific reader who calls himself "the professor" and Madame Deborah, an exponent of palmistry. A number of workmen are busily engaged in constructing a platform for the grand stand performance which commences tomorrow. In connection with this feature of the exhibition, it might be mentioned that Secretary Hall has received word from Collingwood, that Madame Victoria and her trained dogs were the strongest vaudeville feature ever given at the Collingwood Fair. The other grand stand performers are among the cleverests artists in vaudeville. The largest steer in the world has also "punted in" for his share of the money.

Mr. George Keith has put up a dining tent on the grounds and will be able to afford ample accommodation for the crowds.

A double walled tent, put up by the firm of J. J. Turner and Sons, with four cots inside is attracting considerable attention. The tent is a large one and would make an excellent isolation hospital. Many prominent local merchants and manufacturers have special exhibits on the grounds.

The 57th Regimental band will be in attendance tomorrow, and the day after, Sept. 27th and 28th, the two principal days of the fair.

The judges of the different exhibits are:—

Heavy Horses—Nelson Wagg, Claremont.

Light Horses—T. Crowe, Toronto.

Durham Cattle—M. F. Wager, Enterprise.

Dairy Cattle—H. J. Lefevre, Lakefield; J. Stothart, Peterborough.

NO NIGHT PERFORMANCE

President Leary communicated today with Mr. J. H. Larmonth of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., with a view of having lights installed for a night performance in front of the grand stand. No definite arrangements were made, however, and it is not thought the performance will be given, except in the afternoon.

Following is a complete program for the above mentioned days.

He also seeks to prevent the sale or transfer of the said hostelry until the case is settled.

The criminal case is that of Herbert Meehan, who is charged with having committed rape.

Untidy Rather Than Unsanitary

Inspector Ball to-day visited a Water street family about whom their neighbors had been complaining of late and who were accused of keeping their premises in an unsanitary condition. Mr. Ball informed the Review that the place in question was untidy rather than unsanitary. It appears that the residents of the flat, a man and his wife, are not inclined any to much to sobriety, but inclined any too much to sobriety, but living nearby. Mr. Ball gave them some good advice regarding their behavior but will not molest them in the future provided they conduct themselves properly.

Limb Was Broken Playing Football

Carlyle Potter Fractures Leg for Third Time in Three Years

While playing football with a number of other boys yesterday afternoon after school, Carlyle Potter, the ten year old son of Rev. J. G. Potter had the misfortune to break his left leg just below the knee. The boys were chasing the ball in the yard adjoining Mr. Potter's house. They all fell in a bunch on the pigskin, and Carlyle twisted his limb, resulting in it being fractured. The boy was carried into the house and Drs. Greer and Eastwood were called. They set the injured limb.

Two years ago, the unfortunate lad suffered a break to the same leg and in the same place a few weeks later it was again fractured. It is thought that not being as strong as the other, it broke yesterday very easily. The first accident occurred in February, 1905. He fell on the school steps.

This morning the boy was resting easily. He is doing as well as can be expected.

CALLS FOR REFORM

A Toronto paper calls for a reform in the law as to real estate transfers, which involve a costly searching of titles every time a property changes hands in order to guard against clouds on the title. The appeal is in order. There should be a change in both law and practice! There is no reason why the Torrens system should not be more generally adopted and the transfer of a piece of property made almost as simple and easy as the sale of a load of wheat or a horse.

They Can Now Go to the Fair

Seven Men "Fired" for Taking Things too Easily

Seven men employed by the Bell Telephone Company on the work of digging trenches were "fired" this morning. They were digging on Simcoe street and one of the foremen noticed that they were taking things mighty easy. He returned to where they were working several times and and found that they seemed to have all entered in a contest to see who could do the least work. The foreman at last sat down and made out their time, handed it to them and told them that they would be at liberty to attend the Peterborough fair. They did not seem to mind their dismissal very much and after they got their money they all repaired to a nearby hostelry to liquidate.

G.T.R. TO BUILD A NEW SIDING

From Ware St. to Crossing on West Side of Swing Bridge—Work to Commence at Once

The G.T.R. company will lay a new siding from Ware street to the crossing on the west side of the swing bridge spanning the river below the cemetery. Work will commence at once. The material for the structure was brought to the city to-day and the laying of it will likely be commenced to-morrow.

This will prove a great convenience and will greatly facilitate traffic, much time being saved in many ways. When this siding has been completed trains that formally were left standing on the main line while the engines came on to the station to take water will be run onto the siding. Also trains will not have to wait at the station until those coming from Belleville arrive at the depot, but word can be sent to them and they can run on to the siding to allow east bound trains to pass. It is a good step, and will be greatly appreciated by railway hands.

Provisional List is Satisfactory

Arrangements Under Way for Farmers' Institute Meetings

Secretary Collins of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute is making arrangements for the annual meetings which will commence in a few weeks. A provisional list of the places and dates for meetings in the county has been received from the Department at Toronto and as they were satisfactory to the local officials the list was marked O.K., and returned. Mr. Collins expects that this year's meetings will be very successful if good speakers are sent out.

THE CHILTREN HUNDREDS.

How Members of British Parliament Resign Their Seats.

"Mr. Edward Blake, M.P. for South Longford, has applied for the stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds."—Cable Despatch.

What are the Chiltern Hundreds?

Government is full of "make believes," especially in Great Britain. One of the "amiable traditions" of the British system is that a member of Parliament cannot resign his seat. But although he is not allowed to resign, he may nevertheless retire from Parliament at his pleasure. The thing is easy; he merely asks to be appointed steward of the Chiltern Hundreds. It is the theory of the British Constitution that when a member of Parliament accepts office under the Crown, he must obtain the consent of his constituents. Thus his seat is vacated; and he must be elected again after his appointment if he wishes to accept the new office.

A member who wishes to retire from Parliament applies for this nominal office of steward of the Chiltern Hundreds, is appointed, thereby vacates his seat, and then immediately resigns his stewardship, so that the situation is open for the next member who wishes to retire. It is interesting to note how the custom was perpetuated.

A crown steward is custodian of one of the manors, hundreds, or honors belonging to the royal demesne. The manors were Anglo-Saxon townships, and hundreds were collections of townships within a given shire. The abuses perpetrated by these stewards led to the reduction of their numbers, until finally, under Charles II., nearly all the stewardships were abolished.

One of the few crown stewardships which survived was that of the three hundreds of Chiltern, in the County of Bucks. Through this region pass the Chiltern Hills. From the earliest Norman times this property has been "in the hands of the Lord the King."

In 1750, the constitutional fiction here noted above came into practice. In that year the stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds was conferred upon John Pitt, M.P., solely that he might vacate his seat. It has been constantly in use for that purpose ever since, and the stewardships of the other Crown manors have been applied in the same way at various times.

It is a disputed question whether the stewardship can be refused to any applicant, although it was refused to one member in the last century.

DOMINION OF NEW ZEALAND.

Change of Name Cause of General Satisfaction.

"The announcement which was made at the opening of the New Zealand Parliament, that the Home Government had consented to advise the King to raise the status of the colony to that of a dominion, should the New Zealand Parliament pass a resolution to that effect, will be received with general satisfaction in the Empire," says The London Standard. "In the Act of July 9, 1900, constituting the Australian Commonwealth, provision was made for the incorporation of New Zealand. The suggestion was not regarded with favor by New Zealand, and there is now, of course, no longer any chance of its adoption. The Dominion of Canada was constituted when the Upper and Lower Provinces were united in 1867. Representative Government was granted to Nova Scotia in 1758, to New Brunswick in 1785, and in 1791 to Upper Canada, which included the country above Montreal and to the original French colony, which was reconstituted by the name of Lower Canada. Responsible Government was granted to the North American colonies in 1841, as the result of Lord Durham's mission. The precedent was followed with regard to New Zealand, which received what constitutes the basis of its present form of government under the Act of 1852."

Women In the Rush.

A rush has begun to the diamond diggings in Griqualand West, South Africa, that bids fair to rival the Kimberley excitement.

Only a short time ago no serious prospecting had been done in this neighbourhood, and not an encampment was to be seen. Now hundreds of diggers are frantically at work. Camps are everywhere and canteens and provision tents are doing a roaring trade.

Everyone is busy panning out and so far there has been practically no disorder.

Some men are accompanied by their wives or sisters, and several women have started operations independently, determined to win for themselves some of these stones, which may mean a fortune to the lucky finder, as they compare favorably with the finest Kimberley gems. Garnets and rubies are also being frequently brought to light.

The outfit used by the diamond diggers costs about $125 and is extremely simple to work.

Police Cruisers.

Police cruisers will be an interesting feature of the next naval shipbuilding program.

It is semi-officially stated that during 1908-09 a new type of cruiser will be built at Pembroke dockyard, intermediate in size between a second-class cruiser and the ships of the Duke of Edinburgh class, with a speed of 23 knots and carrying 7.5-inch guns.

The Jamaican earthquake and the St. Lucia riots have shown that there is need for such a class for detached police duties and periodical visits to remote stations.

The Good of Laughter.

Man's capacity for seeing his own existence in a humorous light, the various springs of his laughter and everything implied therein—few subjects are more philosophically suggestive than this, yet few have been so entirely ignored by speculative thought. After all may it not be that in a deep sense laughter rather than goodness is your true antidote for evil?

A little child whose name, so near as could be ascertained is Estelle McCasson, and who said she lived on Stewart street, was discovered bitterly weeping this afternoon, at the corner of George and Hunter streets. She said her father was dead, but that she had a mother and some sisters and brothers at home. The child, who appeared to be about eight years of age, said she had strayed from home and got lost. She was taken into Tully's drug store, by some gentleman who sympathized with the little one, and the police were telephoned for to take her home.

Semi-ready

It takes courage and pluck to stand alone with all the world against you.

That is what a man does when he launches a new idea or invention which interferes with ingrained customs.

The "Semi-ready" system of tailoring men's clothes revolutionized the clothing industry. Never was an innovation so bitterly opposed and so generally traduced by its opposition—by the custom tailor and the ready-made clothier.

Yet it triumphed!

"Semi-ready" has fought the good fight and has won. No man can gainsay its many improvements and advantages over the tailoring which Grandfather was satisfied with.

Lakefield Fair Recorded As One of the Best Ever

Over a Thousand People at the Lakeside Town Show Yesterday—All the Exhibits Were Highly Creditable—Speeding Contests Were Good Feature.

Successful is a word that may be truly applied when speaking of the fifty-second annual fall fair of the Smith, Ennismore and Lakefield Agricultural Society, which was held yesterday on the grounds of the Society at Lakefield. The grounds are beautifully situated on a hill, west of the village. They contain over nine acres and are admirably situated for their purpose, and the directors of the Society may well feel proud of them. There is a fine track for driving, about a third of a mile around. The main building, which was first opened a year ago, is spacious, and yesterday was well filled with farm products, fancy work, etc.

The day was an ideal one for an exhibition. Although it was quite cool, the sun shone forth brightly. The sudden change in the atmosphere had no effect in lessening the crowd. The attendance was, perhaps, the largest that ever was on the grounds, there being considerably over one thousand persons present. The people came from far and near. Everyone living within a radius of ten miles of the village of the village must have been there. A large number from the city also took in the fair, many going out on the noon train, while others drove out. All seemed to have an enjoyable time, and it was the opinion of several that this year's show far surpassed anything of former years. The directors in endeavoring to give their patrons a real good exhibition, offered splendid prizes to encourage farmers and others to make exhibits.

The number of entries yesterday was large and exceeded those of last year.

The President of the Society is Mr. Thomas Fitzgerald, Mr. R. Q. Dench, who filled the office for the past seven years, and who was an indefatigable worker in the interests of the exhibition, having resigned. Mr. W. Sherin is the secretary-treasurer, and was a very busy man yesterday. His financial returns were very gratifying to the directors.

The officers of the Society are:—

President—Thomas Fitzgerald.

Vice-President—S. J. Wallace.

Secretary-Treasurer—W. Sherin.

Honorary Directors—T. E. Bell and D. Quinn.

Directors—John Fairbairn, G. W. Mann, R. Garbutt, A. Johnson, Thompson Bradon, E. Duff, Levi Payne, T. J. Burgess and J. B. Nelson.

Among those who were on the grounds were Messrs. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P.; J. H. McClellan, Superintendent of the Trent Canal; Alderman Phelan, George E. Elliott and County Treasurer Ed. Elliott.

IN THE MAIN BUILDING.

In the main building the exhibition of vegetables and fruits was a large one, and there was a very handsome showing of ladies' work, including many samples of different kinds of fancy work and purnt woodwork. This department was the greatest drawing card for the ladies.

"MIDWAY" ATTRACTOINS.

The "Midway" consisted of three attractions, and around them were gathered large crowds of interested ones. The usual knife board that is seen at all fall fairs was there. Mr. "Vic." Fowler had a stand where one might get his or her photo taken and have it put on a button in 30 seconds.

A lady fortune teller had a tent where she revealed the past and future of all those who cared to interview her, a whole fit for 10 cents.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS

LANG & MAHER.

At the Lakefield fair "The Clothing Palace" of Messrs Lang & Maher, the bustling Peterborough clothiers, was again in evidence and proved to be one of the most interesting attractions on the grounds. Lang & Maher certainly made a most creditable display, and their exhibit of the popular, stylish and splendid wearing suits and overcoats, in Sovereign Brand Tricots and Northway garments was a decided stroke of cleverness. Mr. J. T. C. Lang and Mr. George Wesley were in charge and during the afternoon hundreds of yard sticks were given away as souvenirs. Lang & Maher showed their interest in the fair by offering special prizes for the best pair of carriage horses owned by a farmer. Messrs. Lang & Maher had about forty-five artistic signs displayed in all prominent places setting forth the superior merits of their goods. This enterprising firm do a large business with the residents of Lakefield and vicinity and their trade each year has thrown most gratifying increase. They offer high class, durable and stylish clothing that wins and retains the favor and esteem of its hundreds of delighted wearers.

GRAFTON & CO.

Grafton & Co., the widely known clothing firm, were here, there and everywhere. The display of Grafton & Co.'s famous clothing won admiration on all sides. The new fall styles in boys' and men's suits and overcoats are very catchy and appeal to all.

Grafton & Co. make no trashy garments, all bearing their trade mark "High-Grade," are fully guaranteed and if any customer has either real or imaginary cause for dissatisfaction money will be cheerfully refunded. The grounds were dovered with numerous attractive signs of the company, and the excellent exhibit was in charge of Messrs. H. L. Conway, A. W. Goodes, and Robert Howland. Scribblers and other interesting souvenirs were given away, and the firms display was constantly surrounded by a large crowd. Mr. W. E. Conway, the energetic manager of the big Peterborough store, was on the grounds in the afternoon and was warmly greeted by his many friends. Grafton & Co. manufacture all their own high-grade union-made clothing at their big factory in Dundas. They have big branch stores in seven leading places in the province. Their clothing is made to fit well, to look well, to wear well, to keep the shape, retain the color, and add dignity to the wearer. It has thousands of satisfied patrons all over this district, and all visitors to the different fall fairs in the district are cordially invited to examine its merits, and see the firm's creditable display.

AMUSEMENTS

A SPLENDID ATTRACTION.

The Summers Stock Co. appeared before another large and well-pleased gathering in the Grand Opera House last evening. The offering was "The Evil Men Do," which was enthusiastically received, the applause being frequent. The support accorded Miss Belle Stevenson and Mr. George H. Summers was capable and well balanced. The specialties were first-class and the artists were warmly received.

This evening, the attraction will be "The Brixton Burglary," and tomorrow evening "Her Lord and Master." On Saturday night the offering will be "The Price of Silence," and Saturday afternoon "Hazel Kirke" will be presented.

ENGLAND'S SWIFT JUSTICE.

U.S. Judge Impressed With Methods In British Courts.

Justice Vernon M. Davis of the New York Supreme Court, sitting on the bench recently at the side of Mr. Justice Darling in the Central Criminal Court, London, Eng., saw swift justice dealt to "Chicago May" Churchill and John Smith for the attempted murder of Edward Guerin of Devil's Island fame.

Asked his opinion of such expeditious justice, he said: "I have been profoundly impressed by everything I have seen. The trial was conducted admirably, the cross-examinations were exceedingly fine, and the lawyers showed an excellent spirit."

"Do you think such a speedy trial will ever be possible in America?"

"Not under the present circumstances. There are two principal considerations which militate against such celerity. The first of these is in connection with the selection of the jury. In this respect America is the victim of her causes celebres. Everyone in America reads the newspapers—not one but many. When a sensational case arises, like that of Nan Patterson or Thaw, the papers deal with the whole matter in the minutest detail long before the case is called. The result of this is that it is almost impossible to get together twelve intelligent men who have not studied the case and reached a judgment unfitting them for service as jurors. How different here in England! This case had all the elements of sensation, yet the jury was selected in exactly three minutes. There may have been a great crush of the public to obtain admittance, but I saw no evidence of it. I saw no sketch artists. In fact I could not distinguish whether any reporters were present. In my opinion the only way to meet the jury problem in the United States is to permit the presiding Magistrate to select the jury, with, of course, the advice of the counsel in the case."

Railway Men's Protest.

Toronto, Sept. 26.—Hon. J. J. Foy, the Attorney-General, received a representative deputation of railway men at the Parliament buildings yesterday.

Mr. J. H. Hall, in presenting their case, said that, owing to the prosecutions which had taken place in this province during the past year or so, under officers acting under the Attorney-General's Department, a feeling had grown up among railway men that the conditions surrounding their position were such that justice was not meted out to them. They did not consider, at the present time, that this was the fault of the Department, but they did think that in existing circumstances it was not possible to bring out evidence to show that where men were charged by coroners' juries with criminal negligence, as a matter of fact such "negligence" was due to conditions over which they had no control.

The recent activity of the officers of the crown in prosecuting railway men was, in point of fact, not in the interest of the safety of the public.

For Alienating Wife.

King Township, Sept. 26.—A writ has been issued in the High Court of Ontario against J. Alfred Lloyd of the Township of King by John Smith for the sum of $3,000 damages for criminal conversation with his wife, and also for damages for the alienation of the affection and loss of the society of his wife.

Mrs. James Stone, 74 years old., of London, was injured, perhaps fatally, by a street car on Saturday.

Did Bennett Actually Win?

"Longboat" Bennett, the local lad who won the five mile road race at the Lindsay Fair, says that there are rumors floating around that he did not really win the race, but that it was another runner, altogether, that breasted the tape first. These rumors, are, of course, without any foundation, and were obviously originated by some irresponsible person. There is no doubt, whatever that Bennet won—even the Lindsay Post says so, and anything good, the Post says of a Peterobrough man is bound to be true.

Says Charges Were Sustained

Mrs. Harper Points Out Some Facts Regarding D. and D. Institute Investigation

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—In last night's paper I notice an article stating that the charges made against Mr. Mathison's conduct of the school, for the Deaf, Belleville, were trivial and had been dismissed. One of the charges was that articulation was not properly taught. This charge is proven by the commissioner's recommendation.

Another charge was that the board was poor. The annual report to the Government showed that 12 6-7c. per day was all that was allowed for each child. Does not that prove the second charge? If further proof is needed, take the evidence of the employees of the institute, one of whom swore that he knew for a positive fact of them having an old bull to eat. Another employee swore that the meat was often so tough he could not cut it with a knife.

In regard to the charge that the servants or attendants are allowed to whip the children whenever they choose or see fit, two attendants swore at the investigation that such was their privilege. They had liberty to do what they were charged with doing. These are the facts. I am obliged to write this, because no reporters came to the investigation, and all the public know about it is, that the charges were made and that the commissioner considered them too trivial and dismissed them. Why is the welfare of the deaf children of Ontario, made so little account of?

I am at present paying a large sum of money for the private education of my little deaf child, because of the conditions at Belleville school. I do not choose to have a delicate child beaten by attendants, or fed on 12 6-7c. per day. Mr. Mathison, himself, told me when I asked him if the milk the children have to drink, was skim milk, that the cream for the teachers was skimmed off it.

As to oral teaching, Mr. Mathison was never in favor of oralism. Articles were constantly appearing in the Institute paper, showing the folly and unsatisfactoriness of articulation. He wrote to me that he was sorry I was so hopelessly gone on the oral fad, showing that he was not favorable to it, and that he considered it merely a fad.

Hoping that you will publish my letter, I am yours truly,

MRS. L. E. HARPER.

Home Missionary Auxiliary Met

Rev. H. J. Keith Delivered Interesting Address Yesterday

The usual monthly meeting of Knox and St. Paul's Home Missionary Auxiliary, was held yesterday afternoon at Knox church. A large number of ladies were present and an interesting meeting was held. Mrs. McPherson, the president of the society, was in the chair. After the preliminary business, in which a letter from Rev. Mr. Orak, of Cardiff, was read, relating to the mission fields in northern Ontario, the society decided to take steps to assist this work.

An address on "What Christ has done for Women," by Rev. H. J. Keith, was much enjoyed. It was an interesting talk and contained much valuable advice and information for the society.

Want Him at the Cooksville Fair

Mr. Durston's Services Held in High Esteem by Directors of Many Fall Fairs

Mr. J. K. Morley, secretary of the Cooksville Fair, has written Mr. R. Durston, Deputy Supt. of Post Offices, asking him to be one of the judges of poultry at the Cooksville fair, which will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 2nd. Owing to his pressing duties here in connection with the establishment of the postal delivery system Mr. Durston does not yet know if he will be able to accept the offer.

Mr. Durston is an enthusiastic poultry man and an advocate of the breeding of thoroughbred fowl. Last year he officiated as judge of the poultry exhibits at the fall fairs held in Brantford, Markman, Cooksville, Park Hill and St. Thomas.

Special Service To Fair Grounds

Street Railway Co. is Providing Cars Every Five Minutes

The Street Railway Company is providing a special service to the exhibition grounds and is prepared to handle large crowds in an expeditious manner. Four extra cars and four trailers have been put on the George street line. The cars will run from the exhibition to Central park, and the service will be a five-minute one. It is expected that a larger number of people will be carried to the fair this year, than in any previous year.

Splendid Concert Held in Ennismore

Under Auspices of C. M. B. A.—Lawn Social at Tara Grove

The members of the Ennismore branch of the C.M.B.A. won much credit for themselves by the able manner in which they conducted the lawn social and concert held on Tuesday, Sept. 17th, during the absence of their esteemed pastor, Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, who was attending the funeral of his sister, the late Mrs. E. O'Neill. It was their initial effort, and proved in every way a success. The very enjoyable lawn social was held in Tara Grove, and owing to the exceptionally fine weather, was attended by a large number, who came from far and near. A dancing pavilion had been erected, and good music was furnished for the dancers. A short programme of sports was run off, the winners of the various events being as follows:—

Running broad jump, boys under 16—1 H Crough, 2 F O'Connor.

Running broad jump, boys under 15—1 W O'Connell, 2 G Crough.

Running hop, step and jump, boys under 16—1 H Crough, 2 F O'Connor.

Running hop, step and jump, boys under 12—1 W O'Connor, 2 G Crough.

Throwing heavy weight—1 W Hickson, 2 B Hickson.

Boys' race, under 12—1 A O'Reilley, 2 G Crough.

The baseball match was won by the team led by H Crough, as opposed to the team led by C Flaherty. Score: 8 to 5.

The concert in the evening took place in St. Martin's I.A.S. Hall, and was attended by four hundred people. It was both musical and literary. The literary feature of the programme consisted of a lecture, entitled "A Trip to Ireland," aptly delivered by Rev. Dr. O'Brien, of the Cathedral. It was, in fact, an intellectural treat, and was closely followed by an appreciative audience. It was based upon Rev. Dr. O'Brien's travels in Europe this summer, and included an account of his visit to the Vatican. The distinguished lecturer was in his happiest vein and warmed the hearts of his listeners by his eloquence and good humor, specialty when treating upon the Emerald Isle.

The chair was ably filled by Rev. Father Brethertcn, of Hastings, and upon the platform were: The pastor, Rev. Father Fitzpatrick; Rev. Father McGuire, Downeyville; Rev. Father Collins, Lindsay; Rev. Father P. Galvin P. O'Leary, Galway; Rev. Father Galvin, Peterborough; Rev. Father M. O'Leary, Peterborough; Rev. Father Kelly, Peterborough.

The following musical programme was very creditably rendered during the evening, under charge of Miss Agnes Scollard.

PART I.

Overture by the orchestra.

Song—"What will you take for me, Papa?" Miss Loretta Kennedy.

Recitation—"The Anxious Mother," Bernice Scollard.

Double Quartette—"By Yon Bonnie Banks," Misses Scollard, and Messrs. Telford and Scollard.

Irish Jig—O'Connor Bros.

Irish Airs by the orchestra.

PART II.

Overture, by the orchestra.

Recitation—"My Letter," Miss Lizzie Scollard.

Chorus—"Sunbeams," by the children.

Quartette—"Goodnight."

God Save the King.

FORTY HOURS' DEVOTION.

The forty hours' devotion in memory of the forty hours during which the body of the Saviour remained in the grave, began in Ennismore on Wednesday and closed on Friday. During these days the church could be seen filled by those in meditation and prayer. Excellent sermons were delivered by the visiting clergy—on Wednesday, by Rev. Father McGuire and Rev. Father Collins; on Thursday, by Rev. Father O'Leary and Rev. Father Bretherton, and on Friday, the closing sermon, given by Rev. Father Kelly.

At the close of the exercises the pastor, Rev. Father Fitzpatrick thanked the visiting clergymen for their aid, in carrying out this grand devotion and expressed himself as pleased with the results of the good work, as shown by the number of communicants, seven hundred in all.

Former Peterborough Man is Retained as Steel Work Expert

Mr. W. J. Francis' Ability Recognized by Government Commission on the Quebec Bridge Enquiry.

The many friends of Mr. W. J. Francis will be glad to learn of the fact that he has been retained as steel work expert for the Government commission on the Quebec Bridge enquiry. There is no doubt that in selecting Mr. Francis for the important and responsible position the authorities have been well advised. There is no man in the Dominion whose professional work has stood the tests of rigid inspection and practical use more thoroughly than that of Mr. Francis. His work on the two hydraulic lift locks at Peterborough and Kirkfield has been pronounced the equal of anything yet designed. Both in theory and in practice he is fully up to date in his profession, conversant twith the most advanced methods of construction, both in designing and erection. These qualities will enable him to assist the commissioners in determining facts, amidst so much that is surrounded by conflicting testimony and so much that is conjecture.

In connection with the disaster of the collapsed bridge, the Scientific American, one of the leading journals of the United States, seems in what it says, to be preparing a soft place for the American bridge designer and engineer to fall upon. It foresees a condemnation of both design and method. The bridge was nearly all American designed, and wholly American made and erected. The paper, in an enquiry into the causes of failure hints at the possibility that the strains and stresses in bridges designed on the principles of the Quebec bridge, and reaching such gigantic proportions, may be so enormous as to completely shatter all theory upon which such large work is designed. When the results of the investigation are published the searching finger of the commission will be placed on the faulty spot, whether of design or erection, and if the American professional pride deserves a rude blow the blow will be administered.

How Street Delivery System Of Mail Will be Conducted

Letter Carriers are at Present Taking Census of the Residents in Each of the Seven Divisions Preparatory to Starting of Service--Names and Routes of the Appointees.

All the mail carriers have been selected at last and the free postal delivery system will be in operation here at a very early date. It has been reported that it will be commenced on Saturday next, but this report cannot be confirmed from official sources. There is no doubt, however, that the citizens of Peterborough will soon have the mails delivered at their houses and places of business. The post office department asks that those having their mails delivered be as tolerant as possible with the men until they get familiar with their duties.

They have been put through their facings of late by Mr. R. Durston, Deputy Supt. of post offices, who is a thoroughly practical man, knows the letter delivery business in all its departments. The men are at present busily engaged in taking the census on their various routes. "Taking the census" consists of finding out the names of the members of each family in the different divisions that conduct a correspondence and of arranging them in alphabetical order in a directory supplied them by the department. The carriers have some queer experiences in connection with the census taking, some people being reluctant to supply them with the information they require. They will continue this work until they have obtained all the names and addresses they need in connection with the discharge of their duties.

INSTRUCTIONS TO MEN.

A book of printed instructions is given to all the carriers and it informs them in detail what is expected of them and gives the general rules and regulations of the department relating to the free delivery system.

EQUIPMENT INSTALLED.

Seven combination desks and sorting boxes have been placed in the post office, one for each man. They are numbered from one to seven and are to be used by the men whose official numbers correspond with those on the desks.

DUTIES OF EMPLOYEES.

Mr. Chas. Kingscote, who is at present employed on the staff of the local post office, and Mr. Chas. Lasher, another clerk, will be superintendent of letter carriers and forward sorter, respectively. When the letters are taken from the boxes after they are dropped in by those transmitting them they are first "faced" or arranged with all the addresses in a position that they can be read by the sorter as he thumbs them over. The forward sorter separates those to be put in the general delivery folios and those to be sent on to other places from those that are to be delivered by the carriers. The superintendent sorts the carrier's consignment arranging it according to the seven different divisions in which they are to be delivered and the seven men who cover the divisions arrange them in the order that will enable them to deliver them as quickly as possible to the places to which they are addressed. The arrangements made at present by the local post office department in connection with the sorting of the mails previous to their distribution, are subject to any changes that the postmaster considers advisable.

GOOD SERVICE ASSURED.

The postmaster will do everything in his power to have the letters delivered to the persons the senders intended should receive them and in case of a wrong street number being written the city directory will be referred to with a view to finding the proper one. In case the right address cannot be learned the letters, or of course other mail matter, as the case may be, will be held in the general delivery for ten days. If not called for in that period they will be forwarded to the Dead Letter Office where they will be kept thirty days and if unclaimed at the expiration of that time will be opened and sent back to those by whom they are signed.

SPECIAL DELIVERY.

When the postal delivery system is running smoothly all special delivery letters will be taken to their destination as quickly as possible after their arrival at the post office. The moment a special delivery letter is received it will be handed to a carrier who will immediately take it to the place to which it is addressed. A special delivery stamp costs ten cents and two cents of the revenue obtained from its sale goes to the Government the other eight cents going to the carrier who delivers the letter.

CARRIERS SELECTED.

Wm. Stuart, Walk No. 1.
C. Stanton, Walk No. 2.
Jos. O'Brien, Walk No. 3.
R. G. Moher, Walk No. 4.
Thos. Edwards, Walk No. 5.
Leo Derocher, Walk No. 6.
Chas. Mitchell, Walk No. 7.

Directors of Big Dipper Co. Hold Important Meeting

An important meeting of the Big Dipper Mining and Milling Co. was held on Tuesday in the local offices of the company. In the absence of President Thos. Kerwin, of Eldred, Pa., Vice-President John M. Fletcher of Buffalo, occupied the chair. The others in attendance were Messrs. J. A. Jamieson, superintendent of the Big Dipper Mines at Cloyne, Frontenac County, J. S. Waldron, secretary of the company, Peterborough, John G. Herb, Buffalo, E. P. Huntingdon, Shinglehouse, Pa., and H. G. Thurn, Buffalo.

The question of purchasing a mill for the company's mines in Barry township, Frontenac County, was discussed at some length and a committee composed of Messrs. J. A. Jamieson, J. S. Waldron, and H. G. Thurn was appointed to make the arrangements in connection with the matter.

Development is rapidly advancing at the property of the company and every modern facility for carrying on this work is being employed. A double compartment shaft is being sunk and large quantities of gold and copper have been discovered at the mines under the large iron cap, vein.

At the Toronto exhibition a ton and a quarter of gold and copper ore from the Big Dipper Mines was tested by a large testing machine being exhibited on the grounds, the ore showing a value of $17.90 a ton. Samples of the ore were forwarded to Peterborough and examined at the meeting of the directors on Tuesday. They expressed themselves as being highly satisfied with the result of the test.

Lindsay Man Will Judge Poultry

Mr. D. C. Trew, Noted Bird Fancier, Coming to Peterboro' Fair

Mr. D. C. Trew has just returned from Barrie, where he was judge of poultry at the fall fair, says the Lindsay Post. Mr. Trew said the fair was a big one, and here was a larger entry in poultry than at the Lindsay Central, but that the quality of the birds were not nearly as good as the quality shown here, with the exception of the Rose Comb Leghorns, White Wyandottes, and one fine specimen of a Barbed Plymouth Rock cockerel. Mr. Trew goes to [illegible] on Friday, to act in the capacity of poultry judge.

Esquimalt may again become a naval station, since the United States has sent a fleet to the Pacific.

MARCONI TALKS WITH IRELAND.

Outlook For Wireless Telegraphy Is Bright—Secrecy Assured.

Sydney, N.S., Sept. 26.—Signor Marconi was interviewed yesterday at his wireless telegraph station, Port Morien.

"We have been working steadily the past three months putting on the finishing touches," said Marconi, "and inside of three weeks we shall be in a position to give the press a five-cent rate on messages to the other side, and the general public will be given a ten-cent rate.

"We hope to do the bulk of our business with the press people.

"The station at Clifden, Ireland, is one of the most complete and modern stations in the world. The one at Morien is also in the same class. Both the Irish and Canadian plants are fitted up with all the most modern machinery. Everything in the line of up-to-dateness is embodied in both plants. Any operator could work the wireless system with a short training.

"I am in daily communication with Clifden, and was speaking to them to-day. We are testing the machinery on that side. Before the station is opened up for commercial work we shall work continuously with Canada for two or three days."

"Can transatlantic messages be intercepted by passing steamers which are equipped with the Marconi apparatus?" was asked.

"No," replied the inventor, "unless the vessels were equipped with special apparatus the messages would be absolutely private. I hope to put up more stations on this side of the Atlantic, but that will be something to be considered later. The locations have not been decided as yet.

"The recent decision of the Radio-Telegraphic Congress will not affect our transatlantic business. The decision arrived at by that body only applies to wireless messages between ships, but not between shore and shore.

"The outlook for wireless telegraphy is most encouraging. In a week or two I hope to be able to send you a message by wireless."

SEES WAR IN NEAR FUTURE.

Japan and U. S. Will Struggle For Mastery of Pacific.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 26.—The conviction prevails here that war between Japan and the United States is inevitable in the distant future.

The Novoe Vremya yesterday published an article entitled "The New World Power," picturing the marvelous growth of American sea power during President Roosevelt's administration, warning Russian diplomacy "not to be caught unawares by coming events," and adding:

"The day when the United States fleet passes out of the Strait of Magellan and sweeps into the waters of the Pacific will open a new era for the eastern world. Official courtesies and the temporary lull in war talk do not conceal the fact that America is reaching out for the mastery of the Pacific, and already is strong enough to attain it."

PREYED ON HIM.

Couldn't Stand to See His Wife Hard-Worked.

New York, Sept. 26.—Despondent as a result of ill-health and reverses, Harry Chernock, a garment cutter, aged 30 years, yesterday made an attempt to kill his wife by stabbing her with a pair of tailor's shears, and then jumped from a fourth-storey window, receiving injuries from which he died.

For six months Chernock had been so ill that he was unable to work. To support their five-year-old son and her husband, Mrs. Chernock went to work in a sweatshop for small wages. When Chernock saw his wife growing pale and haggard from her toil, it tried on his nerves.

Kingston Tailors Still Out.

Kingston, Sept. 26.—There was a meeting yesterday afternoon between representatives of the merchant tailors and the striking employes, at which the employers consented to give the wages asked, but asserted that the shops should be henceforth open.

To the latter, however, the unionists would not consent, and the strike continues. The strike affects seven shops and about 100 tailors and tailoresses.

"Powles" Corner Man Insane.

Lindsay, Sept. 26.—A young man named John Ward was brought to Lindsay from Powles' Corner and examined by physicians, who declared him insane.

He has been remanded to the county jail, pending his removal to an asylum.

Prisoner Takes Poison.

Mitchell, Sept. 26—Gottlieb Pfeifle, who was sentenced to one year in the Central Prison on Tuesday by Magistrate Davis for pointing a shotgun at a neighbor and threatening to shoot, took poison in his cell early yesterday morning, dying about 6 o'clock.

Brings Survivors of Wreck.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 26.—The revenue cutter Thetis, Capt. A. J. Henderson, arrived here Tuesday night, bringing 263 survivors of the wrecked American ship John Currier, which went aground in a fog at Bristol Bay, Alaska, Aug. 9.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for an case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

There Will be Another One Held This Evening

There were over 20 men at the Rugby practice last night, with Manager Crowley handing out the advice. He gave the boys their instructions on signal practice and coached them on the points of the game. All the players went right after Mr. Pigskin and the workout in the lamplight was a very satisfactory one in every respect. There will be another signal practice this evening and every player is asked to be present in order to familiarise himself with the code and the different signal plays.

NEW SHRINE DEDICATED.

Memorial to Jesuit Fathers Killed by Iroquois Indians.

At Waubaushene, on Sturgeon Bay, about 1,000 "pilgrims" from various parts of Canada and the United States witnessed the dedication of a shrine to the memory of the Jesuit fathers, Lallemont and Brebeuf, who were put to death by the Iroquois Indians in 1649.

The little chapel was solemnly blessed and dedicated under the title "St. Ignatius of the Martyrs" by Archbishop O'Connor, assisted by Fathers Barcelo of Midland, Kidd of Penetang, Birrel of Peterboro, Hays of Brock, McRey of Brockton, and the Jesuit fathers in charge at Waubaushene. His Grace walked through the chapel sprinkling with holy water the seats, pictures and articles used in divine service, converting the place from an ordinary building to a house of God. After this all the priests united in chanting the litany of the saints. Solemn high mass was the next part of the service and then the sermon of the occasion by Rev. Father Moyne of Orillia.

St. Ignatius of the Martyrs is situated on what is known as Martyrs' Hill, called so on account of the belief that the summit of the hill was the exact spot on which the Indian carnage took place. It is of wood and is shaped somewhat after the fashion of a canopy in that, save for the sanctuary, it is not enclosed by walls, the roof being supported by pillars.

Standing among the vast assemblage were cripples, lame persons and halt. Many of them had come a considerable distance to seek a cure for their deformities in the intercession of two martyrs who were being honored.

Lumber May Be Short.

New Brunswick lumbermen unite in the opinion that there will be not more than sixty or seventy-five per cent. of the lumber cut on the St. John River this coming winter that there was last season, and there have been few, if any, men sent to the woods yet to prepare for the opening of operations. Wages will not be as large this year as they were last year. It is expected that $30 will be paid. The stringency in the money market is one of the reasons for the present doubtful outlook of the lumbering business. Lumbermen find that they have to pay larger interest on loans. Then a presidential year in the United States as a rule is a poor year for lumbering, and lumbermen on this side will watch with interest the result of the elections. Then, again, the cut this year has been a heavy one, and the market is felt to be glutted, and will be more so at the end of the present sawing season.

Where He Played.

"My husband," said the conceited lady, "is a Shakespearean actor."

"Indeed! Does he play in 'Hamlet'?" asked her friend.

"No," said the actor's wife; "he only plays in the larger cities." — London Tatler.

MARKED FISH IN THE SEA.

Thousands Caught, Numbered and Put Back in British Channel.

Catching fish, measuring and marking them and then returning them to the sea with the chance of retaking them later is part of the work carried on by the Marine Biological Association of Great Britain.

By means of a stream trawler the fish are caught in the usual way. Each haul is carefully recorded, the fish are counted and measured and all details of locality, time, number, species, sex and size are put down, together with accurate observations on the water, the depth and bottom of the sea, the kinds and quantity of food available, etc. These data are subsequently tabulated and charted.

The method of marking the fish is interesting, and has been attended with valuable results. The fish chiefly used during the few years the experiment has been in progress have been plaice, because the proposals which have been made to interfere with the catching of them were based on inadequate knowledge.

The fish are marked on the dorsal surface with a very thin convex metal disk bearing a number. This is attached to a fine silver wire which is passed through the thinner part of the fish and secured on the underside by a small bone button. The fish do not appear to suffer inconvenience, and their growth is not interfered with in any way.

The thoroughness with which the North Sea is swept by the nets of the fishing fleets is demonstrated, says Discovery, by the fact that out of 5,039 marked plaice of all sizes, 992 were recaptured within a year. This represents 19.7 per cent., or nearly one-fifth but for the medium sized fish the figures are far higher, ranging from 28.4 to 39 per cent. for the whole of the North Sea and to 43 per cent. in the more northern portions.

The men of the regular fishing fleet co-operate by forwarding to the laboratory of the association at Lowestoft all the marked fish they catch. At the laboratory reference to the records easily establishes how much the fish has gained in size and weight since the previous catching. Moreover, the distance between the spot where it was released and the place where it was caught establishes its movements.

WHAT BIRMINGHAM DOES.

Variety of Its Industries—Pen Nibs By Millions.

Birmingham is an amazing city by the variety and amounts of its iron and steel industries.

At present Birmingham is making nearly 300,000 gross of steel pens a week. In round numbers, this is 2,000 million steel nibs a year, or a pen and a third apiece for every living soul on the face of the globe. But for Birmingham we should, most of us, be reduced to cutting goose-quills with our second-best razors.

In this connection it is interesting to note that steel nibs are turned out wholesale at about twopence a gross, that Italy is the customer for the cheapest pens, while the best go to Russia. Two thousand hands are at work all day and every day running the machinery which pours out the essential implements of writing.

The knight of the pen owes another essential of his craft to Birmingham in the shape of metal ink stands. Hundreds of thousands of these, in value from a halfpenny up to £10 are made yearly in Birmingham workshops. Many other office or study essentials, such as safes and copying presses and reading lamps, are from the same source.

Many Buttons.

Pearl buttons are another essential specialty of Birmingham. A few years ago the town had an absolute monopoly of this industry. In those days pearl shell was so plentiful that hundreds of tons of waste shell were dumped into old wells and buried. This is now being dug up again, and found to be worth thousands of pounds.

All sorts of small necessaries of man's attire come from Birmingham. Not only his studs and links, but his brace buckles, his glove clasps, the ferule of his walking stick, and the metal eyelets of his boots are almost certainly Birmingham made. His key ring, too, his pencil case, and probably the metal ribs of his umbrella are from the same place.

Debt For Hairpins.

As for woman, she would be an even worse loser than her husband or brother were Birmingham to "shut up shop."

She would present a singularly dishevelled appearance, for 90 per cent. of English hairpins come from Birmingham, and she would never dare go out in a gale of wind, for hatpins would be at famine prices were the Birmingham supplies stopped. Safety pins, another Birmingham product, would be sadly missed by the fair sex, and though the town no longer possesses a monopoly of the ordinary pin trade, yet she makes three out of five.

My lady would also lose her muff-chain and probably her necklet, a good deal of her jewellery, and—let us whisper it—the steel supports of her corset.

The bicyclist would be lost without Birmingham. Although Birmingham does not turn out the completed article, yet it makes the tubes from which the frame is built up, and 95 out of every hundred chains are made in Birmingham.

Speaking of tubes, these are a monopoly of the Midland city. Welded or solid drawn, for cycle building or drawing beer, 98 out of every hundred tubes are made in Birmingham's workshops. These are only a few of Birmingham's specialties. We have no room to more than mention metallic cartridges, laundresses' irons, metal lecterns, stained glass windows. From life's beginning to its end Birmingham is always with us. Fifty to one, the metal fittings of your coffins will be Birmingham made.—Answers.

IMPROVEMENTS IN INDIA.

Over Nine Million Pounds to be Spent Next Year on Railways.

In the coming official year £9,041,000 is to be spent on railways in India out of capital, no less than £3,787,300 of it on new rolling stock, for which there is an urgent demand and necessity, but which ought to be provided for out of revenue and not by permanent additions to the capital account.

Nearly £3,000,000 more is to be laid out on open lines for other purposes, so that altogether capital to the extent of about £6,755,000 will be poured into Indian railways already opened for traffic, and only £2,245,000 of the allotted total will remain to be devoted to new construction.

Irrigation works are to have £833,300 spent upon them and £665,400 represents discharge of debt under various heads, which naturally means reborrowing unless we regard the anticipated surplus revenue of £775,000 as being devoted to this particular object.

Already a loan of £2,000,000 or three scores of rupees has been issued in India, and the borrowings in England by the Secretary of State and the railway companies are put at £6,697,000. In reality, therefore, about £9,000,000 will be raised in England to keep India steady on the path of progress by usury, since it is from Great Britain and not from India itself that even the rupee loans are chiefly provided.

The net deposits of the savings banks are expected to increase by £685,000 during the year, and the whole of that likewise will be absorbed in the projected capital expenditure, as well as £113,000 provided by "deposits, remittances, &c."

A Hopping Match.

A match, twenty hops for 10 guineas, took place at Loughborough, Leicestershire, between James Shipley, of Nottingham, and a person named Moore, of Leicester. It was very closely contested, so much so that bets of 4 to 1, were laid and taken on each side. The match, however, was won by Shipley.

On measuring the distance it appeared that Shipley had hopped 75 yards nine or ten inches and Moore something more than 75 yards. The latter was to have run against Shipley on the same day, 140 yards for 40 guineas, but declined, and in consequence forfeited his deposit.—From the Sporting Magazine of 1807.

Mail Charges.

Fifty years ago the transportation of a letter cost about twenty times as much as it does now.

Impaling in Turkey.

Impaling was used as a punishment in Turkey up to 1855. The last men so executed were four Arab sheiks who had rebelled. They were impaled at the four corners of the Bagdad bridge. One of them lived for nine days.

The Human Eye.

The human eye, it is asserted, can distinguish 100,000 different colors or hues and can appreciate and differentiate twenty shades of each hue. In other words, the eye is capable of 2,000,000 color impressions.

Peach Fed Pork.

Peaches are so plentiful in Buenos Ayres that peach fed pork is an actuality there.

Turbine Steamers.

The first turbine passenger steamer, 1901, was the Edward VII., built by Denny & Bros., England. The steam turbine is steadily growing in favor. The turbine engine creates less vibration than the older one and gives greater speed.

6965.—THE NEW KIMONO COAT.

The up-to-date wardrobe is not complete unless it includes a long coat which may be used for travelling or driving or for general wear in cool or rainy weather, and the most practical of such coats are those which are semi-fitting and roomy. The kimono coat illustrated possesses all the essential qualities of a serviceable comfort-yielding garment, while its graceful shaping is most admirable, being so arranged that the coat fits easily across the bust and shoulders, widening thence to the hem, where it hangs in full loose folds. The long, sloping shoulder, with the wide sleeve, seamed in a continuation of the shoulder seam and set into the wide armhole without fullness, is a unique and conspicuous feature, this being the "latest cry" in Parisian coat models. As shown, the coat is made of biscuit-colored broadcloth, with applied trimmings of black satin, and is most appropriate for afternoon or evening wear; but it may be developed in homespun, Jchevict or tweed for ordinary wear, or in waterproof silk or lined cravenette if needed for a raincoat. To make the medium size will require 8 1-4 yards of cloth 54 inches wide.

6965.—Sizes 32, 36 and 40 inches.

Daintiness and simplicity are the two attributes realized in this attractive accessory of the young girl's wardrobe, here made of batiste decorated with shadow embroidery, and finished with trimmings of beading and lace. The making of the garment is so simple that the least expert of home sewers can easily accomplish it. The shield sleeves may be omitted if desired, though most mothers like to have their young daughters wear them. For the 15 year size 1 5-8 yards of 27 inch material will be needed for making.

4244.—5 sizes, 13 to 17 years.

Trainer Says That Art. Burn Will Defeat Tom Longboat

The Calgary Albertan says.—Art Burn, Calgary's famous distance runner, formerly of Peterborough, received a wire yesterday from the management of the Dominion Exhibition, which will be held at New Westminister on the 1st October, inviting him to take part in the 10 mile race in which Longboat and Chandler will also run. Burn defeated Chandler in the Marathon race at Seattle last year, but they say the coast boy has greatly improved and is faster than he was at that time.

As for Thomas Longboat, Redskin record beater, he requires no dope, and if either Burn or Chandler can win out from him, their reputation is made for good and all.

Burn and his trainer, Jimmy McEwan, who will accompany him to the coast, dropped into the Albertan last night. Burn was very modest as to his chances in the event, but Jimmy McEwan when asked if his man had a show, remarked: "Show, did you say! Why, of course he will win. It's Burn all the way, and there will be a disappointed Indian going back to Toronto after the race. Why, I never brought out a loser yet, and it is too late in the day to start now. Of course Art will win; he has never been tried hard yet, and I can make him go." Burn and McEwan will leave for the coast in a week's time.

The Dominion Department of Agriculture has issued a pamphlet calling the attention of farmers to the need of carefully testing the yields of their dairy herds.

Maintain the Jap Treaty; The Manufacturer's Stand

Manufacturers' Views on the Asiatic Problem.

Would Be Unpatriotic to Imperil the Empire—Canada's Interest Should Be Subordinated—Support Imperial Policy—Mother Country to Be Considered—Excessive Cost of Power—Laurier's Assurance.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—One of the most important and significant discussions of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association centred around a resolution made at yesterday morning's session expressive of the attitude of the association on the Japanese question.

The preamble set forth that it is the desire of all intelligent Canadians that this country should build up a trans-Pacific trade with Asia; that the Anglo-Japanese treaty has already done a great deal toward the development of trade with Japan and that its abrogation would be disastrous as existing relations would then have to be abandoned. In view of these considerations the association resolved to "recommend that the Dominion Government, while giving due consideration to all interests in Canada, should take no hurried action towards the abrogation of the treaty which stands to-day as a basis of the friendly alliance between Great Britain and Japan."

The resolution was carried by a very large majority.

In the discussion P. W. Ellis suggested that the resolution was an unwise one, and other members were of opinion that it was not politic to discuss the subject at this juncture. W. K. George, however, saw no advantage in dodging the issue, and he thought it perfectly right, and proper for the association to suggest to the Government that it should certainly go slow and fully consider ultimate results before it acceded to any demands to abrogate the treaty between Great Britain and Japan.

"If the Mother Country has seen fit to conclude a treaty with Japan, it ill-becomes any section of the Empire to do anything to disturb the arrangement. Canadians should be prepared to subordinate their particular interests to those of the Empire at large," said W. Robins of Walkerville. "It ill-becomes a section of the Anglo-Saxon race to refuse admission to any well-behaved man simply because he has a different colored skin. I do not think that a small trade interest should keep us from supporting an important Imperial arrangement."

Two papers were read. One by Jas. A. Emery, the United States economist, dealt with industrial education, and was a plea for the training of the child along the lines of the greatest utility to himself and to the state.

"Is not the Government's present policy making you dependent on immigration for skilled artisan?" he asked.

"The Cost of Power" was the subject of a paper by L. G. Read, C. E., of Montreal. He pointed out to the association that this was a matter that was relatively being neglected, and this, despite the fact that out of every dollar expended on power, at least ninety cents was lost. He advised the purchase of power through a meter, as was done in the case of water or gas. He severely criticized the action of companies in charging for power not actually utilized.

New Officers.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Hon. J. D. Rolland, Montreal; vice-president, John Hendry, Vancouver; Ontario vice-president, R. Hobson, Hamilton; Quebec vice-president, D. L. McGibbon, Montreal; Nova Scotia vice-president, T. M. Cutler, Halifax; New Brunswick vice-president, Charles McDonald, St. John; P. E. I. vice-president, F. E. Hassard, Charlottetown; Alberta and Saskatchewan vice-president, A. E. Cross, Calgary; treasury, George Booth; secretary, G. M. Murray.

When Sir Wilfrid Laurier arrived at the station yesterday morning he was met by Hon. J. D. Rolland, and Messrs. Cockshutt and Ballantyne. In the afternoon the Premier attended the manufacturers' garden party, held on the lawn at Government House. Sir Mortimer Clarke and Lady Clarke received the guests.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, amid cheers and shouts of applause, assured the C. M. A. at their annual banquet at the King Edward last night, that he was not to be stampeded into denouncing the treaty with Japan. The treaty was not yet two years old; it had proved largely beneficial to the farmers and manufacturers of Canada. He would do nothing in a panic, he would investigate and perhaps appoint a commission.

IS THIS THE SECRET?

Deputy Minister of Labor and the Hostility to Orientals.

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 27.—W. M. King, Deputy Minister of Labor, after studying the Oriental labor question here, makes the surprising announcement that Orientals are not employed because they are cheap, but he declares they have superseded the whites in sawmills and like work because of their sobriety and efficiency. He found some Chinese employed in sawmills at wages of $4 a day.

Cows Maliciously Killed.

Brockville, Sept. 27.—A dastardly act was committed on the farm of G. H. Hazelton of St. Lawrence County, near Sylvia Lake. Four cows were found in the pasture badly cut and bruised and one dead, with a gash several inches long on its back. The wounds seemed to have been inflicted with an axe.

Heads as Trophies.

Melilla, Morocco, Sept. 27.—Moorish rebels, numbering about 3,000 men, have defeated a force of Imperial troops in a battle which lasted a day and a half.

The rebels cut off the heads of twenty-eight of the Sultan's soldiers as trophies.

Rural 'Phones In Leeds.

Brockville, Sept. 27.—The independent telephone system is meeting with popular favor with the farmers of Leeds County. At present a line is being erected between Smith's Falls and the Village of Toledo, and upwards of twenty wide-awake farmers have 'phones installed in their residences. In the western section of the county 195 farmers are connected with the rural telephone exchange.

Farmer Hanged Himself.

Montreal, Sept. 27.—Joseph Monette, a farmer of St. Constant, committed suicide yesterday by hanging himself on his bedroom door.

Monette had shown signs of mental trouble for some time past. After dinner yesterday he sent his three children out for a walk, and on their return, about 3 o'clock, they found him hanging dead from the top of the door.

Ferry Capsized; 14 Drown.

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 27.—A ferryboat crossing the Tombigbee River at the McGree, was shoaled near Jackson, Ala., late yesterday and capsized, drowning one white boy and 13 negroes.

The scene of the accidents has long been regarded as a very dangerous place by navigators of the river, on account of the rapid and treacherous current and the rocky shoals there.

Attempt to Wreck Train.

Burlington, Sept. 27.—An attempt was made to wreck a G. T. R. train just east of the station by placing several fish plants in the frog of one of the switches. Fortunately, a freight train was the first to pass over the place, and the weight of the Mogul engines crushed the plates into the sand.

No Allurement For Root.

Richmond, Ind., Sept. 27.—United States Secretary of State Root, while in Richmond yesterday, stated emphatically that he has no Presidential aspirations, and that the Presidency has no allurements.

Former Montreal Man Acknowledges Levin Murder.

Writes to Monte Carlo Judge Telling of Crime—He and His Wife Attacked the Victim—Intended to Rob Her Only — But When Woman Screamed They Killed Her to Save Themselves.

Monte Carlo, Sept. 27.—Vere St. Leger Gold, who lived for some time in Montreal, has written to the local judge, confessing that he and his wife, Violet, murdered Emma Levin, whose dismembered body was found in their baggage Aug. 6 at Marseilles. They robbed the woman after knocking her unconscious, and when she screamed they killed her.

WORKMAN'S ADVENTURE.

Swept Through Flooded Sewer and Came Out Alive.

New York, Sept. 27.—John Hoffman, 55 years old, an employe in the bureau of sewers, was dropped into a five-foot sewer in Third avenue near 128th street, owing to the breaking of a rope, and shot through the sewer to its terminus at Harlem River and 131st street. That he came out alive is considered remarkable.

With several other employes, Hoffman was at work repairing the main sewer. They had almost finished their labors when a heavy rainstorm started. Hoffman was down in the hole about four feet above the swiftly flowing water. Around his waist was a rope, which was held by the men in the street above. As the water poured into the various sewers leading into the main pipe the water rose higher and the rope broke and Hoffman fell into the water.

His fellow workmen instantly dashed up the avenue to 131st street, where the sewer runs into the Harlem River. He landed near a boathouse, swam to it, and held on until a policeman and workmen rescued him. After being given dry clothes he went home. He told the policeman that he went through the sewer so fast he "didn't have time to look at the scenery."

"TECHNICAL QUIBBLE."

Said Chief Justice Moss of an Argument by Mine Company.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—The La Rose Mining Co. lost their appeal to the Court of Appeal against the judgment in favor of the T. & N. O. Railway Commission, and the Right of Way Mining Co., with regard to the possession of some three acres of land which had been deducted from their claim for railway purposes. In giving judgment, Chief Justice Moss said that the argument that the words "right of way" meant only an easement for the railway was a technical quibble and untenable, and that the plaintiffs knew all along the railway was going to take the land.

Mr. Justice Meredith said: "The appellants have failed to prove that they ever bought or paid for or were entitled to the lands in question.

NOT AN INCENDIARY.

Thomas Tutt Acquitted; Nothing Proved Against Him.

Brampton, Sept. 27.—A serious charge was investigated here yesterday. Thomas Tutt, a young shoemaker, living in Bolton, appeared before Judge McGibbon on a charge of arson.

Tutt's house, which he rented in that village, was burned to the ground one night in July, 1905, together with the whole of his furniture, which he had insured some weeks previously. The claim was not paid by the company, which ordered an investigation, and the young man was arrested.

After hearing a number of witnesses he was acquitted, nothing having been proven against him and the very best evidence as to his character being forthcoming.

Welcome New Dominion.

Wellington, New Zealand, Sept. 27.—(C. A. P.)—Dominion Day was celebrated with great rejoicing. Australia, Natal and Transvaal sent congratulations.

The Standard takes opportunity to read New Zealand a homily on the emigration question, urging her to follow the example of the great Dominion of the west.

Attacked by Madman.

New York, Sept. 27.—During the voyage of the White Star steamer Majestic to this port, Dr. Riverdale French, the ship's physician, narrowly escaped death at the hands of a madman, a stoker, who locked himself and the physician in the surgery, and who had to be shot down.

Crushed In Threshee.

Labroquerie, Man., Sept. 27.—Camille Bailey, while moving a threshing outfit, attempted to oil a part of the engine and his knee was caught in the driving gear, crushing it to pieces.

The engine had to be reversed to remove the limb. Bailey succumbed about four hours afterwards.

WOMENS' NEGLECT

SUFFERING THE SURE PENALTY

Health Thus Lost Is Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many women do you know who are perfectly well and strong? We hear every day the same story over and over again. "I do not feel well; I am so tired all the time!"

More than likely you speak the same words yourself, and no doubt you feel far from well. The cause may be easily traced to some derangement of the female organs which manifests itself in depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere or do anything, backache, bearing-down pains, flatulency, nervousness, sleeplessness or other female weakness.

These symptoms are but warnings that there is danger ahead, and unless heeded a life of suffering or a serious operation is the inevitable result.

The never-failing remedy for all these symptoms is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Miss Clara Beaublen, of Beauport, Quebec, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"For several years I have suffered with a female weakness which proved a serious drain on my vitality, sapping my strength and causing severe headaches, bearing-down pains and a general worn-out feeling, until I really had no desire to live. I tried many medicines, but did not get permanent relief until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In two months I was much better and stronger, and in four months I was well; no more disagreeable discharge, no more pain. So I have every reason to praise the Vegetable Compound, and I consider it without equal for the ills of women."

For twenty-five years Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, has under her direction and since her decease, been advising sick women free of charge. Her advice is free and always helpful. Address, Lynn, Mass.

HAD CONFIDENCE IN BUILDER.

Royal Commission on Quebec Disaster at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—Before the Royal Commission, yesterday, investigating the Quebec bridge disaster, Collingwood Schreiber, consulting engineer for the Government, was closely questioned. He told of the plans for the bridge being approved and dealt with the steps in connection with the development of the project and the submission of new plans and specifications drawn by Mr. Cooper, the celebrated bridge engineer of New York.

This was in 1900. These specifications were approved by order in council and by himself after they had been referred to and reported on by Mr. R. C. Douglas, the Departmental bridge engineer.

At this point Mr. Schreiber explained that owing to the reputation of Mr. Cooper as a constructor of bridges, the Department relied upon his judgment largely as to the general plans, but all details were sent to Mr. Douglas to be reported on.

In response to a question by Prof. Kerry, Collingwood Schreiber explained that in 1903 he had asked to be authorized to employ a competent bridge engineer to watch the work for Government. He corresponded with Mr. Nichols, a well-known bridge engineer of New York, and also wrote to Mr. Cooper about the matter. Mr. Cooper did not favor the idea. He took the ground that if this were done it would take the responsibility off his shoulders. As a result and in view of Mr. Cooper's great reputation and the fact that the interests of the Dominion Government and the Phoenix Bridge Co. were identical, it was finally decided that it would be better to rely on him. The net result was that in the making of the general designs Mr. Cooper was given a rather free hand.

BRITAIN GETS REBUFF.

Proposal For Abolition of Contraband Turned Down.

The Hague, Sept. 27.—Great Britain received a serious rebuff at a private gathering of the delegates to the Peace Conference held here to discuss the abolition of contraband.

Three months ago Great Britain presented a proposition regarding the abolition of contraband, in which 25 countries expressed their adherence. Sir Edward Fry invited the delegates of these 25 countries to meet with the view of agreeing on a convention abolishing contraband, adding that the United States had abandoned the principle of conditional contraband.

M. Merey Von Kapos-Mare (Austria), objected to the proposed convention, saying that the instructions given the delegates referred only to questions to be adopted by the conference unanimously.

Hayti alone stood by Great Britain for reasons of chivalry.

TOO COSTLY.

Plans For Altering Rideau Hall Seem Nipped In the Bud.

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—It is probable that new tenders for the proposed addition to Rideau Hall will be called for as soon as Hon. Wm. Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, has had an opportunity to take the matter up.

Only one tender for the work has been received so far, and that is in the neighborhood of $300,000.

It was never intended by the Government to make any such magnificent expenditure on the old building now used as the home of vice-royalty, as the present house might better be destroyed, and an entirely new one built.

Parliament appropriated $100,000 last session for the enlargement of the hall, and a total expenditure of $150,000 was contemplated.

The Quebec Bridge Commissioners will meet at Ottawa today.

BOATS CRASHED IN FOG

Passenger on Mongolian Tells of Collision With Hurons.

Huge Hulls Loomed Up—Then Crash and Grind of Steel — Thought It Was an Iceberg—No Lives Were Lost—Disaster Occurred In Belle Isle Straits—Fog Horns Were Kept Blowing.

Quebec, Sept. 27.—With a slight list to port, and with her starboard bow torn open from the topmast rail to below the water line, the once majestic Mongolian slowly rounded the Island of Orleans about 10 o'clock yesterday morning, and an hour later she had moored at the Allan wharf in the port of Quebec.

From what has been learned it is quite apparent that a dense fog enveloped both vessels, and passengers from the Thomson liner Hurona and the Allan liner Mongolian state that the fog horns of the two steamers were kept in almost constant operation, but as the sea was lashed to a heavy swell by a strong gale it is likely that the sound was deadened, and thus failed to carry its message of warning.

Passengers who were on the deck of the Mongolian at that hour state that the first intimation the officers had of the approaching Hurona was when they saw a light on the port side, which could not have been a hundred yards distant. The next they knew the two vessels met with a terrific crash. The Mongolian was struck by the Thomson liner's bow, some 20 feet from her cutwater, and an immense rent was torn from the deck down, a length of 25 feet, allowing an immediate rush of volumes of water into her fore hold, and it was only the bulkheads that kept the vessel afloat.

The Hurona had her stem badly broken and a hole forced in her bow, which, fortunately, however, was above the water line, therefore her injury was not of any grave character.

The accident was characterized by all the sensational features following a collision at sea. There was the heavy jolt, the grind of crushing steel, the frantic rush for the decks, the lowering of the boats, and rescue of the passengers, and then the perilous journey for a mile or two in a frail craft across a shimmering sea to the other vessel.

In the first boat lowered were three women, one of them with a baby tied securely to her bosom. Two men were let down the ladders and in a few minutes the crew which manned the boat were pulling heroically through the darkness toward the Hurona.

The second boat, with its quota of human freight, left about a quarter of an hour after, followed by a third and a fourth boat.

CANNOT BLAME BOND.

London Globe Defends Newfoundland Premier.

London, Sept. 27.—Concluding an editorial on the Newfoundland fishery question, The Manchester Guardian says: By compelling the Imperial Government to exercise its full powers, and now by appealing in the name of constitutional liberty to the other self-governing colonies, Newfoundland is rendering the working of an Imperial constitution easier.

The London Globe says it is possible that if the fisheries question is allowed to drift much longer, Bond may be betrayed into some action which is strictly indefensible, and which he himself in less agitated times would not defend, but the fault will lie with the Government which first neglected and then denied him, and not with the Newfoundland Premier himself.

Mustn't Carry Explosives.

Cobalt, Sept. 27.—Orders have been issued by the T. & N. O. Railway to stop the loading and unloading of dynamite here, as a special spur is being built for the purpose of side-tracking all explosives to a place of storage being prepared.

The railway will also refuse to carry high explosive in small quantities, though these may be carried in car lots.

The question of the carriage of dangerous explosives by railways is now being considered by a special committee composed of representatives of all the railways on the continent.

British Companies Scared.

Kingston, Jamaica, Sept. 27.—Resolutions were passed yesterday afternoon by the local Chamber of Commerce condemning the action of the English insurance companies.

In their defence set up in the actions arising from the Kingston disaster the companies plead they are not liable under the non-indorsation clause regarding co-insurance.

The resolutions will be sent to the Chambers of Commerce of the United States and the British Empire.

Village Swept Away.

Madrid, Sept. 27.—Unprecedented rains in Andluzia caused immense destruction of life and property. The Guadalmedina River has been converted into a raging torrent three miles wide, and bridges, houses and even entire villages have been swept away. Thirty persons were drowned at Malaga, 23 at Velez de Benamargosa, 13 at Colemar, and about 100 in other places in the valley.

Will Lose His Sight.

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—William Lewis of Winchester will lose the sight of both eyes. He was helping to move a threshing engine. He turned open one of the valves and the steam and water rushed out, striking him in the eyes. Lewis is a one-armed man.

Lusitania's Voyage.

Queenstown, Sept. 27.—The Cunard Line steamer Lusitania, from New York, Sept. 21, communicated by wireless telegraphy with Brow Head, 70 miles from here, at 3.55 p. m. yesterday, when approximately 215 miles from Brow Head.

Joseph Wynn, in jail at Portage la Prairie on a charge of murder, escaped yesterday, but was recaptured within an hour.

The Last Stroke.

BY LAWRENCE L. LYNCH,

Author of "A Woman's Crime," "John Arthur's Ward," "The Diamond Coterie," "Against Odds," Etc.

"I know it. You have been all that and more. You must hear me, Ferrars. And I beg that you will answer me. Why am I watched, thwarted, cajoled? Why do you and Myers fear to let me out of your sight? A few weeks ago you found, or seemed to find, your chief interest in Glenville; you looked for clues, for developments, there; and yet, you have not visited Glenville since you left it so suddenly. Even your own personal interest has not drawn you there for a single day."

"By my 'personal interest' you mean what, Brierly?"

"You know what I mean. Pardon me, and do not misunderstand me. I could not fail to see that you were interested in Mrs. Jamieson, and why not?" While Brierly spoke, the detective arose and began to pace the floor with lowered eyelids and slow tread. Brierly watched him, was silent a moment, then he seemed to pull himself together and to speak with enforced calmness. "Ferrars, for you know what thought has taken possession of my brain until I cannot shake it off?"

"Assuredly not," going on with his promenade. "But I shall be glad to hear."

"I have begun to fear—yes, to fear—that you have found some reason for suspecting me, and that your terrible acute logic has even caused others to doubt, too."

"Man!" Ferrars swung about and suddenly faced him. "Much meditation has surely made you mad. Now, in heaven's name, so far as may be, let us understand each other. First, you are utterly wrong."

"Ah!"

"Next, you speak of Mrs. Jamieson, and of my 'personal interest.' I admit, willingly, that I am interested in that lady. But my personal feelings and interests must be subservient for a time to your business."

"Pardon me."

"And now, I did leave Glenville to follow you, and see that you did not spoil my plans by any rashness."

"You are talking a puzzle!"

"Let me talk it out then, for you have forced my hand. But for this I should have gone on as before. And I did not dream that Mr. Myers and others were playing our game so stupidly, so openly; nor that you, owing to your present preoccupation, would prove so astute."

"You have not bungled, be sure of that. You have been most wonderfully keen and clever, but it was his very preoccupation, as you call it, my abnormal sensitiveness, in fact, which made me study your every word and set me searching for its hidden meaning; and so I could not fail to see that you were handling me, hedging me about, for some purpose."

"Ah! You have said the word, Brierly." Ferrars resumed his seat opposite the other, and his tone became once more composed. "We were trying to 'hedge you about,' to put up a wall between you and the assassin who killed your brother. Wait! Let me say it all. It is little enough. Do you remember telling me of an 'assault' upon your brother, made by Petrunda, not long before he came to Glenville?"

"Yes."

"It was that which gave me my first real clue. It confirmed one of the 'five' theories that seem to fit, or cover the case so far as known; but it wanted confirmation. I found nothing in Glenville that was in any way opposed to this theory, which I was growing to believe in, but, on the other hand, I found nothing there to strengthen it. When you left that place, I meant to follow soon. Meantime I had confided my theory to Mr. Myers, who promised not to lose sight of you before I should arrive."

"But why? Why?"

"Because I then believed as I do now, that that attack upon your brother last summer was the first act in the tragedy which robbed you of him. I believed the plot to be far-reaching. It may be a case of vengeance, a family feud. The motive is yet to be discovered, but I will admit to you that I have had, from the first, a reason to think that the affair has not yet ended; and so, as soon as I could, I followed you to town. It was well that I did so. Before I had been your shadow forty-eight hours, I had proof that you were being otherwise watched and followed."

"Great heavens! And that is why—" He stopped short and bowed his head.

"That is why Myers and I have been such officious friends, why we have advised, remarked, and why I have tried to trace to his lair this man who has been your very frequent shadow."

"And you think he is—"

"The assassin himself or his tool."

"Good heavens! And you cannot guess his motive?"

"We might guess, of course, half a dozen motives. What I have hoped to find was something, some fact in your family history, your father's life, or your mother's, perhaps, that would fit into one of these guesses or theories, and make of it a probability."

And then the two went all over the array of possible reasons and motives, and Brierly again protested his lack of knowledge which might serve as the feeblest of guides to the truth.

"There's one other thing," said Brierly, at last. "I want to know if the new man, whom Myers took on soon after you came to town, is one of your sleuths? He has annoyed me more than once by his persistent attentions."

Ferrars smiled. "I never supposed you a reader of the penny dreadful, Brierly," he said, "and 'sleuth' is a word which makes the actual detective smile, and which is not known to the professional vocabulary. Hicks is my man; yes. And he has followed you, by day and night, when you have not had the company of either Myers or myself."

"Ferrars," he said, "I owe you and my absent friend an abject apology for my unworthy suspicions, my impatience under restraint. And now, I beg of you, let this end. I am warned, and I do not think myself a rash man. I believe I can protect myself, and how can I endure the thought that I must be hedged about by this constant guardianship, which may last indefinitely? Withdraw Hicks, and give your own valuable time to better things. Rather than go about knowing myself so fenced in and guarded, I will lock myself up in the attic and remain a recluse and invisible. Heavens, man! am I so stupid or cowardly a man not to be able to cope with an enemy whom I know to be in ambush at my very heels?"

CHAPTER XVI.

Much as Ferrars regretted Brierly's discovery, he was not much surprised by it, nor could he avoid, or refuse an explanation. Robert Brierly was not a child. He was a strong man, and a brave one; and Ferrars, putting himself in the other's place, felt at once the force of his words, the right of his position; and, after a day or two, withdrew Hicks from his post. At the same time he observed with surprise and some misgiving that the shadow was no longer on duty. With two trusty and able men, by turns, always on watch, within sight of the Myers place no glimpse of him had been seen for more than a week.

It was Sunday evening, and in the aristocratic uptown street where the Myers lived there reigned a Sabbath quiet, for the habitues of the little park beyond had left it with the fading twilight, and had already passed on their way homeward.

Robert Brierly had been indoors since morning, and now, shortly after Mr. and Mrs. Myers had walked down the tree-shaded street, toward the church on the avenue three blocks away, he came out upon the broad front portico and stood for a moment looking idly up and down.

There had been concessions on both sides, since that interview between Brierly and Ferrars in which the former had demanded an explanation; and the withdrawal of Hicks had been but one of the results; another had been a promise, given by Brierly, whereby he pledged himself not to walk the city streets alone after dark, but if unaccompanied to take a cab, there being a stand only two blocks away, in the direction of the park.

These cabs, when wanted, were to be called by one of the servants, and to take him from the door; but on this Sunday night, as Brierly looked up and down with a growing wish to drive about the town and have a talk with Ferrars, he remembered that on Sunday the servants were allowed to go out; all save one who must remain in charge, and decided that it would be absurd to stand there "like a prisoner bound by invisible chains" and wait for a chance to bring either carriage or policeman. He had received on the previous evening letters from Glenville, from Hilda and Doctor Barnes, and his curiosity had been aroused by the contents of both. He had not seen the detective for four days, and he fancied that he, too, would have had news from the little lakeside town; more explicit and satisfactory news, doubtless, than that contained in his own letters.

"How absurd!" He muttered, apropos of his own thoughts. "No doubt I'll meet a hack before I reach the corner," and he lighted a cigar and went down the steps, glancing, from sheer force of habit, for the street at that moment seemed quite empty, up and down, as he went toward the cab stand.

"I was sure of it," he said again, as he neared the corner, at the end of the block farthest from his home. "There they are, both of them."

He was looking ahead, where a cab was coming at a slow trot toward him, while around the corner, still nearer, a policeman had just appeared.

As the two men approached each other the officer, who had been looking toward the approaching cab, turned his face toward Brierly, just as he was passing under the glare of a street lamp, and stopped short.

"Excuse me, sir; this is Mr. Brierly, I believe?"

Brierly nodded.

"Mr. Brierly, may I have a few words with you? I have been lately put upon this beat, sir; changed from the next lower one; and there is something you ought, for your own safety, to know. Will you walk a few steps with me? I hardly like to stop; I ought to be at the next corner right now, in fact."

Brierly looked toward the approaching cab. "The truth is," he said, "I want very much to get that cab down town; otherwise—"

"Oh, I'll fix that, sir." And the officer took a step out from the curbstone and, standing under the glare of the light just above, held up his hand, and whistled shrilly. "Follow us a few steps, Johnny," he said to the driver. "You are wanted for down town." Then, turning toward Brierly, "If you'll just step across the street after me, I'll tell you what you ought to know. It's a short story." And he crossed the street briskly, and paused on the opposite side to await the other.

STRUGGLE WITH GERMANY SOON

Comment on the Anglo-Russian Convention—Good Diplomatic Move.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 27.—The comment here on the Anglo-Russian convention is marked by an underlying conviction that the most dangerous antagonist of Russia, as well as Great Britain, is Germany, with which country a decisive struggle is alleged to be impending.

Writers characterise the treaty as a guarantee of the safety of Russia's and Great Britain's rear, Russia renouncing the far-east and middle-east in favor of an active policy in the near east, from which Germany had been skilfully deflecting her, and Great Britain reassuring the safety of her frontiers in India in order to be able to use her full strength in opposing Germany's aggressions.

Tolerably Cheerful.

Berlin, Sept. 27.—The German Government accepts the Anglo-Russian convention with tolerable cheerfulness. An apparently authoritative statement is made to the effect that Germany cannot regard the convention as being directed against her interests, since she has no interests in Persia, except economic interests, and these appear to be secured under the terms guaranteeing the equal treatment of all nations. Great Britain is looked upon as having made a good diplomatic move.

Paris Satisfied.

Paris, Sept. 27.—The Anglo-Russian agreement, naturally, is hailed with satisfaction here, as it is considered that it will strengthen France's international position.

NEW PRESIDENT INSTALLED.

Dr. Falconer Formally Placed at Head of Toronto University.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—The formal inauguration of Dr. Robert Alexander Falconer as president of the University of Toronto took place yesterday in Convocation Hall, which was suitably decorated for the occasion. The imposing ceremony was witnessed by a brilliant assemblage of invited guests, which included among its number many of the most renowned educationists on the continent, representing practically every prominent college in the United States and Canada, upon many of whom was afterwards conferred the honorary degree of LL.D., honoris causa. In addition to the learned men the number of invited guests included the names of many other prominent in political, legal, ministerial, and financial circles, and the presence of many beautifully gowned ladies lent color to the occasion, which was one of the most notable in the history of the University of Toronto.

The invited guests gathered in the East Hall at 2.30, and marched in procession to the Convocation Hall, where, shortly after three o'clock, the inauguration took place. The chancellor, Sir William Meredith, conducted the formal installation, which was of a most impressive character.

EMPTY GUN ENDS A LIFE.

Sentenced For Pointing It, Prisoner Commits Suicide.

Stratford, Sept. 27.—At Mitchell on Tuesday, Gottlieb Pelhke, a man past middle age, was sentenced to a year in jail for pointing a gun, said not to have been loaded, at a man he claimed was improperly picking plums.

The magistrate said Pelhke was a menace to society, who frequently threatened other people, owing to fits of ungovernable temper, that the case was most serious he had ever handled, and the prisoner must be severely punished. He then sentenced him to a year in jail.

That night the prisoner swallowed poison, while in his cell, and died. He had taken it with him in case he was heavily sentenced.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Steady—Hogs Advance Further at Chicago.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—Receipts of live stock at the City Market, since Tuesday, as reported, by the railways were 125 car loads, composed of 1815 cattle, 1155 hogs, 3694 sheep and lambs, with 250 calves.

Exporters.

Dealers reported no straight loads of exporters on sale. A few export bulls sold at $3.25 to $4.50 per cwt.

Butchers.

Picked lots of butchers sold at $4.70 to $4.90; loads of good or the best on sale, $4.30 to $4.40; medium butchers and good cows, $4.25 to $4.65; cows and common cattle, $3.50 to $3; canners, $1 to $2 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

H. and W. Murby report a medium sized supply this week, with the quality only ordinary. The light cattle, as usual, are slow sellers, at low prices. Feeders, 1050 to 1100 lbs., are in fair demand, and not too many coming. A great many of this class of steers are being killed at prices too high for feeding purposes. Messrs Murby bought about 150 head at prices ranging from 3 to 3 1-2 for steers, 950 to 1050 lbs., $2 50 to $2.75 for good; 750 to 850 lbs. steers, $2 to $2.25 for mediums, and $1.50 to $1.75 for common light stockers.

Milch Cows.

The best milkers and springers were in good demand at $45 to $60, and one at $65, but common light cows were slow sale at $30 to $35 each.

Veal Calves.

The quality of veal calves was far from being good, many of the sour milk class being offered, with little or no flesh on them. Prices ranged from $3 to $4.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

The run was one of the largest this season. Many of the lambs were of poor quality, and of course there was the usual percentage of rams. Export ewes, $4.25 to $4.40 per cwt.; bucks, $3 to $3.50; lambs, $4.50 to $5.60 per cwt.

Hogs.

Receipts were light, about 1150. Mr. Harris reports the market easy, at unchanged quotations; selects, $6.12½; lights and fats, $5.87½.

THE LATEST DEAN PATTERN.

A JAUNTY EFFECT IN PLAID SILK

The three essential factors in the success of the separate waist are good style, fine quality of material and general adaptability to any odd skirt that one may happen to have. In the pretty blouse here illustrated, which is attractively developed in one of the tartan silks that are to be so much in vogue for the next few months, these important characteristics are pleasingly combined. Owing to the neck adjustment, with the rolling turn down collar, the waist will prove especially becoming to the wearer of the plump and youthful type. The tie is not included in the pattern, but a pretty finishing touch to the ensemble. The broad tuck, outlined with velvet ribbon, which extends from shoulder to belt on either side of the waist, lends it unique distinction. The narrower tuck each side of the centre front and back, the latter concealing the closing, add apparent slenderness to the figure. The sleeves may be made in either full or shorter length. Any of the modish silks, or any supple wool or cotton fabric, may be chosen for developing this design. For the medium size 6 1-4 yards of 27 inch goods will be needed, with 1 1-4 yards of velvet ribbon for trimming.

6962.—Six sizes, 32 to 42 inches bust measure.

The price of this pattern is ten cents.

The new boat, which is being built at the entrance of the Trent canal into Little Lake, will be formally launched to-morrow, Saturday, afternoon at two o'clock. The boat will be used for inspection purposes on the Trent canal.

It will be formally christened by Miss Gertrude Monteilan, daughter of Mr. J. H. McClelland, superintendent of the Trent canal.

It is expected that a number of speeches will be made and the public is cordially invitedt o be present and witness the launching ceremony.

Drivers Should be Neatly Uniformed

That milkmen should have their drivers attired in a neat, clean uniform, and their outfit for the conveyance of milk in good condition, the vehicle neatly painted and the harness clean, was suggested by a citizen the other day. "Now that they are charging 8c. a quart for milk, surely they can afford the additional expense, which will benefit them in the long run," he continued, "the drivers are sometimes dressed any old way, and little attention is paid to general neatness."

Crowds Flock to the Big Exhibition; Ideal Weather for Peterboro' Fair

Numerous Entries in Different Classes—All Former Records Eclipsed—Splendid Programme This Afternoon—City and Country Largely Represented —The Special Exhibits Attract Much Attention.

The Peterborough Industrial Fair is like Topsy in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," it "jest growed." Without a single opening oration or address of any character, the second and principal day of the exhibition commenced this morning. And the weather man,—well he is on his good behavior, and the lateness of the season considered, he provided such a good day that the officials are thinking he would be a good man for the Board of Directors. Everything is running smoothly at the exhibition grounds and the officials are wearing a glad smile. Yesterday was a busy day for Secretary Hall, and the entries came in great numbers. All the live stock, poultry and in the main building, exhibits are in the places alloted them, and the inside and poultry judging has been completed. The judging of live stock is being carried on today and most of the awards have been made.

The Midway this year, is undoubtedly the best one that has ever done business on the Peterborough Fair Grounds and the attractions are being well patronized. It is composed of automatic vaudeville machines, palmists, fortune tellers, etc.

The performance in front of the Grand Stand was loudly applauded by the big crowds that attended the exhibition this afternoon, and the directors have displayed as much judgment in selecting the vaudeville performers, as if they had been veteran theatrical managers.

SPEEDING IN THE RING

With the track in perfect condition and a large number of fast horses entered, the speeding in the ring events are one of the main features of the exhibition. This afternoon the speeding events are;

2.50 class, half-mile, $75.00.
Carter's race, 1-4 mile, $125.00.
2.24 class, half mile, $100.00.

MAMMOTH CROWDS

Ticket Seller Mulhern has had one of the busiest days of his life today and there has been a great crush in front of his wicket since eleven o'clock this morning. People from the surrounding rural community, and towns and villages, have amply poured in, in buggies, wagons and on the trains, and the steamers Water Lily and Monarch brought up large numbers this morning from points along Rice Lake and the Otonabee. The Water Lily left her wharf at Harwood early this morning and the Monarch steamed up from Gore's Landing.

ON THE GROUNDS

As one goes on the grounds, the first thing he notices is the big poultry tent. It is a great attraction to the fair visitors and is worthy of any fall fair in the province.

The tent exhibits of Messrs. J. J. Turner and Sons are near by, and then comes the splendid machinery display of the firm of G. Walter Green and Co. The display of Messrs. Storey & Leary comes next. Other firms which are displaying the lines they handle are; H. Clarke & Son, jewellers; Grafton & Co.; Lang & Maher, and other local and outside merchants and manufacturers.

There are numerous amusements, and games of skill on the grounds, such as ring the cane, throwing at the dolls, etc.

MAIN BUILDING.

On the ground floor of the main building are the exhibits of dairy products and grains, roots and vegetables, bread, honey, etc. The fine arts exhibit is also to be seen there and it is one of the most creditable and artistic ever seen at a local fall fair. A sketch of great interest and one that was given first prize in its class is a drawing of the chimney and hearth of the old house on the farm of the late Hugh Christie in the first concession of Asphodel. The farm is occupied by his son, Mr Edward Christie. The chimney and hearth were constructed in 1833 and the mother of Mr. G. A. Gillespie, one of the fair directors, lived in the house, of which they were a part.

Upstairs in the main building is a large and excellent showing of fancy work and fruit.

There seems no doubt whatever that the exhibition will be a record-breaking success. The directors are to be congratulated upon the splendid way they have conducted the arrangements in connection with the fair and the public are to be thanked for the interest they have shown in its welfare by extending it a liberal patronage.

Are There Thieves in the West End?

Several Complaints From Residents About Having Articles Stolen

Police Magistrate Dumble stated this morning that there must be a number of thieves in the West End of the city, and the offenders are most small boys.

Mr. Dumble has been out of the city for several days. Last evening when he returned home, he found his wheelbarrow had been stolen. A while ago, he stated, in a house that he owned, there were stored, several double windows, and some nervy creature entered the cellar and carried off two of them. Several other persons erecting houses in the western part of the city, have complained of having had keys of safes and building material stolen. It would be well for the policemen to keep a vigilant eye on this section.

ON HOMEWOOD AVENUE.

It was stated in yesterday's Review that Mr. Walter Stocker had disposed of a handsome residence on Gilmour street. It should have read, "Homewood avenue," a slip of the pencil being responsible for the error.

GRADUATING EXERCISES.

The graduating exercises in connection with the Nicholls Hospital Training School for nurses will be held in the Y.M.C.A. Assembly Hall, on Tuesday evening, October 8th when the presentation of diplomas will take place. Those who will receive diplomas are Mrs. Douglas, Miss Mowry, Miss Steele and Miss Radcliffe.

A HEAVY LOSS

The loss which Uxbridge has sustained by the burning of the organ and piano factory is even greater than at first appeared. The Journal says:—The insurance, $13,500, will not begin to cover the loss, which is estimated at $38,000 to $40,000. The stockholders will lose all they put in, $20,000. Having lost everything, the company are unable to rebuild.

A SUDDEN ILLNESS.

The Dan Spence Ambulance was called to the C.G.E. works this morning, where Miss Barclay, employed in the lamp department was seized with a sudden illness. She was removed to her home on Perry street where Dr. Leach attended her. She is now doing nicely.

WILL IMPROVE PLANT.

The electric lights have been very poor for the last few nights, and upon enquiry the manager of the Company stated that extensive improvements are under way at the power house, which prevent a good service being given for the next two weeks. —Havelock Standard.

WORK ON THE CANAL

Mr. George Dickson was home for a few days last week, from Sault Ste. Marie, where he has been overseeing the construction work of a Government bridge, the length of which is 200 feet, says the Campbellford Herald. Dickson Bros. have already five large contracts to fill, with prospects of several more. There is little doubt that before long the new bridge works will be one of the foremost industrial concerns in this part of the province.

New Tenders Will be Called for

Those Received by Park Street Church Considered too High

At a meeting of the Building committee of the Park street Baptist church held last evening tenders for the new church were opened. Only two tenders were sent in, one for stone and brick work, and the other for bulk. Both were away up, neither one could be accepted without considerable modification. It is likely that another set of tenders will be asked for under new conditions, which will have the immediate consideration of the committee.

Tenders for heating were favorably considered.

Progress was made yesterday in the removal of the old church. There is now a straight pull and to-day is likely to see it in position. The building will be secure and safe for Sunday.

Ontario Coal Co. and Sign By-law

Charged With Violation of it in Police Court To-day —Other Cases

The Ontario Coal Co. was charged with a violation of the Sign Bylaw at the police court this morning. Magagain today Mr. A. P. Poussette, K.C., again today. Mr. A. P. Poussette appeared for the defendants and pleaded not guilty.

The bylaw states that the sign must be eight feet above the sidewalk, must not project farher than 18 inches, and must be illuminated. It also has to pass the inspection of the city engineer.

His Worship enlarged the case for a week to allow the company to comply with the law.

Mr. Poussette argued that there was no clause in the Municipal Act that authorized such a bylaw. The merchant had a right tY have signs and the bylaw was ultra vires, and, furthermore, it was poorly constructed. Counsel for th edefendant further stated that his clients' sign was illuminated. The electric lights in the window lighted up the sign that it might easily be read at night.

Mr. E. H. D. Hall, who was present, argued that there had to be a light inside the sign, but His Worship did not agree with him. The defendants admitted that their sign was not the correct height, it being only 7 1-2 feet above the sidewalk, and it was more than 16 inches out on the street. While it hadn't been approved of by the city engineer, Mr. Poussette promised that they would see him at once and would have it changed to meet the requirements of the law.

CASE DISMISSED.

John Barrie, who was remanded on Wednesday on a charge of stealing a gold watch, the property of Jas. Murray, appeared before His Worship this morning. Barrie elected to be tried by jury, and pleaded not guilty. There was no evidence to convict him and no chance of proving the case, a nol was dismissed.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY.

Two men were charged with being drunk in a public place yesterday. They pleaded guilty and were fined two dollars, or ten days. One had not the necessary two spot, so they will sojourn on the hill.

SALE OF HORSES

Ten or Twelve Fine Horses will be offered for sale at the Palace Livery Horse Exchange, rear of Snowden House, To-morrow. Sale commences at Ten o'clock.

SERVICE WAS FULLY CHORAL

The harvest service at St. John's church last night was fully choral, the responses being to Wallis' Psalms and Canticles to Cathedral Psalter chants. Rev. Wm. Major intoned the first part of the office, Rev. Dr Langfeldt, the concluding portion. The choir acquitted themselves well, numbering nearly forty voices. The opening of the anthem, "While the Earth Remaineth," was beautifully rendered by the two leading boys, Cyril Davey and Arthur Horsfield, and the chorus parts amply repaid their careful training. The volunteries were from Costa's harvest music. The services on Sunday will continue the festival.

The Board May Hold Banquet

Board of Trade Council Will Make This Recommendation

Peterborough's Board of Trade will likely hold a banquet some time during November. In all other towns and cities where there are live boards an annual banquet is held, and it has been found that they do much to keep the interest aroused and promote the objects of the organizations under whose auspices they are held.

The question of holding a banquet in connection with the local Board of Trade, was discussed at a meeting of the council of the board last night, when the proposition was favorably commented upon, and it was decided to recommend to the board at a meeting to be held at an early date, that a banquet be held in November. The intention is to secure some prominent commercial man from some outside centre to give an address, this to be the feature of the evening. There is little doubt, but that such a banquet can be made a success and that it would have a most beneficial effect.

Mr. Baker, piano tuner for Heintzman & Co., will be in Peterborough in a few days. Any orders left at Lendrum's Photo Gallery, Charlotte St., will be attended to. 2d

The annual financial meeting of the Peterborough District of the Methodist church, is being held to-day at the George street church. About fifteen ministers and laymen were present. The meeting opened this morning and continued all day with an adjournment for lunch. Those present were Revs. E. A. Pearson, H.M., Manning, C. H. Coon, Peterborough, G. R. Eyres, city, J. McBain, Cavan, and — Argue, of Millbrook.

The meeting resumed at 1.30 o'clock when further business was transacted.

OBITUARY

INFANT EXPIRES

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McCormack, Edinburgh street, will sympathize with them in the loss they have sustained by the death of their infant daughter, Margaret Theresa, which occurred last evening. The child was seven weeks old. The funeral took place this afternoon at three o'clock to St. Peter's cemetery.

MR. FRED HOWSON.

With shocking suddenness the news spread through the city this morning of the death of Frederick George Laing Howson, second son of Mr. George H. Howson, 188 Edinburg street, which occurred at Nicholls hospital early this morning. The announcement was received with the profoundest regret by a wide circle of friends. The deceased had only been ill about a week. He had been working in Port Hope, and in company with a friend came home last Thursday, feeling unwell. On Saturday he was taken to the hospital where he underwent an operation for appendicitis, but his strength was not sufficient to stand it and he passed away. The late Fred Howson was only 23 years of age and had lived practically all his life in this city where he was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. He was a prominent member of St. Paul's Young Men's Guild. He was also a member of the C.G.E. Angling club.

Besides his parents, two brothers and three sisters are left to mourn his loss. The brothers are Ernest H. and Arthur, of this city, and the sisters are Misses Marion, of Woodstock General hospital, and Lexa and Helen at home.

The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence, 188 Edinburg street, to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

Lindsay to Have A Roller Rink

Mr. S. J. Sheridan Making Arrangements There

The popular and healthy recreation, roller skating, is to be inaugurated in Lindsay, and the rink for this purpose will be ready in a little over a week.

Mr. S. J. Sheridan, owner of the Peterborough roller skating rink, is in town and made this statement to a Post reporter this morning. The Lindsay street skating rink has been leased and a gang of men commenced the work of putting in a hardwood floor this morning. The rink will be extensively improved otherwise, and Mr. Sheridan expects to have it ready for skaters in a little over a week's time.

During the past year this form of amusement has received a distinct impetus in public estimation owing to the healthful form of enjoyment. Everywhere rinks are being built, and roller skating has "caught on" to stay. Mr. Sheridan is the owner of the Peterborough rink, and also has one in Ottawa.—Lindsay Post.

Edmonton Newspaper Pays Tribute to Mr. Justice Beck

A recent copy of the Edmonton News contains the following reference to Mr. M. D. Beck, of that city, son to the late Rev. J. W. B. Beck, a former rector of St. John's church, Peterborough, who was recently elevated to the bench:—

For the first time in the history of the city, a member of the Edmonton Bar has been elevated to the Supreme Court. That Mr. Beck would go on the Bench before very long has been generally accepted for some time past and his appointment does honor to the government making it. In no sense does it come as a political reward, for Mr. Beck has been no politician, in the ordinary meaning of the word. It is purely as a result of his legal attainments that he has been placed in the high and responsible position that he will in future occupy. He is still in the prime of his years, having just touched the half century mark, and should have a long period of useful activity ahead of him.

The new judge is a Westerner of many years' experience. Educated in Peterborough and at the University of Toronto, he commenced the practice of his profession in Winnipeg, in partnership with the present Mr. Justice Prendergast, of Saskatchewan. In 1899 he moved to Calgary, being associated with the Lougheed firm. Two years later he came on to Edmonton, where he has built up a very large and lucrative business.

As city solicitor he has steered the municipality over many dangerous pot falls, and the loss of the services of a man of his experience in civic problems will be greatly felt. In the affairs of his profession at large he has been most active and has been for some time past the President of the Territorial Law Society.

Personally, the new judge is a man of rare social and intellectual gifts. He is a thorough lawyer, has always looked the part, and will do the same for that which he is now assuming. But his interests are by no means confined to the work of his calling. As a good citizen and a good friend, as well as a brilliant practitioner, he will receive congratulations of all with whom he has come into contact.

Harvest Festival Services at St. John's Church Last Night

Rev. Canon Welch, of Toronto, Delivered an Eloquent Sermon—Large Congregation Present—Thanksgiving Music by the Choir—Edifice Beautifully Decorated.

With a true spirit of thanksgiving to Almighty God, the annual harvest festival service at St. John's church was held yesterday.

In the morning at 10 a.m. Holy Communion was celebrated, and in the evening service was held at which Rev. Canon Welch of St. James' Cathedral, Toronto, was the special preacher. A large congregation was present.

The church, with all its beautiful appointments of flowers, grain and fruit, presented an exceedingly pretty appearance. Here and there throughout the edifice were evidences of the harvest. The seats were decorated with bunches of grain and fruit, and the windows were filled with vegetables. The church was filled to the doors by the time the service began.

Rev. Canon Welch, who preached an eloquent and inspiring sermon. The speaker began by noting the contrast between St. Paul's insistence on the daily crucifying of the flesh and his insistence upon our duty to our God. The Christian life should be marked with the cross. It should also be full of brightness and should shine forth, giving light to all whom we come in contact with. "Are there not days, when in the lives of many men, there is no brightness, but rather all is gloomy and downcast?" asked the reverend gentleman. There are days when it does not seem worth while to make any spiritual efforts, when men become careworn, disenchanted and altogether unhappy. All this gloominess is wrong, counsels the preacher. It is not misfortune, but the fault of the individual. "The fruit of the Spirit is love and joy."

There is a Godly sorrow, the apostle teaches. Even when on the night previous to His crucifixion having been betrayed by Judas and denied by Peter, He went sad and wept. Then again at the grave of Lazarus He shed tears.

Continuing Canon Welch said the gloominess and sullenness of our nature, was subject to our own control. "We each have a will and that should govern our lives. If it is weak there is the grace of God to help and strengthen us.

"In what does the uselessness of this gloominess consist?" asked the preacher. "It denies the power of God. If we believe in Him and His goodness that will enable us to rejoice and take away all our cares. Then to our fellowmen, in these moods, we are selfish, unkind and irritable. This sullenness is degrading to the individual. It takes the light and sunshine out of one's life. In time it leads one into despotism."

"St. Paul gives first place to love and second place to joy," said the reverend gentleman. "People seldom think to ask God to forgive their sadness. Rejoice ever more, says the apostle. But the joy St. Paul speaks of is not that aggressive joy, which is selfish. It is a joy of the spirit which should be made a habit. We should cultivate it, said the speaker. We should look to the bright side of things. Talk about the pleasant things of life, not about the worries and cares. Learn to see the best qualities in others, not the worst. Appreciate works of art and literature. If we did this, there would not be so much grumbling and there would be more happy and thankful hearts. Simplicity of character is one characteristic of true happiness. Happiness is goodness. At this harvest thanksgiving there should be a spirit of happiness and thanksgiving. The harvest festivities are the symbol of what our lives should be. God has bestowed countless blessings upon us, showing His inestimable love. Only the true Christian can be happy and however dark be his path he is encompassed by the love of God."

Mr. Ed. P. Eyres Here on Visit

Has Been Engaged for Some Time as Telegraph Operator in Calgary

Mr. Ed. P. Eyres, son of Mr. Wm. Eyres, Edinburgh street, who has been engaged in the capacity of telegraph operator in Calgary, for a number of months past, arrived in the city last night, and will stay here for a short time. Mr. Eyres learned his business in the local offices of the Great Northwestern Telegraph Co., leaving this city about three years ago. Since then he has been telegrapher in several different towns. He may go back to Calgary, but thinks he will probably be located in Toronto next.

In these days when everything is bubbling over with enthusiasm for the West, it is somewhat of a novelty to find anyone who does not prefer it to this east, but Mr. Eyres says Eastern Canada, is good enough for him and would rather live here than in the prairie country.

Mr. Chas. Eyres, who is his oldest brother, is also here on a visit and has been in the city for a few days past. He has been ranching near Calgary. Mr. Harry Eyres, the other brother is engaged in civil engineering in the office of the divisional engineer of the C.P.R. at Calgary.

Parker's Dye Works Doing Business Again After Recent Fire

Mr. R. M. Beach, proprietor of Parker's Dye Works, is a hustler. On Monday night his establishment was visited by fire and serious damage done. Today Mr. Beach is doing business again in the cleaning, pressing and dyeing departments.

This is pretty quick work. Mr. Beach met with a heavy loss, as on him large and valuable collection of drugs he had no insurance. He has gone to work, however, with energy and is once more doing business at the old stand, but, of course, in different rooms to those visited by the flames, which will, however, soon be restored.

AMUSEMENS

"The Brixton Burglary," presented by the Summers Stock Co., kept a big audience screaming with laughter at the Grand Opera House last night. The piece, one of the funniest ever, was splendidly put on, every member of the cast doing work, the equal of which is very often not found in high priced companies. The house was filled to the doors and everyone was satisfied that they had twice their money's worth. It would be unwise to attempt to describe the plot of "The Brixton Burglary." Suffice it is to say that the complications resulted in the most amusing situations, some of them so funny that the would drive the blues out of a bag of nitrol, Geo. H. Summers as Fraser Green could not have been improved upon, while Belle Stevenson, as Alicia Green, his wife, also displayed great ability. They were given splendid support by the other members of the company, the work of Harry Waterhouse, Geo. Nagel and Fred Dorrity, being especially good.

The specialties were again of a high standard and added greatly to the production as a whole.

The "Sailor Boy" Brand of canned goods are the best that are put up. They never fail to please. Try a few cans.

Another Interesting Letter From Delegate to the Congress

Mr. T. J. Begley Tells About Conditions in North Dakota—Prohibition a Success in That State—Interesting Points About the Great West

This following letter from Mr. T. J. Begley, will be read with much interest, containing as it does, many interesting details of western life and conditions:

The great Labor Convention has drawn to a close, and believing the proceedings have been freely recorded in the press of my native vince, I will still further refer to conditions as I found them in North Dakota. I might state, however, that I will be heard from later on regarding the wonderful convention of the Trades and Labor Congress in Winnipeg, and the plans outlined for active work on labor lines, in that portion of Ontario, known as the Midland district.

In the city of Cavalier, North Dakota, one is able to obtain a pretty fair idea of conditions, as they exist throughout the state. This centre is governed by a city ordinance. City laws prevail in every department. This city has splendid cement sidewalks, good roads, and fine residences and is lighted with electricity. A splendid weekly newspaper supplies the citizens with the weeks doings, and is ably edited. A fine able-bodied man is Chief of Police, and the fire brigade is an efficient organization. The main fire fighting appliance consists of a Waterous (Brantford) engine. Mr. John O'Keefe, an old Lindsay boy, is owner of the Cavalier Telephone exchange as well as the rural lines and private lines, connecting several adjacent cities. The farmers of the state have also a system of rural postal delivery whereby their mail is deposited daily in a zinc box at the entrance to their farm, being supplied free by the Minneapolis Journal, with a year's subscription to that splendid journal. The tonsorial artists of this state are a pretty important body of men. They are obliged to serve a three year's apprenticeship and then pass an examination before a council of three appointed by the state authorities. Papers are prepared on such questions as skin diseases, dandruff, affections of the scalp, etc. After passing successfully such examination a barber is furnished with a certificate, entitling him to practice, after taking out a license.

The people of North Dakota, have just laid the corner stone of a fine building at Bottineau, for the state forestry school. North Dakota has no national forest. A few years ago the government undertook to establish one in the Turtle mountains and made a thorough investigation of the project, only to find that the effort was too late. The greater portion of the timber land of the proposed forest had already passed into private hands.

The Canadian Government was more successful. The Turtle mountains extend across the international boundary, and the portion on the north side of the line was made into a Dominion forest by Canada, and its timber is being cared for and developed.

The name of the "Bad Lands" is misleading. The lands are cut by deep and formidable ravines, rendering road-making and travelling difficult; but much of the land is fertile and there is reason to believe that many valuable woods will flourish if planted and cared for. Here and there in the "Bad Lands" small bodies of timber are found.

Nature having done so little for North Dakota in the way of forests, and so much in the way of suitable soil and climate, it remains for the people to take the matter in hand and plant trees. They began doing this in a small way with the first settlements, and in recent years, the state has assisted. It has planted trees, not only for experimental purposes, but also with a view to commercial use. The state forestry commission has now published its twelfth annual report—a fact which in itself shows how early interest developed in this subject.

Many states are putting forth their best efforts to save what forests they have, while North Dakota, having so little to save, is chiefly concerned in planting. It is laying a broad and sure foundation in its forestry school, where men will be trained to carry the work forward in years to come.

North Dakota, as is well known, is a prohibition state, and being interested in the temperance question, the writer made enquiries, regarding the conditions prevailing from a temperance standpoint. Cavalier is a "dry" city, and it is impossible to secure a "smile" at any time. The drug stores are not allowed to sell and as a result you see no evidences of drunkenness. Locally, prohibition is a success, and the residents would not stand for a permit being issued to drug firms.

In Hamilton, nine miles across the prairie conditions are different. The drug stores have secured permits to sell and the price per year is $1.00. In purchasing the buyer has to swear it is for sickness, and occasionally some are known to become suddenly ill. The excessive price, however, serves a good purpose. In Grand Forks, it is an easy matter to secure liquor. East Grand Forks is just across the Red River, in Minnesota, which is not a prohibition state. As a result the 55 saloons cater to the wants of two cities in the supplying of beverages. The same state of affairs exists in other places on the border. The state of course, has its quota of "blind pigs," but the authorities are showing renewed activity in stamping these out. During the writer's sojourn in the state, a man under the influence of liquor was never encountered. It is illegal, of course, to indulge in the system of treating. The youth of the state, as a result, are growing up to a great extent models of sobriety, owing to the disappearance of the baneful influences, which usually accompany the treating habit. Taking everything into consideration, the conclusion has been arrived at that prohibition is not the failure many in Canada suppose it is. True, it has its defects, but they may be remedied by a stringent enforcement of the law. The conditions of affairs in this state, are in striking contrast to what really exists in Winnipeg, where scores of boys and men, and a sprinkling of women, can be seen daily, reeling through the street in a drunken condition.

The people of North Dakota have the kindest feeling possible towards Canadians and their institutions, and look upon them, as a people who are playing and will continue to play an important part in the history of this hemisphere.

The farmers are now busy at the harvest and the smoke from the traction engines can be seen all over the prairies. Men are scarce and the farmers are obliged to pay $3.25 per day and board. One farmer had his gang ready on Monday morning, Sept. 23, at $3.25 a day, but a rival farmer came along, and raised it to $3.50 with the result that he captured the gang.

IF YOUR BACK ACHES

Mix This Simple, Helpful Recipe at Home and Try It.

Get from any prescription pharmacy the following:

Shake well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful dose after each meal and at bedtime.

The above is considered by an eminent authority as the finest prescription ever written to relieve Backache, Kidney trouble, Weak Bladder and all forms of Urinary difficulties. This mixture acts promptly on the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys, enabling them to filter and strain the uric acid and other waste matter from the blood which causes Rheumatism.

Some persons who suffer with the afflictions may not feel inclined to place much confidence in this simple mixture, yet those who have tried it say the results are simply surprising, the relief being effected without the slightest injury to the stomach or other organs.

Mix some and give it a trial. It certainly comes highly recommended. It is the prescription of an eminent authority, whose entire reputation, it is said, was established by it.

Serious Charges; Can They be True?

Do Aldermen Show Favoritism in Matter of Improvements?

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—The attention of citizens has already been directed, through the press to some of the preposterous acts of the present City Council; since January last. There is one injustice, however, to which a number of ratepayers are being subjected, which has not yet, as far as I am aware, been brought to the attention of the general public. I refer to the manner, the comfort and convenience of a number of people is being neglected, and how they are compelled to travel through all kinds of mud and dirt, in order to gain ingress and egress to their homes, while those who are in the "ring" have only to ask for every convenience and our officials fall over each other in their eagerness to accommodate them. At this moment, good walks, which would suit their purpose for years to come, are being torn up and replaced at a large expense to the people, and new pavements are being constructed in a great many instances where they are not required, except to increase the value of property, owned by aldermen or their friends. A case in point has just occurred on Reid and Park streets, where a worthy alderman has a number of vacant lots, surrounded by a beautiful and costly pavement, while other residents, who have not the necessary "pull" are allowed to continue wallowing in the mire.

Thanking you, sir, for your past favors, I beg to remain,

Respectfully yours,
PRO BONO PUBLICO.

Their Excellencies to Visit Port Hope

The Port Hope Times says:—There was practically a full attendance last Thursday evening in the council chamber at a meeting of the joint committee recently appointed by the council for the purpose of making arrangements for the civic reception to His Excellency Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, on the occasion of his visit to Port Hope on Tuesday, Oct. 15, and as a result strong sub-committees have been drafted for carrying to a successful issue what promises to be a gala event in the town's history.

"Put the Riches of the Country Into Marketable Shape at Once"

Cultivate Western Farms, Drop Town Lot Speculations, Work the Forests and Mines, and in Five Years There Will be Money to Burn—An Able Review of the Present Situation in Western Canada by a Canadian.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir.—The Calgary Herald publishes an interview with Walter C. Austin of the Peterborough - Saskatchewan Land Co., copied from your paper, in which he gives a reasonable and fair account of the crops in Saskatchewan and Alberta, which is very interesting and if he had stopped at that, in place of "going" for the banks, who, he says, "check" the country, because they will not advance money on real estate, it would have been better.

Such gross ignorance is misleading to those who know no better, and throws discredit upon the balance of his statements, with those who understand the financial situation better, and also those with common sense enough to know that banks do not and never did, lend money on real estate, as their charters do not permit them to do so. Mr. Austin must know that the selling of town lots in every new town or prospective town, has had much to do with the shortage of money.

There is scarcely, a town or village in Ontario but has contributed thousands of dollars to town lots and Cobalt wild-cat prospects—called mines—and also as a speculation to farm lands that they never saw, except on the map, and 90 per cent., of the properties will never be seen by their owners.

Most of the "purchases" of the above "commodities" have been made on margin, and are to be classed with that form of gambling known as "bucket shop" trading. You take a "flyer" of a few hundred and the flyer flies away with the money.

There are millions of money gone out of Eastern Canada, Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritime Provinces, to New York, through the "bucket shops," and many more millions into Northwest lands, town lots, and Cobalt stocks, that will never return to the "suckers" who "invested" on margin, and these forsooth, the broker pails at the banks. More power to the banks, for not advancing money on such security. Banks are established to foster legitimate trade and commerce, not speculation, and it is time they called a halt with those of their customers, who have borrowed money extensively for their legitimate business, and then used it to take a "flyer." The legitimate business man who has not taken a "flyer" is hampered. The merchant cannot meet his obligations to the wholesale man, because his customers have taken "flyers" and cannot pay their legitimate debts. The wholesaler has to extend the retailers' paper and the banks in turn are asked to carry the paper.

The bankers, standing in the high places, look down upon, and see what is going on and are in a position to see what is coming long before the public generally.

There are more "town lots" sold in the Northwest than will be built upon in one hundred years.

There are more farms in the hands of speculators, and I refer to the owners of small blocks of from 160 to 2,000 acres, than will be cultivated in the next 50 years. 90 per cent. of these small purchases are bought with small cash payment and balance on short or long terms of payment, with 5 per cent. or 6 per cent. interest. The deferred payments and interest will surely come due. If the land is not made to pay, the payments and interest due, where is the cash to come from? Why, out of the owner's capital, or the profits of his legitimate business, of course. Then it is a tax or burden on his capital or legitimate business.

A cow will pay for her keep and a little more, by her milk.

A horse will pay for more than the cost of hay and oats he consumes, if he is put to work.

A hog will pay for more than he consumes by the dead weight on the butcher's scales.

But if you don't milk the cow, or don't work the horse, or don't kill the pig at the proper time, they are non-productive.

Everyone knows this and it sounds like silly twaddle, but still the same thing applies to unproductive town lots and farm lands. People in the Northwest are howling about the shortage of money, and blame the financial centres in the east, which means the banks. They are even promoting a bank in the west, with a capital of $10,00,000 and inviting subscriptions from the people of the west. This bank is to do business in the west exclusively. It appeals to the man to put up his $100 and be independent of the financiers in the east, who are holding the money from him.

The most willing subscriber is the man who is most urgently in need to borrow and he subscribes his mite in the vain hope that money will be easier and he will be able to borrow. In the prospectus is given some mysterious way of chasing the law "around a stump" so to speak, by organizing an English Company so that they may be able to loan money on land, growing crops, etc.

The very essence of banking is security. The quicker and more liquid a security, the better it is. The more productive the asset, the better the security—generally speaking.

A farmer harvests and markets his crop and then the money to meet an indebtedness—say a mortgage on his farm due in sixty days from date. He knows if he does not pay, his farm will be sold. A neighbor wants to borrow the money and will give a second mortgage on his (the neighbor's) farm for 60 days, with 10 per cent. interest, will the farmer part with the money? No! Well, another man comes along and says, "I will turn over to you 100 cattle that I have sold for $5,000 to be delivered in 30 days, cash on deliver, which you can collect, if you will lend me $500.00 that I need at the moment and I will give you 5 per cent. interest." Will he do it? Why, yes, if the conveyance is proper and securely made.

Just so with the banks sending millions of money to New York and lending it in call loans, on the very best quick securities, because they know they can get the money on 24 hours' notice. Why do they not loan money in Canada on quick assets? Because there are not enough quick assets to be had in Canada—that's all. They lend as much as they can. A farm is not a quick asset. Cobalt stocks are not quick assets. They may sell at $1 today and 10 cents tomorrow. Even good dividend paying stocks are not quick assets in Canada.

The Bank of Montreal stock and the C.P.R. stock, are both good and sound securities, but a buyer cannot always be found in Canada, on short notice, except perhaps at a very grave sacrifice. I am not a banker or a son of a banker. I do not own bank stock, nor do I owe the bank, but I have no sympathy with those who thoughtlessly or ignorantly find fault with back-bone of Canadian progress—the banks. Some managers may have their failings, like other individuals, but the banking institutions of this country are sound and have the confidence of the financial world, without which Canada would be poor indeed. We have the greatest country on old Mother Earth, none better, none as good. We have the best and greatest of farm areas in the world, waiting development. We have the greatest areas of mineral wealth that was ever heard of waiting to be worked—not capitalized. The coin, the money, has been scattered over this vast territory, until it looks scarce, but it is in the country, or will come back into the country just as quick as we get to work and put the riches of the country into marketable shape. The products of the farm, forest and mine exchanged for the coin. This is the only way to make money plentiful in the country, and not by selling one another unproductive farms, or swapping jack-knives or howling at the banks.

Well now I have already said too much, and must explain.

At this moment, I am sitting in a 36-room, comfortable hotel at Strathmore, near Calgary, Alberta, where one year ago today I slept in a tent and grubbed in the only shack for twenty miles around. There are thirty houses here today, with stores, etc. They are building a large school and there is some talk of building a church if money gets easier. I was out through the country looking for land and found plenty of the finest, and crops that make one's mouth water. Fall wheat, oats and barley, are all in good shape and harvest in full swing. The cry here is for men, men, men to work, work, work, to save the crops. There is no time to discuss the tightness of money or politics.

I feel cheap that I am not working, in place of writing my thoughts prompted by the article above referred to, which I read while waiting for the train which is delayed on account of its overload of new settlers. Let me say to those of your readers who own farms and town lots in this country—Get your coats off and work your farms. Drop your town lots and in five years you will have money to burn.

Yours truly,
CANADIAN

WEDDING BELLS

COOMBS—BENOR

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at "The Maples," Campbellford, on Wednesday, Sept. 18th, at high noon, when Jennie May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Benor, was united in marriage to Mr. John M. Coombs, of Smith's Falls. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. C. Reeves, in the presence of the immediate relatives. The bride, who was given away by her father, was neatly gowned in a costume of cream liberty satin with garniture of lace and silk and applique and carried a shower bouquet of cream roses. The groom's gift to the bride was a necklace and pendant set with pearls. The young couple left at 3 p.m. for a trip down the St. Lawrence, taking in Montreal, Quebec and other places of interest. The bride's travelling costume was a tailor-made suit of green broadcloth with hat to match. They will make their future home at Smith's Falls.

Medical Men Have Been Spoiled

By Over Generous Treatment Says the Orillia Packet

Dr. J. W. Gray of Peterboorough, strenuously objects to reporting contagious diseases to the authorities unless paid for doing so. Dr. Gray and his fellows are given extraordinary powers and protection under the statute law, and the service they are asked to do the state in return is extremely trifling. When Dr. Gray demands a fee of $10 for filling in the blank, reporting a case of typhoid for instance, he suggests that some members of his profession have been spoiled by over-generous treatment.—Orillia Packet.

BUILDING BOOM IN HAVELOCK

Sixty Five Houses Erected During the Past Season

The wonderful business expansion in Havelock still continues. In the spring of 1906, King street was surveyed and opened up, and today every lot has been built on with the exception of four, three of which are reserved for a school play ground. Now another street has been opened up north of George street, and east of the Park, and already ten lots have been sold and one dwelling is in course of erection. It will be known as Park street on Mathison street east. Since the spring of 1906, sixty-five houses have been erected in Havelock, and still the demand continues.

Large Eagle Was Caught Near Tweed

Considerable interest was aroused in Tweed on the 12th inst., when Mr. Leo Palmateer, exhibited a big live grey eagle to his friends. Mr. Palmateer, who lives about five miles west of Tweed, near White Lake, says he had noticed the bird flying about the lake for several days, and on Wednesday night, he went after it and shot it in the left wing, disabling it a little, so that he easily captured it. He found the bird a big one measuring seven feet three inches from wing to wing. Birds of this size are seldom seen in this part of this country now, but old residents say that they were plentiful years ago.—Tweed News.

HAS SECURED GOOD POSITION

Mr. J. E. Code Now With McColl Bros. & Sons, Toronto

Mr. John E. Code of McColl Bros. & Co., Toronto, was in the city on a business trip today. Mr. Code has accepted a position as traveller for the above firm, manufacturers of paints, oils, and varnishes. His order book has been filling up well since he went on the road. Mr. Code will no doubt make a successful knight of the grip.

River Channel Will be Cleared

The channel in the river from Hastings to Rice Lake, is at last to be put in proper condition for navigation, and when the present work is completed, the unsightly rocks which were left when the last dredging was done here will be gone, and the channel fit for navigation. The engineers have been taking soundings for the past two weeks and have been adding to the staff, in order to expedite the finishing of the work. When they are finished, the contract will be let and the dredging and clearing of the river will commence, and be completed no doubt as soon as possible.—Hastings Star.

The Manitoba Legislature will be called on the second Thursday in January.

THE RALLY WAS WELL ATTENDED

Profitable Time Spent at the Y.W.C.A. Last Evening

Owing to so many counter attractions in the city last night the educational rally at the Y.W.C.A. was not so well attended as could have been desired. However, considerably over one hundred were present and spent a very enjoyable time. In the afternoon Mrs. R. Neill, Mrs. Crossman, Mrs. Nugent and Miss L. Rush were at the building decorating and preparing refreshments. The decorations were autumn leaves and salvia, and the entrance hall and the gymnasium presented a very pretty appearance. Mrs. Dr. Scott presided in the absence of Mrs. Roger, who was detained at Mount Forest through sickness. The programme was as follows:

Opening hymn.—All hail the power of Jesus name.
Prayer by Mrs. Morrow.
Pianoforte solo.—Miss Bell.
Vocal solo.—Mrs. Dickson Hall.
Humorous reading.—Miss Lillian Dean.

Miss Mitchell gave a very practical, helpful talk on her work in connection with the Y.W.C. Guild in Toronto. Miss Maynard announced the classes for the coming winter. Dr. Greer has kindly consented to give a course of lectures on home nursing. Sheriff Hall will again conduct the class in English literature. It is hoped that classes in sewing, arithmetic and bookkeeping will also be formed shortly. The domestic science classes will be discussed at the Board meeting next Monday and a successor to Miss Rawden may be chosen then. The secretary has received a number of applications for the position. Miss Coventry will hope to meet her first class for the season on Tuesday next.

FALLING OFF IN BUILDING

Permits Issued During Week Only Total $5,915

With the coming of cold weather there has been a big falling off in the number and value of building permits issued at the city hall. The value of the permits for the past week only total $5,915, as compared with $12,000 for the previous seven days. Of course it is only natural that the amount of building should fall off in the autumn as very little in this line is done during the winter months. The majority of the permits issued during the past week are for small buildings, improvements, etc. The list is as follows:

K. G. Loch, improvements to basement at 413 George street, $275.

Jos. Gray, new shop on Donegal-st., $200.

Jas. Houlihan, addition to dwelling on Donegal street, $200.

W. Taylor, dwelling on Bathurst-st., $1,800.

J. T. O'Connell, stable on Concession street, $125.

Thomas Blodgett, improvements to dwelling on Downie street, $40.

John Riddell, stable on Homewood avenue, $25.

Little Lake Cemetery Co., kitchen, $250.

R. Gibbs, brick house on London-st., $6,000.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Dr. Snelgrove Has Removed to Omemee

Dr. Snelgrove opened up a medical practice at Omemee this week. While his many friends here will regret to learn of his departure, they will join in wishing him every success in his new field. Dr. and Mrs. Snelgrove will be greatly missed, but Millbrook's loss will be Omemee's gain. Both the doctor and his estimable wife have aided greatly in church and Sunday school work, and they will be a strong addition to an Omemee choir, as both have excellent voices.—Millbrook Mirror.

Company Makes Excellent Choice

Mr. Albert Simpson Accepts Position With Mann Lumber Co.

Mr. Albert Simpson of this city, late of the Rathbun Lumber Co., of Deseronto, has been appointed to the responsible position of Secretary-Treasurer and Superintendent of the Mann Lumber and Cheese Box Company and entered upon his new duties. Mr. Simpson has had long experience in the lumber business, having held an important position with the Rathbun Lumber Co. and is well qualified in every respect to fulfil in a satisfactory manner the duties of his new position. As Secretary-Treasurer of the Mann Co. he succeeds Mr. W. F. Nelson, who has other business interests to which he will devote his attention. Mr. Nelson was only able to devote part of his time to the Lumber Co. and the expansion of the business has made it necessary to secure a man who could devote all his time to the interests of the firm.

The Mann Lumber and Cheese Box Co., is a thriving concern and is steadily expanding. At present thirty-five men are employed, and the machinery is kept humming all the time.

In Mr. Simpson, the public will find a capable and obliging gentleman with whom to do business.

New Feature of Cheese Boaed

A hog board has been established in connection with the Picton cheese board. To the board farmers will come to sell their own hogs, and also those they are empowered to sell by neighbors. The local buyers will attend. The selling of hogs will be divided into four classes; selects, fat, light and sows. It is anticipated that this new idea will be beneficial alike to buyer and seller for the former will be able to fill quick orders in lots and the farmer seller will gain the advantage in the competition, as does the cheese seller. The board will commence work in earnest next week.

MAY DEVELOP POWER ON MOIRA

A meeting of those interested in water power on Moira River was held in the city hall, Belleville, Friday afternoon. The delegates were welcomed by Mayor Sullman. It was argued by several of the speakers, that, providing concrete dams were built at the head of the river, the water could be conserved so as to supply Belleville with power all the year round. A committee was appointed to enquire into all the phases of the question, find out the cost, etc., and report at another meeting to be called by the Mayor of Belleville.

Skidoo to You, Hats of Straw?

Weather Man Issues Mandate That Must be Obeyed

Skidoo the straw hat! To the unconventional parties who persisted in the wearing of straw headgear on and after the 15th day of September the Weather Man this morning gives silent but stern command to remove the straw lid. The finely-worked white sailor style in vogue during the summer of 1907, will be long remembered for its bright and variegated color band. But the time has come with the recent sudden drop in the mercury and the gloomy prognostications of blizzards by Rev. Irl Hicks, for the laying aside of the sun-kissed straw sailors. The straws with today's weather are decidedly unconventional, and, like "the last rose of summer," they are left blooming alone.

River Traffic is Falling Off

River traffic has fallen off greatly during the past few days, although several boats are still plying on the lower Otonabee and Rice Lake. The boats with Tug until the river freezes over. Lockmaster Collins says this has been one of the busiest seasons for several years.

DO NOT CARE TO TAKE CASE

County Police Magistrate Edmison received a communication from Messrs. Joyce, J.P., and Mathieson, J.P. Havelock, yesterday, asking him to go to that town on Monday to try a case which the above gentlemen do not feel competent to handle.

Laymen's Banquet to be Held on October 24th

A meeting of the committee in charge of the laymen's banquet to be held in connection with the Presbyterian churches in the city, was held last night, when further preparations were made. The date of the function will be Thursday evening, October 24th, and it will be held in St. Andrew's hall. As has been previously announced, the speaker of the evening will be Rev. J. A. MacDonald, editor of the Toronto Globe, and his subject will be, 'The Laymen's Movement in the Church."

There will likely be several other speakers, but full arrangements in regard to this part of the programme have not yet been made. At last night's meeting programme and entertainment committees were appointed and they will complete all details. There will be a musical programme to be provided by local talent. The catering will be done by a local caterer and tickets for the banquet will be put on sale at once.

Mr. G. M. Roger will be chairman of the evening and the banquet promises to be a great success.

The committee met last night at the Y.M.C.A.

Jack Winchester, the Famous Goal Tender, is in the City

Representing a Toronto Firm at the Local Fair—Will Play in Winnipeg Next Winter—Thinks Idea of Professional League in Ontario is Good One.

Mr. Jack Winchester, the celebrated professional goal keeper, is in the city as advertising man with the Florida Orangeade Company, which has been granted a concession in the main building at the exhibition grounds. He will be here until the close of the fair.

"Winny" says he will not play with Pittsburg this year, but will be the man in the nets for the Winnipeg seven. He appears to be in the best of health and says he enjoys doing the fairs. He has covered considerable territory this year in the interests of the company he represents, taking in the principal western fairs. He paid a call yesterday to his old friend, Mr. Fred Whiteroft, whom he regards as a "top liner" in the pursuit of the elusive disc.

He has had good offers to play in Portage La Prairie, Pittsburg, and other towns in the big league, but has made up his mind to go to the Prairie city for the coming winter. "Winny" has figured some in hockey circles since he wore the wore the crimson and white for Belleville, when the team of that place and the Peterborough seven used to have such warm tussels, but he admitted that he never played such a game in his life as he did when the locals journeyed to Belleville in a brave but a vain attempt to win the round from the puck chasers of the southern hamlet.

He is of the opinion that the idea of having a pro. league in these parts as a good one, and thinks it could be made a success. He said the International League this year would have pretty much the same talent as it did last winter.

Many of Mr. Winchester's old friends will be glad to renew his acquaintance, and no doubt a large number will take the opportunity of shaking hands with him when they visit the exhibition.

Some Changes in Time Table

Will go into Effect on G.T.R. on Monday Next

The fall time table of the G. T. R. will go into effect on Monday next, September 30th. There are several changes of importance.

The afternoon train which leaves here at two o'clock for Belleville, will on Monday depart at 1.50 o'clock—ten minutes earlier.

The evening train which left here daily at 5.40 for Lakefield and return will be cancelled.

The train which departs at 11.55 a. m. for Lakefield, will after Monday steam out at 12.20,—25 minutes later.

The morning train for Port Hope will leave at 8.30 o'clock, instead of 8.35 as at present. This service will be continued, as it has proved a great convenience.

The public is cordially invited to note the foregoing changes.

Launch Owners Form Association

Officers Were Elected at Last Night's Meeting

At the meeting of launch owners held last evening, the organization was perfected and officers elected. The body will be known as "The Launch Owners' Association," the word Peterborough being left off, as it is proposed to enroll in the membership, those owning craft on the upper and lower lake waters. The objects of the Association will be brought to their attention. The following officers were elected:

Pres., Dr. T. N. Greer.
Vice Pres., W. H. Maldrum.
Sec.-Treas., H. Wareham.
Executive Committee, Messrs. A. E. Dixon, R. Gordon, T. H. Glover, G. P. Preen and J. Butcher, who will act in conjunction with the officers.

GENERAL NOTES.

The children are enjoying a half holiday today, and are present at the fair in large numbers.

President Leary is an exceptionally busy man, but he is equal to every demand made upon his time and attention.

Supt. Bennett was kept on the jump today. He was here, there and everywhere, and was most obliging and attentive to all.

Secretary Hall's office was a lively place this morning. The entries more than poured in and Mr. Hall had his hands full.

The display in the main building is away ahead of last year. Roots, grains, vegetables, dairy produce, are all well represented.

All the tents on the grounds—and there are many of them—were erected by J. J. Turner & Sons.

The Midway is a place of unusual interest. There is everything to amuse and beguile the visitor.

Mr. O. Carver, of North Monaghan, has a fine display of vegetables and fruit in the main building. He has also on exhibition twelve stalks of fodder or ensilage corn which stand ten feet four inches in height.

Mr. Carroll of Springville, has on view, several fine, well developed large sugar beets, and six long red mangold wurtzels—the largest ever seen in Peterborough.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS

LANG & MAHER.

Lang & Maher are clothiers. Everyone knows that they are good, live, progressive, wide awake clothiers—in whom the people have confidence. They give satisfaction all the most reasonable prices if the wearer is not satisfied, his money is promptly returned. The proprietors of the now widely known "Daylight Store," have an excellent and attractive display in "The Clothing Palace," located near Secretary Hall's office. Mr. J. T. C. Lang and Mr. Geo Wesley, are in charge. The representation of Sovereign Brand, Fit-Rite and Northway garments, is a most complete one. All these suits and overcoats, fit, wear and look well and good value is given for the money. Lang & Maher had 58 signs conspicuously displayed on the grounds. They are enterprising and progressive and have been warm friends of Peterborough's big fall fair. Visit "The Daylight Store," 409—411 George-st. and you will be heartily welcomed.

THE ROY STUDIO

Peterborough fair would not appear natural if it was not for the splendid annual display made by Mr. R. M. Roy, in the south east corner of the main building. Mr. Roy this year certainly makes a creditable and nicely assorted exhibit of the highest grade photographic work, in all its branches. It is not an exhibit gotten up for special purposes, but pictures, taken at random, from his splendidly equipped studio on Hunter street. Mr. Roy has been eleven years in business, and is the oldest established photographer in the city. The Roy studio is known far and wide for its artistic treatment, superb finish, delicacy of outline, faithfulness to detail and originality of conception. Mr. Roy is the author of the duo portraits showing a large and small picture of the same person, on the one card. The Roy studio work abundantly speaks for itself, while the studio is one of the largest and best appointed in Canada. At the exhibition, attractive, large size and beautifully framed photographs are shown of St. John's church choir, C. G. F. toolmakers; also several frontides of the Stony Lake and Chemong regattas, enlarged from the original photos. There are also two fine pictures—one of the district managers of the Canada Life, and the other, all the representatives, taken in a group at Mr. A. L. Davis' cottage at Stony Lake. A photo taken recently of Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, is so admirable in all respects, that it was chosen at the Canadian Photographers' Association, by the Art Committee of Toronto Fair, for a place in the art display at the big national show. A photo size 14x17, of a bride, is an elegant piece of work. There are also pictures of a laughing child, and many other happy subjects. The detail work in all of Mr. Roy's productions, is most striking. Visitors to the fair are welcome to the Roy studio, Hunter street. They should see Roy's famous souvenir postal cards, kodak supplies, picture framing, etc., which are also special departments.

SAW MILL MACHINERY.

An exhibit that attracted a large amount of attention, and interest, both from its mechanical and novel features was that of E. Walter Greene, manufacturer of shingle, lath and saw mill machinery, engines and pumps. Specimens of their combined lath mill and bolter, Nos. 1 and 2, wood sawing machine, shingle machine, shingle saw jointer, shingle packer, wood and iron pumps and plough points were shown. The machines were set up and running, power being supplied by one of their gasoline engines. The machine that was of most interest to visitors of a mechanical turn of mind, was the combined lath mill and bolter, which is admirably adapted for converting small logs and slabs into good marketable lath and pickets, etc. Being protable the machine can be taken into the woods and lath manufactured direct from the round logs.

The farmer found a machine greatly to his liking in the wood sawing machine, which is a great improvement over the old style of wood sawing machinery, making this part of the farm work a pleasure. This firm make a specialty of saw mill machinery, and they certainly deserve great credit for their unique exhibit, which was arranged at great trouble and expense.

TURNER'S TENTS.

One of the first sights witnessed on entering the grounds, is the magnificent tent and flag display of J. J. Turner & Sons, the widely known tent, awning, sail and flag manufacturers. It is worth a long trip to witness the biggest Union Jack in the Dominion. This flag is 20 feet wide by 40 feet long. It was made entirely by Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, and in its construction 245 yards of all wool bunting were used. The flag is attracting much attention.

Messrs. Turner have also on exhibit three tents—a double hospital tent, a double consumptive tent, and a hunters' tent. All these are completely equipped. The double consumptive tent has regular doors and windows, ventilating flues and is entirely waterproof. It is 12 x 15 feet in size and has double sides and roof. Several of these tents have been sold to Stratford and other cities. It has a stove pipe hole, is nicely carpeted and the interior is neatly fitted up. There are iron beds and chairs in the tent, the arrangements and appointments being most complete. The double hospital tent for the isolation of contagious diseases has found a wide sale. The Ontario Government, the B. C. Government, many of the hospitals in Canada, as well as the City of Cleveland and other places have purchased these tents. The one on exhibition is 15 x 30 feet, and has an entrance porch. It is admirably laid out inside, and has accommodation for ten patients. There are double walls and roof six inches apart. Messrs. Turner & Sons also show a hunters' tent complete, and a visit to their excellent exhibit cannot fail to be a source of delight and instruction to all.

GRAFTON & CO.

One of the finest tents on the grounds is that of Grafton & Co., the high grade, union-made clothing house. It is 15x25, and inside are displayed garments that would tempt any man to dress well and becomingly when he can do so at such a small outlay. This firm are giving away menu books, scribblers, buttons, etc. The exhibit is in charge of Messrs. H. L. Conway, W. A. Goodes and Robt. Howland. The tent is very prettily decorated and the big fair grounds are covered with Grafton's signs. But a word about Grafton & Co's famous clothing. It is all made by the firm at its four busy factories—in Dundas, Hamilton, Woodstock and Brantford. There are seven big Grafton stores in the province, and the one in Peterborough is well worth visiting. Its size and stock will prove a revelation to any stranger, but it is, of course, a familiar haunt to all good dressers in this district.

CLARKE, THE JEWELLER.

F. Clarke & Son are experienced jewellers. They are the only exhibitors in their line at the fair, and a most creditable and artistic display they make in a pretty tent, 10x10, just west of the main hall. The tent is attractively arranged. In the centre is a fine silent salesman filled with gold and silver watches, which are sold at special prices to fair visitors. On either side of the silent salesmen are oak tables covered with genuine nickle alarm clocks, regularly sold at $1.25, which Messrs. Clarke & Son are disposing of at 69 during the fair. Messrs. Clarke also show a rare collection of diamonds, jewels and gold chains. A handsome gold leaf sign with the Canadian coat of arms in the centre is particularly striking. Messrs. Clarke & Son have a most complete store and stock at the corner of George and Brock streets. They do monogram, raised and engraved work, as well as all kinds of repair work in first class style.

Pickpockets at the Fair?

It is Reported That Police are After Several Suspects

Are pickpockets plying their trade at the Peterborough fair? It is understood that the police are shadowing several suspicious characters and it would not be surprising if an arrest was made before the day was over. P. C. Newhall and McDonald are at the grounds in plain clothes this afternoon, and have their eye on a couple of suspects and are trailing them closely.

A gentleman, who was at the C.P.R. station when the midnight came in last night, stated to the Review today, that three strangers came in on the train, who had the appearance of professional wadlifters. It is safe money that with two such able officers as P. C. Newhall and McDonald, on the grounds, the "picks" will find it difficult to get in their work.

Another Wreck; Six Reported Dead

Special to the Review.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 27th.—It is reported here that ten persons were killed and seven others injured in a wreck on the Pennsylvania railway at Duncannon, 19 miles west of here. The local passenger train, which left here at 10.40 a.m., ran into a freight train.

McWilliams vs. Dickson Company

Appeal From Report of Local Master to be Heard

Osgoode Hall, Toronto, notes today, contain the following of local interest;

McWilliams vs. Dickson.—Grayson Smith for defendant. A. R. Clute for plaintiff. Appeal from report of local Master at Peterborough adjourned for two weeks.

Question of Assessment

To be Taken up by Peterboro' Board of Trade

The Board of Trade, at its next meeting, will likely take up the assessment question. As is generally known, much fault is being found with the present system, and as the matter is one of vital interest to every ratepayer, it will be taken up by the Board of Trade. A meeting will be held early next month when the question will be discussed, with a view to ascertaining if an improvement can be made in the present system.

Children Given Back to Parents

At the close of the usual session of the police court this morning a juvenile court was held, at which the advisability of taking the two children of Hector Baker, and placing them under the direction of the Children's Aid Society, was considered. Mr. R. F. McWilliams appeared for the Baker family, and Mr. E. L. Goodwill was present on behalf of the society. The children were given back to their parents.

While it was shown in the evidence of some witnesses that Mr. and Mrs. Baker at times got intoxicated, on the whole they behaved very well. Their home was always clean and the children were properly clothed and fed. It is thought that henceforth both parents will do better. The children will go to school all the time.

Pinned Beneath Load of Cord Wood

Neil Wilson of Kinmount Terribly Injured in Runaway

Pinned helpless to the ground with a load of wood on top of him and badly injured by being run over by his waggon, Neil Wilson, a young married man, living in Kinmount, son of ex-Reev eWilson, of Somerville, was in a terrible predicament yesterday morning at Kinmount. He had been hauling wood and when going down Forester's hill a few blocks of wood fell off, and the horses became frantic, finally upsetting the wood on the unfortunate driver. A wheel of the waggon passed over his body. When taken out the man was in a precarious condition and a doctor was called and attended him. The extent of his injuries are not known as yet, but fears are expressed for his recovery, the injuries being for the most part internal.

The victim of the dreadful accident is married and has a family of three or four children. The entire neighborhood is in the deepest gloom over the accident.

Free Delivery Service Was Commenced This Morning

There Will be Three Deliveries—Work of Dupty Supt. Durston in This City at Last Completed

The long looked for free postal delivery system has at last been inaugurated in Peterborough, and at 7.30 this morning the postmen delivered the mails for the first time. All the men were on hand sharp on time, and covered their districts with accuracy and quickly. Mr. R. B. Durston, the Deputy Superintendent of Post Offices, who has been here for some time superintending the work in connection with the system, is well satisfied with the way everything has proceeded and says the men are more intelligent than the average mail carrier recruits.

A complete census of the city has been taken, and the names and addresses of corresponding members of different families in the city are known.

THREE DELIVERIES.

There will be 3 daily deliveries taken, one commencing at 7.30 a.m., and one at 1 p.m., which include the entire city. The whole staff of carriers will be employed in the distribution of the mails at these deliveries. At 10 o'clock in the morning there will be a delivery conducted by three men to the business section of the city.

The 7.30 a.m. distribution of mails will include those from the C.P.R., midnight, and from the 5.20 p.m. and 9.05 p.m. G.T.R. trains, and the 8.10 a.m. C.P.R. At 10 a.m. the mails from the 7.10 a.m. G.T.R., known as the Belleville train, and from the 8.20 a.m. G.T.R., known as the Port Hope train, will be delivered, in the business section of the city. The 1 a.m. delivery will be the distribution of mails arriving on the 11.10 a.m. C.P.R, and the 11.45 a.m. G.T.R. trains from Toronto.

The system of city mail delivery has been fully described in several different articles in previous issues of the Review

The postmen have some peculiar experiences during the discharge of their duties and some citizens do not seem to recognize the nature of their mission.

One was taken for a seller of mining stock, and others have been taken for agents, collectors, etc.

Ferrozone Adds Vigor and Strength to the System, Purifies and Enriches the Blood, Vitalizes the Nerves and Assures Permanent Good Health.

Let your fight for health begin now, before you feel any warning of physical collapse.

Your whole system needs a thorough cleansing. Likewise, the blood should be purified, made rich and nutritious.

The one cure for that tired, drooping feeling is Ferrozone, the acknowledged king of all tonic medicines.

To restore your appetite you need Ferrozone, certainly you do.

You need it to restore your nerves and to enrich your depleted blood.

The strongest reason why you need Ferrozone is because it will build up your run-down system and make you well.

It's because we know Ferrozone is absolutely certain to cure that we urge everyone in poor health to use it. If depressed, tired, nervous, sleepless, Ferrozone will make you cheery, bright and happy, because it will make you well.

FERROZONE
A Good Appetizer.

MR. AUBREY B. TEMPLEMAN, of Mechins, writes: "I have found the greatest satisfaction in using Ferrozone, and consider it is the best tonic made. I was all run down a few months ago, and in a very miserable state of health. I took a few boxes of Ferrozone, and was surprised at the result. Ferrozone drove away that dull, heavy feeling, and put my system in splendid order. I am never nervous or sleepless, and have a hearty appetite. This is all due to Ferrozone, which I recommend in the strongest way possible."

FERROZONE
Gives Real Vigor.

MRS. NORMAN MACADAM, of Bridgeport, writes: "I am in good health to-day as the result of Ferrozone. Before using Ferrozone I was tired and miserable, lacked energy and ambition. But Ferrozone altered all that. It has built up my system, and given me more real vigor than I ever had before. Ferrozone is a good tonic."

Three Men Killed in an Explosion of Crude Oil

Big Tank Containing 20,000 Gallons Blown Up.

Three Men Instantly Killed — One Body Blown Hundred Feet Away —Another Lifted Into the Tank— Accident Caused by Lighted Lantern — Boys in Adjoining School Had Bad Scare.

New York, Sept. 28.—Twenty thousand gallons of crude oil stored in a tank in the Borough of the Bronx exploded with terrific force while three men were drawing oil from it early yesterday, killing the men almost instantly. The dead are James Cooper Unionport, James Reilly of Westchester, and Richard Smith of Van Nest, all of which villages are in Westchester County.

Cooper was employed by the officials of the Morris Park racetrack to sprinkle the track with oil in preparation for an automobile race. Reilly and Smith were his assailants. Early yesterday they went to the tank, on Protectory avenue, and began to fill a sprinkling cart with the oil. Reilly and Smith were sent to the top of the tank, while Cooper remained by the wagon.

It is supposed that a lantern carried by one of the men ignited some loose oil under the tank.

The explosion which followed tore off the top of the tank, and sent it flying into the yard of the Catholic Protectory near by, shattering many of the windows of the protectory.

Policemen who were nearby found Cooper lying near the blazing tank with his clothing afire. He died in a few minutes. One body, believed to be that of Reilly, was found badly burned in a swamp a hundred feet from the tank, and another believed to be that of Richard Smith was found in the tank after it had been flooded with water.

ANSWER UNSATISFACTORY.

Protest Sent to Sir Wilfrid Laurier on Jap Question.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 28.—The local Asiatic Exclusion League interprets the Government's decision to send a special commissioner to Japan as an attempt to delay the settlement question, and has sent this protest to Sir Wilfrid Laurier:

"The league endorses the exclusion of Japanese, unless specifically passported to Canada. The existing limitations having been already exceeded, we demand the exclusion of any further immigrants this year. We also feel that the matter has already been sufficiently investigated, and that the Government only needs to act. We demand exclusion by legislation, not limitation."

Redeemed Money.

The amount of money which the government is called upon to redeem in the course of the year is over $900,000,000. This redemption is either for the purpose of securing clean, fresh notes or to get change of some other denomination.

Seeing Women.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 28.—Rev. Frederick B. Hopkins, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, went home on Thursday night both convinced and "uncaged out."

All afternoon he had led a party of several men on a tour through many of the leading downtown restaurants, obtaining statistics on what he terms "boosing women."

Following are net results: Women seen in restaurants, 463; number of women drinking liquor, 269.

Drank Horse Liniment.

St. Stephen, N.B., Sept. 28.—Charles Coss, who has been drinking heavily for some time, went into Cone's Livery Stable on Thursday night and drank a quantity of horse liniment, supposing it to be whiskey.

The mistake was soon discovered, but efforts to save his life were unavailing, and he died at six o'clock yesterday morning.

Wireless Trolleys Next.

Well-Known Rancher Missing.

Medicine Hat, Sept. 28—A. S. Stronach, a well-known Irvine rancher, has been missing for over a week, and it is thought by many that he has committed suicide. Stronach was wanted here on a charge of stealing. When his absence became known mounted police were detailed to scour the country. Stronach has been heard to remark that he would take his own life if he ever felt himself "up against it."

Prince Fractured Skull.

Potsdam, Prussia, Sept. 28.—Prince Charles Gustave Von Thurn Und Taxis was accidentally killed at the regimental mess of the Prussian Footguards on Thursday night. It was "guest night," and the prince, who was a lieutenant in the 1st Regiment, lost his balance while sliding down a balustrade, fell to the bottom steps, fracturing his skull, and died almost instantly.

INVIOLABILITY OF MAILS.

Hague Delegates Cannot Assure Safety of Property at Sea.

The Hague, Sept. 28.—Ten reports concerning various proposals connected with warfare at sea were disposed of yesterday at the seventh plenary sitting of the Peace Conference.

The transformation of merchantmen into warships, without restrictions regarding the place where the change may occur, was approved.

The report on the question whether a period of grace shall be granted merchantmen belonging to belligerents, which are in an enemy's port at the opening of hostilities, was next adopted.

Reports in favor of the same laws and customs to govern naval, as well as land war, and the inviolability of the mails, were approved unanimously.

The report on the inviolability of property at sea, on which the vote was 21 ayes and 11 nays, less than the two-thirds vote required for its adoption, together with an expression of hope that an understanding on this question would be reached in the future.

The reports on blockades and the destruction of neutral prizes were read and set forth the impossibility of reaching an agreement on them during the sessions of the present conference.

PRISONER BROUGHT BACK.

Daniel Glass Arrested at Washington —Must Face Serious Charge.

Montreal, Sept. 28.—Chief Detective K. P. McCaskill of the provincial detective force returned yesterday from Washington, D. C., with a prisoner who had escaped from the jail at St. John, N. B., four years ago.

The prisoner was a young fellow named Daniel Glass, who was arrested four years since for nearly murdering his cousin and attempting to burn his house. Before he came up for trial, however, Glass escaped by sawing through the bars of his cell, and for a long time was never heard of. He, however, had a craze for military work, and the provincial detectives had descriptions of him sent to all the military headquarters in the United States.

About a couple of months ago Glass joined a hospital corps at Washington, and promptly proceeded to get into the trouble which led to his detection, and the provincial detectives were notified.

Chief McCaskill went to Washington, and after some difficulty succeeded in securing Glass' discharge from the United States army. As the prisoner waived extradition he was brought back to stand trial for his alleged crimes.

SHOOTS FRIEND, THEN SELF.

Mysterious Affair Creates Consternation in Montreal Club.

Montreal, Sept. 28.—In the main billiard-room of the Checker and Chess Club, East St. Catharine street, Miss Celanie LaPointe, a dressmaker, yesterday afternoon fired a revolver at the club manager, Ludger Houle, wounding him, and then shot herself in the head. Her life is despaired of.

Houle was fired at while his back was turned, and the bullet entered behind his right ear. He will probably entirely recover in a few days.

The parties had been friends for ten years.

Ten Years For Broker.

Winnipeg, Sept. 28.—J. D. Edwards was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary for the theft of $463 from Dr. G. C. Matheson, a dentist. Edwards sold shares of the Investment Protective Association to Matheson, which Magistrate Daly pronounced a fraud from start to finish.

Magistrate Daly said that Edwards was formerly convicted in Toronto. In that city the prisoner was in business as a broker. He signed a contract to sell many shares of stock with the Ashmola Gold Co. These shares Edwards sold, but the returns were not satisfactorily made to the company. Before he had been in confinement long he was pardoned by the Minister of Justice.

Only a Little One.

London, Sept. 28.—(C. A. P.)—The Manchester Courier says that Premier Bond has made a great fight on behalf of his country's laws, but it will be small consolation to him to know that, whether or not Sir Edward Grey's action be constitutionally correct, he would hardly have dared act so strenuously had one of the great colonies been a party to the dispute.

Eastport, L. I., Sept. 28.—Although unable to read or write, Llewellyn Jenkins, who died at his home here last night, left a fortune estimated at more than $100,000.

Poached on Pals.

Belleville, Sept. 28.—Tuoca Lectace, alias Joseph Plouffe, a young French-Canadian, charged with burglary and other offences, will know his fate on Monday.

Ursuline Nuns Expelled.

Mr. King Senior.

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—W. L. Mackenzie King, Deputy Minister of Labor, denies that he made the statement that Chinese have superseded the whites in sawmills in British Columbia because of their sobriety and efficiency.

Rudyard Kipling, by wireless from the Empress of Ireland, says his plans for his Canadian tour are not yet settled.

ENGLAND'S ROYAL HOME

HIS MAJESTY'S PRIVATE APARTMENTS AT WINDSOR CASTLE.

Where Foreign Potentates Are Entertained—Queen Alexandra's Treasure House—Famous "Long Corridor"—Unique Collection of Rare China—Envied by French Royalists—Drawing Rooms at the Castle.

The private apartments which are occupied by Their Majesties King Edward and Queen Alexandra when the court is in residence at Windsor Castle are separate and distinct from what are known as the state apartments, which the public is permitted to see on frequent occasions. The private apartments, says G. Aston, writing in The Woman At Home, lie beyond the state reception-rooms adjoining the Waterloo chamber and are entered by a massive oak door that moves easily and readily on wheeled hinges. This door opens on to a short corridor that has recently been converted into what is probably the most magnificent china closet in the world; it contains in electrically-lighted cabinets at either side of the marble walls some hundred sets of Sevres, Worcester and Chelsea china, each set having a long and interesting history of its own and each absolutely perfect.

Rare China.

The china closet opens on to the long corridor which runs the whole length of the private apartments, and the plan of its arrangement was mainly devised by Queen Alexandra. The long corridor is a treasure house of inexhaustible interest. Picture a corridor some 400 yards long, lined on either side with pictures, cabinets, chairs, tables, clocks, ornaments of silver and gold and every article the product of an artist famous all the world over, and replete with historical interest. Queen Alexandra spent several months planning how these treasures should be placed, and when the work of arranging these was finally begun a daily report of its progress was submitted to her. In this corridor Queen Alexandra sometimes entertains at afternoon tea a few guests who have the privilege of being on terms of intimacy with Her Majesty.

On the right of the long corridor lie the three rooms chiefly used by Queen Alexandra. These are known as the white, the green and the crimson drawing-rooms, from the coloring, that is generally observed in each. The white drawing-room is, perhaps, the most stately and magnificent of the three, and is used mainly when their Majesties are entertaining a large party of guests at Windsor. When foreign royalties are being entertained at Windsor Castle, it is in the white drawing-room that they "visit" Her Majesty. During the visit of a European sovereign to Windsor, the ordinary routine life of the court is considerably altered. The state apartments, which, at ordinary times, are never used, are occupied on such occasions by the royal visitors, who are "visited" there by the King and Queen; in their turn the royal visitors "visit" King Edward and Queen Alexandra, and it is on these occasions that the white drawing-room is chiefly used.

Best Liked.

The crimson and green drawing-rooms are the Queen's favorite apartments. From the former a lovely view is obtained, and it is Her Majesty's favorite room at Windsor. Though the crimson drawing-room is, of course, of considerable size and very beautifully furnished, it has, perhaps, a more homely appearance than the others, and contains more of Her Majesty's personal possessions than any other room in Windsor Castle. It was in this room that the Princesses Patricia and Victoria of Connaught took their first dancing lesson, in the presence of the Queen, and it is here that Her Majesty entertains her guests in the evenings when the party at Windsor is a small one. The green drawing-room is also used a great deal by Her Majesty, but it is more stately in appearance than the crimson drawing-room. It is upholstered throughout with green damask silk, and contains several beautiful cabinets filled with Sevres china. These were originally intended to be placed in the china closet, but the collection took up more room than it was anticipated it would, and the remaining portion of it was therefore placed in the green drawing-room. The great object of interest, however, in this apartment is the model of the figure of Louis XV., by Giradon, which stood in the Place Vendome in Paris. It is the only model in existence of that wonderful piece of work, and is at once the despair and envy of French royalists who come to stay at Windsor Castle.

Smallest in the World.

Mr. J. Beale, who lives in Kent, has reared a pony which he claims is the smallest in the world. It is only 18 inches high.

A Large Sponge.

A record sponge, ten feet in circumference and two feet thick, was found a few years ago by some sponge fishermen off the Bahama Islands.

Joseph Wynn, in jail at Portage la Prairie on a charge of murder, escaped yesterday, but was recaptured within an hour.

A Splendid Endorsement

for the shares of the HIGHLAND MARY GOLD MINES, LIMITED, is the fact that large blocks are being rapidly subscribed for at Cobalt, Haileybury, New Liskeard and Larder Lake. We are receiving letters from mining engineers and miners every day reserving large blocks of HIGHLAND MARY shares. These men have been over the ground, and in all of the letters we receive from them they say that the properties are even better than we represent them, and that HIGHLAND MARY will be the greatest and most profitable mines in the Larder Lake district. The fact that these experienced men are investing their own money in HIGHLAND MARY should be sufficient to satisfy the most skeptical. Miners employed on the nearby mines are all pinning their faith to the HIGHLAND MARY. They are buying all the shares they can. They realize what a splendid investment they are getting in buying HIGHLAND MARY at 10 CENTS PER SHARE. They know a good thing when they see it. Are you going to join them in making a fortune? Bankers and conservative business men throughout the whole country are now buying these for their investment. We strongly advise our clients not to hesitate, but buy to-day at 10 CENTS PER SHARE. We have only one million shares to dispose of at this price, and at the rate they are being absorbed they will not last long. The public will six months from now buy at One Dollar per share or more. We strongly urge the immediate purchase of these shares. We are placing our own funds in it, and we are willing to stake our reputation on the merits of HIGHLAND MARY.

HIGHLAND MARY

The properties consist of 30 claims of 40 acres each, making a total acreage of 1,200 acres. The claims are in the locality of the famous Reddick claims, the Proprietary Gold Fields, and the wonderful Blue Bell and Lucky Boys properties.

We have sent our own mining engineers to examine and report on the properties, we have looked exhaustively into the merits of the properties before offering the shares to our clients. We question if an opportunity like this will ever present itself to you again. We advise our clients to buy HIGHLAND MARY.

We advise you to buy all you can, you are bound to profit greatly thereby.

The stock of the HIGHLAND MARY is actually worth a great deal more money than the price we are asking for it. Our engineers figure that there is in sight on the properties of the Company gold equal to many times the par value of the total capitalization of the Company. All it requires for investors to make money is to have faith and confidence.

Could you visit the Larder Lake district and examine the properties, as we have done, you would not hesitate a single moment in placing every dollar at your command in the shares of HIGHLAND MARY at

10 CENTS PER SHARE

(Par Value, $1.00. Fully Paid and Non-assessable.)

All of the Directors of the Company are well-known and successful business men—not men that are simply interested in a mine—but men that are miners in every sense of the word, and who know how to operate, maintain and conduct a mine in a business-like manner, and who have been connected with the strongest and most successful mines in the Cobalt camp. These gentlemen are just the kind of mining men that investors should be glad to become identified with.

The mineral production during the current year has been remarkable as compared with former records, and it will be still greater in 1908. Remember, when you see the enormous advances in the prices of Larder Lake mining securities that are coming immediately, and that will continue for months and months, if not for years, that we told you to select one or more good stocks, and that a small investment in them will yield inside of a very short time enormous profits that would be impossible in any other industry.

We are not trying to sell stocks to uneducated or half-witted people. We are trying to interest legitimate business men in a proposition that we believe will turn out to be one of the greatest of its kind the world has ever known, and again we say, if you are not in a position to hold this stock until such time as the properties are developed, we do not want you to buy it. A mine cannot be developed in a day any more than a railway of 50 miles can be built in an hour, and no railway ever paid dividends or ever amounted to anything until the trains were running, and a mining property cannot amount to anything until the ore is being treated. People who purchase the stock of the HIGHLAND MARY cannot expect the Officers and Directors of the Company to pay dividends until dividends are earned. We do honestly believe, however, that within a year HIGHLAND MARY will be paying dividends to its stockholders. We are in business to-day and we propose to stay in it while there is any business to be had, and we can say to you now that in some years to come we expect to be counted among the financial houses that are spoken of and referred to in the highest terms by investors.

When we offered the first block of Blue Bell and Lucky Boys shares, we predicted that the Larder Lake district would be the greatest gold district in the world, and our predictions are being endorsed daily by eminent engineers arriving from the golden north with the beautiful specimens of pure free gold. These men fully endorse our predictions. The time is not far distant when the eyes of the whole world will be concentrated upon the wonderful golden north of New Ontario.

A year ago very few white men had trodden the trail through the Larder Lake district. Today one of the greatest stampedes the world has ever known has taken place. Capitalists, mining engineers and prospectors are now "hitting the trail" and hurrying through as fast as they can. Millions of dollars will be offered for some of the Larder Lake properties within the next few months.

HIGHLAND MARY

is positively the best buy that has been offered the public in mining shares. Don't overlook this opportunity. Big and rapid advances will surely occur.

The price of HIGHLAND MARY shares will TAKE A JUMP some of these days, and then it will be too late to buy them at the first issue price.

REMEMBER

The first issues of Blue Bell and Lucky Boys were greatly oversubscribed and many investors were disappointed in having their remittances returned. Highland Mary will be taken up rapidly. Act quickly and get in at bottom price.

Wire or telephone orders at our expense. Prospectus, with full information, containing application blanks, mailed to any address.

Highland Mary Gold Mines, Limited, is capitalised at $3,000,000, shares of the par value of $1.00 each, with 1,000,000 shares in the Treasury for development purposes.

OBITUARY

ROBERT SWAIN.

At the ripe old age of eighty-five years, Robert Swain, of Cavan, passed away on Monday, Sept. 9th, after only a weeks' illness. Deceased was eldest son of the late John Swain, who was reeve of Cavan for over twenty years. He was born on the farm on which he died and where he had lived his whole life, respected and honored by all who knew him. He one of the early pioneers of the township he helped to clear the forest and how out a home for himself and family in the primeval days. His kindness of heart and helpfulness to the neighbors in need were marked characteristics of the deceased. His wife predeceased him some eight years.

Two sisters, Mrs. Dundas, of London, and Mrs. Thompson, of Dalton, and one brother, Burk, of Mariposa, and three daughters, Mrs. McArthur, of Whitewood, Sask.; Mrs. Robert Hootan of Cavan, and Miss Jennie, at home, remain to lament his call home.

Mr. Swain was a staunch Conservative in politics and a Methodist in religion. The interment took place to the ninth line cemetery, followed by a large gathering of friends.

HOW DIVERS ARE TRAINED.

Schools in England — How Science Has Helped Them to Work In Sea.

The Admiralty trains divers, and every British warship carries at least one representative of the craft and frequently more. There are training schools at Portsmouth, Devonport and Sheerness.

One of the difficulties with which divers have to contend is probably not realized by a landsman, namely, that the greater the depth the greater is the pressure of water on the man's body and the greater the labor and exhaustion of working. The naval authorities limit their men to a depth of 120 feet. The greatest depth to which a man has descended is said by Siebe to have been 204 feet, and the pressure at that depth was extraordinary, namely, 88 1-2 pounds to the square inch. One wonders how any human being could stand it. Twelve fathoms, or about 70 feet, would be enough for most men. The ears and nose would probably begin to bleed and the pressure on the head would begin to be very serious. A practiced diver can, of course, descend much deeper without such unpleasant sensations.

His dress consists of more than a hundred pounds; it is of tanned twill and rubber and made in one piece, with a big opening at the neck. The helmet is of copper and screws on to the shoulders so tightly that the water cannot penetrate the joint. Air is pumped down to him by a pipe made of canvas and rubber, and outlet valves, which only opens outwardly, are placed at convenient places to permit the vitiated air to escape. These valves are extremely important, as by them the diver can regulate his supply of air.

In addition to this pipe the diver has a lifeline enabling him to communicate with his assistants above water. This was formerly done by a series of concerted tugs or jerks on the line, but the method is being superseded as a means of communication by the telephone, the wire being conveyed by the lifeline. He therefore touches the button and talks as if he were in the city.

Another great improvement is the use of the electric lamp, though in some West Indian waters a diver can see clearly for some distance. In other waters again the darkness is intense 20 or 30 feet down. The weight of the dress is extraordinary, and is necessary to enable the diver to maintain his stability. His helmet weighs considerably over a quarter of a hundredweight, and his boots, taken altogether, about as much, while if these be not sufficient, he claps lead upon his shoulders.—London Daily News.

IRELAND SEES THE KING.

His Majesty Receives Cordial Welcome on the Emerald Isle.

King Edward had an exceedingly warm and cordial welcome from his Irish subjects when he visited their country recently. The visit was not an official one, but arose from the King's desire to see the Dublin Exhibition, and to testify his interest in and sympathy with the aspirations of the Irish people for industrial development.

He dwelt upon this theme in his speech at the Exhibition, and gave further encouragement to Irish effort in the letter which he caused to be sent to the Lord Lieutenant. Ireland needs all the encouragement which can be given to her in this direction, and the King's practical help will impart a great impetus to the movement which aims at an agricultural and industrial revival. It is notable that there was no overt manifestation of party feeling during the brief tour, and that no discordant note was sounded. On the contrary, the King was greeted everywhere with loyalty and affection, which indicated that, sadly torn by faction though Ireland may be, its heart is in the right place.

Donkeys in Australia.

Donkeys are at a discount in South Australia. The Government recently found that two thousand of them were running wild on crown land. It was decided to sell them by auction in one lot, the purchaser giving an undertaking to capture them, and the Government giving him a permit for three months to enter on the crown lands for the purpose. The chances of capturing the couple of thousand wild asses did not appeal to the average speculator as a business proposition, but a sporting Irishman secured the whole lot with a bid of $51. He proposes to construct long lines of fences gradually converging into trays. Donkeys are not the only nuisance in South Australia. Foxes are also becoming a plague, and the Government has just paid $5,675 in bonuses for the destruction of 7,712. Foxes, like rabbits, were originally imported to provide sport for Australians.

The Fire Drill.

The chark or fire drill consisted merely of a piece of soft, dry wood with a hole drilled in the centre, into which a rod of hardwood, ash or oak was placed and caused to revolve with rapidity, either by the hands or by a cord passed round it and pulled or slackened at each end alternately.

J. Barlow Mis been committed for trial at Moose Jaw, on a charge of attempting to poison a harvest hand.

KING VISITS CARDIFF

NEW DEEP WATER DOCK OPENED FOR LARGE SHIPS.

Remarkable Growth of South Wales Port—Has Grown From Village to Wealthy City — His Majesty Bestows Honor of Knighthood Upon Workingman Mayor—Story of the Great Dock.

The King recently set the seal of his approval on another phase of the remarkable development of Cardiff. The South Wales port has a record of phenomenal growth. In less than 70 years Cardiff has sprung from the status of a progressive village to that of a great, wealthy and remarkable city. Its municipal life is notable for enlightenment and enterprise, and the spirit which animates its citizens gives it a foremost place among the world's communities. It was, therefore, only in accordance with the best traditions of the monarchy that King Edward should visit this part of his dominion, and by his presence encourage his subjects in pursuit of the objects which they have in view. The new dock was essential to the development of Cardiff, and is the coping-stone of the wonderful edifice of engineering skill which has made it so important in maritime commerce. Cardiff's record in the last three generations is wonderful; but the future, no doubt, has further triumphs in store for the metropolis of South Wales. The King's act in knighting the workman Lord Mayor of Cardiff was characteristic of His Majesty, who disregards class distinction in honoring public service.

Sir William Smith Crossman, the second Lord Mayor of Cardiff, who recently received the honor of knighthood, is Devonian by birth, having been born at Tavistock in 1854. He was the eldest of the eight children of Mr. John Crossman, a "captain" of a copper ore mine. Having served his apprenticeship as a stonemason in some granite works near Gunnislake, Cornwall, he became engaged on some public works. In 1884 he came to Cardiff to take part in the construction of the Roath.

For years he has been prominently identified with trades unionism in South Wales. A member of the Cardiff Board of Guardians, he was elected to the Town Council five years ago, and now acts as chairman of the Property and Markets committee.

The opening of Alexandra dock marks a new era in the history of the Welsh coal trade, which owed its inception to the second Marquis of Bute.

Last year 45,000,000 tons of coal were turned out, and the congestion of Cardiff docks was so great that many vessels had to wait quite a week before they could secure a berth under one of the loading tips. This produced an agitation among Cardiff shipowners and coal exporters for the completion of the new dock.

The Alexandra dock has a greater depth of water over the sill than any of the other Bute docks, and is designed specially for the accommodation of the large type of vessel. The length of the dock is 2,550 feet, and the width 600 to 1,000 feet, and there is a quayage of 6,700 feet.

The most important of shipping appliances is the Lewis Hunter crane, of which Sir Wm. Thomas Lewis is joint inventor. Half a century ago it would have been regarded as splendid work to ship seven hundred tons of coal into a vessel in one day. Now, by using the Lewis Hunter cranes, as much as ten thousand tons can be put into one vessel in the course of 24 hours. Often six hundred tons of coal are tipped into a vessel in an hour.

Queen Alexandra as Gardener.

Her Majesty Queen Alexandra has very pronounced taste in gardening. At Sandringham there are several very pretty and interesting gardens laid out after her designs. One consists of South Africans flowers only, brought back to England by several of her soldier friends after the Boer War, among them being many lovely specimens of the lilies and white roses that thrive even on the arid veldt. Another garden is of wild flowers only, another of violets, and in this plot are some fine roots of purple violets sent to the Queen by the late Czar. In the violet flowering season, wherever she may be, at home or abroad, a big bunch of "Czar violets" is sent daily to the Queen.

A Smugglers' Retreat.

An old smugglers' cave has recently been discovered on a moor near St. Austell, Cornwall. This cave is about twelve feet long, six feet high and five feet wide. There is a seat inside, roughly cut out of granite.

Double Sunset.

Percival Spencer, in an account of a balloon ascent from Hucknall, says that a peculiar effect was the double sunset which was observed, the sun seeming to set twice as the balloon rose and fell alternately.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

A JAUNTY EFFECT IN PLAID SILK

The three essential factors in the success of the separate waist are good style, fine quality of material and general adaptability to any odd skirt that one may happen to have. In the pretty blouse here illustrated, which is attractively developed in one of the tartan silks that are to be so much in vogue for the next few months, these important characteristics are pleasingly combined. Owing to the neat adjustment, with the rakish turn down collar, the waist will prove especially becoming to the wearer of the plump and youthful type. The tie is not included in the pattern, but a pretty finishing touch to the ensemble. The breast tuck, outlined with velvet ribbon, which extends from shoulder to belt on either side of the waist, lends it unique distinction. The narrower tuck each side of the centre front and back, the latter concealing the closing, add apparent slenderness to the figure. The sleeves may be made in either full or three quarter length. Any of the medium silks, or any supple wool or silk fabric suitable for blouses for developing this design. For the medium size 3 3-4 yards of 27 inch goods will be needed, with 1 3-4 yards of velvet ribbon for trimming.

6962.—Six sizes, 32 to 42 inches bust measure.

The price of this pattern is ten cents.

Attendance Was Largest on Record; 7,000 People at the Exhibition

Receipts Yesterday Totalled About $1,000—Splendid Races and an Excellent Programme Before the Grand Stand--Over 2,600 Entries in all Departments --Interesting Notes of the Big Fair.

YESTERDAY'S RECORD
Attendance	7,000
Receipts	$1,000
Entries	2,500
Membership	500

To say that the fifth annual Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is a success is putting it mildly. It is the best fair that Peterborough has ever held, and President Leary, and, in fact, all the officers, are thoroughly satisfied with the results. They worked hard and faithfully, and it is indeed gratifying to see their labores crowned with such success. The second and most important day saw a much greater crowd than turns up even on circus day. Fully seven thousand people were in attendance. From early morning until late in the afternoon the cars to the exhibition grounds were literally jammed with people going to the fair. The service of the street railway company was excellent, and nothing but praise for them was heard on all sides. The company evidently had anticipated great crowds, and several extra cars handled them most satisfactorily. The crowd started for the grounds early in the morning, and especially out-of-town visitors to the exhibition spent the whole day at the fair. The number of out-of-town visitors was large; all trains on both C.P.R. and G.T.R. into the city yesterday carried hundreds of exhibition guests. A half holiday in all the city schools gave the children an opportunity to visit the exhibition, and they certainly were well represented. The Peterborough Industrial has five hundred members, and each one is entitled to four admission tickets. It is estimated that there were 5,000 paid admissions. In neighborhood of $1,000 is the total of the cash receipts at the gate, and entrance to the grand stand. Secretary Hall was kept exceedingly busy all afternoon receiving the cash of the ticket sellers. The fair certainly broke all previous records, and not even the weather man marred in any way the success of the day. Although the weather was threatening looking all day, the rain kept off, and the crowds were not lessened by the cloudy appearance of the sky. The atmosphere was not too cool, but just suitable for a fall exhibition.

POULTRY SHOW.

Mr. D. C. Trew, of Lindsay, who judged the poultry, stated that he never saw a better exhibit than was shown yesterday. Several were heard to speak in complimentary terms of the excellent showing. The poultry attracted a great many interested ones and the birds were greatly admired.

CATTLE AND HORSES.

There were probably not so many entries of cattle and horses as the directors would like to have seen, but this probably due to the fact that this has been a poor year for cattle. The lack of good pasture is the cause of the animals not being in as good condition as in former years, and the farmers did not care to show them. The cattle and horses that were shown were fine, and were the subject of much favorable comment.

THE MAIN BUILDING.

This was the rendezvous of a great many, and especially the ladies. The building looked beautiful. There was shown dairy products, grains, roots, vegetables, bread, honey, etc. Fancy work, photography and works of art were also displayed. The J. M. Greene Co., F. R. J. MacPherson, Melagama and Johns tea, all had exhibits in their special lines.

MANY TENTS.

Many more tents are seen on the grounds this year than ever before. The tent exhibit of J. J. Turner & Sons attracted a great deal of attention, as did also the exhibit of machinery by G. W. Greene. From the exhibits of Grafton & Co., and Lang & Maher souvenirs were handed out, the latter firm giving away many thousand of yard rulers.

THE MIDWAY.

The amusement section consisted chiefly of palmists and fortune tellers, and many were they who consulted them on matters of great importance. They revealed the past and future for the small sum of one dime. There must have been ten of this class on the grounds. Mr. Charles Brownlee conducted automatic vaudeville machines. The usual number of knife and cane boards, throwing at the dolls, striking out Kelly, etc., did a rushing business and helped considerably to separate man and his money.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS.

Among the distinguished visitors to the Peterborough fair were Messrs Johnson Ellis, Shannon and Byrne, directors of the Lindsay Industrial Exhibition. They expressed their great pleasure at being present and were delighted with the excellent exhibits.

This is the last year the directors have the present grounds in the vicinity. Next year they will either have to again lease them or seek new quarters.

SPEEDING IN THE RING

The speeding in the ring events were fast and interesting. The horses in both the 2.22 class and 2.40 class showed excellent form, and this combined with the splendid condition of the track, made the events particularly satisfactory.

Starter J. Watson, of Toronto, is one of the most efficient and business-like officials that ever handled a bell here and had little difficulty in getting horses away for good starts. The judges were Messrs. Fred Peake, Campbellford; A. Rountree, and R. J. Munro.

Hazel Belle, Dr. Johnson's speedy mare, won all the heats in the 2.22 class and her driver, "Gillie" Kearns, handled the reins like a veteran. He had her under control at all times and in the last heat out-distanced all competitors. Joe Allen, with the exception of in the final heat, was a good second, and he and Dr. Mac had some close finishes for second money Lady Gothard got third place in the first heat, but came fourth in the others.

The first heat in the 2.22 class was well contested, and the time was 2.22 flat. Hazel Belle got away with a lead in the second heat and kept it all the way. She was followed closely by Joe Allen most of the way, but managed to win by a comfortable margin. Joe Allen came second with Dr. Mac third. Lady Gothard finished considerably behind the rest of the field. In the third heat Hazel Belle again led for the entire mile. Joe Allen and Dr. Mac came under the wire at the end of the half mile neck and neck. Hazel Belle walked away from the others as the horses struck the stretch and finished an easy first, her driver pulling her up and taking matters leisurely as she passed the judges' stand. Joe Allen, Dr. Mac and Lady Gothard finished in the order named. Time 2.26.

2.40 CLASS.

Black Cloud took the lead in the first heat in the 2.40 class and drew away from City Queen and Billy C, the former breaking in the first quarter. She overtook Black Cloud, however, and won out in driving finish Billy C. finished a good third. Time 1.14.

The second heat in the 2.40 class was one of the most exciting finishes of the day. City Queen led all the way and Black Cloud and Billy C were close seconds and thirds respectively. Time 1.10.

City Queen was never headed in the third heat. Black Cloud and Billy C. finished in the order mentioned.

Following is the summary for the two events—

2.22 CLASS.

Hazel Belle, Dr. Johnson, Peterborough	1	1	1
Joe Allen, W. Simpson, Lindsay	2	2	2
Dr. Mac, Dr. Broad, Lindsay	4	3	3
Lady Gothard, M. Connors, Peterborough	3	4	4

Time—2.22, 2.22, 2.26.

2.40 CLASS.

Flying Cloud, J. Kelly, Peterborough	2	2	2
Billy C., W. Leith, Millbrook	3	3	3

Time—1.14, 1.10, 1.10.

CARTER'S RACE.

Geo. Gauthier and W. Adlum were the only starters in the Carter's race, which was run off in a single quarter mile heat. Adlum jumped ahead at the start, but Gauthier soon overtook him, and led the dizzy procession down the stretch, winning by a couple of lengths. Time .50.

GRAND STAND PERFORMANCE.

This feature of the exhibition was one of more than ordinary excellence and the bill presented was varied and clever. Madame Victoria and her trained dogs were probably the most interesting feature of the programme. The various tricks the animals did were almost beyond comprehension, and twenty canines of different breeds all did their turns with a grace and intelligence that sometimes seems lacking in some of their human contemporaries in modern vaudeville. It was undoubtedly the best act of its character ever seen in this city.

George and Georgie, comedy acrobats and expert gymnasts, have a turn that covers a wide area. Their bounding billiard table act is very amusing, as are also their stunts on the revolving ladder. Their work on the double trapeze marks them as aerial artists of the first rank.

Bertha Phillips, the lady contortionist, was unable to attend the fair, but her place was taken by another performer in the same category, Maud Delora, and if "Bertha" is any better than her sister artist she's a whole show in herself. The work of Miss Delora is remarkable, and she is naturally endowed with an anatomy that enables her to twist her body into every shape conceivable from an ordinary back bend, to a fishing line knot.

Mr. Noble Graham acted as stage assistant while the programme was being presented.

During the afternoon Bandmaster Gliddon and his talented musicians furnished music in sympathy with the different phases of the Grand Stand performance.

FAIR NOTES

Fair weather.

The best and biggest in history.

The races were the best in years.

The countryside was represented by lads and lassies, galore.

The 57th band was all to the good. The music was great.

President Leary is wearing "the smile that won't come off."

Secretary Hall deserves great credit. He's a worker from the drop of the hat.

"Holding Barbs" was much in evidence in the grounds. A prominent business man was seen with his left hand within the dainty grasp of a lady to whom he had never been introduced.

P. S.—The lady was a palmist.

Pink lemonade wasn't in much demand, but the screw top pocket pistol came in for a lot of handling.

Lang & Maher gave away a thousand yard sticks. Did you get one?

Many country visitors stayed in the city last night and attended the performance at the Grand Opera House.

See this good old farmer smiling there
"The smile that won't come off."

Business was brisk at the hotels and eating places in the city. They all profited by the big fair.

Guess we got Lindsay beat after all. Next year's fair will be a whirlwind. Wait till you see.

The fair officials know how to use the press representatives. Thanks for the many courtesies.

Did you meet any of the people who say, "I've better stuff than this at home, but I don't want to show it." There were a few of them in evidence.

Did you hear any knockers? Sorry to say that a few of them still survive but they will no doubt die off rapidly now.

Next year a night show will be put on. President Leary says so, and thinks it would have been a big success this year. It would attract hundreds of city people.

"You're on the wrong side," shouted a farmer to the hired man who was getting the worst of a tug-of-war with a brown steer at the end of a rope. And that's what often causes trouble in life—getting on the wrong side of things, steers included.

"How fondly we turn to the fruit of the corn field,
The fruit that some people at times do dispise,
The old yellow pumpkin, the lemon-hued pumpkin,

Did you see them in the main building?

There were big beets, long beets, red beets, and a number of dead beats who managed to get in some way other than by the gate. But, like the poor, they're always on hand.

No man the worse of liquor was seen on the grounds That's something to be proud of.

This poultry show was something to crow over. It was "a whole show in itself," as one man remarked.

"Let's have a dog show next year," a barker fancier was heard to remark. The suggestion is a good one. Peterborough has many fine dogs even though the poisoner has been at work. The canines should have a chance to show themselves.

Next year all the industrial establishments in the city should give their employees a half holiday to enable them to attend the fair. It is done in other cities.

The Cordage Works were closed yesterday afternoon, and some other establishments too. That's the right spirit.

It was like old times to see the country people flocking in. They came from far and near, even from Lindsay.

C.P.R. STOCK WAS RATHER WEAK

New York, Sept. 28.—Canadian Pacific was about the weakest stock in the railroad list, selling down four points on out right liquidation. This stock has all along been selling out of line with other stocks on this side of border and we see no reason why it should not suffer a further decline indeed, we would not be surprised to see Canadian Pacific sell below 150 before another month comes around.

Liquidation has been begun through some houses with close Canadian connections, and it is believed that important holdings are coming in the market. U. S. Steel.—It becomes more and more apparent that insiders have been disposing of large amounts of steel, common, during the past month or two. It has been held very firmly within a few points of thirty and now that supporting orders have been withdrawn by important interests, we look for a further decline

Agitation for Floating Bridge Across From Chemong Village

Structure Would Connect North Smith and Ennismore Shores and Prove a Great Convenience—County Council Will be Asked for Grant.

An agitation is now on foot among the residents of Chemong Indian Village and the people of North Smith to have a floating bridge constructed across the narrows which ong Lakes. The bridge would extend connect Big Buckhorn and Chemfrom the shore at Chemong Indian village to the Ennismore shore and would be about 300 yards long. The structure would be a decided convenience to the people of North Smith desiring to go to Ennismore, Young's Point, Bobcaygeon, Peterborough, Lindsay and other points. At present a scow or ferry has to be used. It requires considerable effort to row a conveyance over, and the process is slow and tedious. A floating bridge, with a large swing portion could be built at a comparatively small outlay. The bridge would be patterned after the one at Gannon's Narrows, and the one across Chemong Lake at Bridgenorth. The Dominion Government, Peterborough county council, as well as the township councils of Smith and Ennismore, will likely be asked for a grant in the near future. The residents of Chemong Indian Village and vicinity, have taken up the question in earnest, and intend to press it to a speedy conclusion.

ELEMENTS DEALT UNKINDLY WITH CLOSING DAY OF FAIR

The Incessant Down-pour of Rain Resulted in all Events Being Called off To-day—Very Few People Braved the Tempest—Grounds Were Damp and Moisture Still Fell.

If the elements had been as anxious as the directors concerning the success of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, the receipts for today would have been, it is safe to say, over $1,000, but owing to the weather man's persistency with the sprinkling can, what undoubtedly would have been the most successful fair ever held in Peterborough, came to an untimely end. This afternoon, after a short discussion, the directors decided to declare off all the races and the grand stand performance and formally close the fair as the ticket sellers all withdrew from their wickets. Quite a number of people went down to the grounds on the street cars, however, despite the drizzling downpour of rain.

"We would have made a thousand dollars," said Secretary Hill, ruefully, as he gazed out of his tent and looked sadly towards the heavens. President Leary core up grimly, but is naturally very much disappointed over the oddisastrous finale of the exhibition. Vice-President Garbutt, Superintendent J. J. Bennett, Assistant Superintendent J. J. Bennett, and the other officials are all doing as well as could be hoped for.

Most of the judging was completed yesterday afternoon, and early this morning, and the only classes in which the awards were not made by noon, were in harness horses, heavy and light. The winners in these classes were decided this afternoon.

The Midway made little money today. Most of the people flocked to the main building to get shelter from the rain, and incidentally to get a sip of the warmth producing potions handed out by the two tea firms that had booths in the building.

The exhibitors have a disagreeable day for taking away their exhibits and and many have to drive with them great distance through the cold and penetrating rain.

The saying "well begun is half done" certainly applied exactly to the exhibition of this year, but, unfortunately half way was as far as the directors could get with their fair.

The crowds yesterday were most encouraging, however, and with even reasonably good weather the Peterborough Industrial Fair next year should be a credit to the city and a personal credit to the directors, who are to produce it. It is quite safe to make this prediction if the officials who have had charge of the fair arrangements this year will again be at the helm next season.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS

SILVER KING RANGE

The right corner in the main building was the brilliantly lighted exhibit of F R J MacPherson showing Silver King Ranges, Art Laurel Heaters and electric supplies. The Silver King Range combines many exclusive qualities, among them being the extra deep fire box, and the oven regulator. This range is the only one made that the heat can be taken off the top of the oven and circulated again around the bottom thus making the distribution very uniform. The Art Laurel Heater has a taper feeder, thus giving a larger body of coal and keeping a fire going longer. The feeder can be removes from the stove in two seconds, as it hangs on two lugs and a flange. The Art Laurel Base-burner is so constructed that by simply removing two bolts, all nickle parts can be immediately taken off. It's extra heavy fire pot can be taken out through the front door, an expert not being required.

U S CREAM SEPARATOR

The U. S. Cream Separator had a prominent position in the main building, and the exhibit, in charge of Mr. James Irwin, of Campbellford, was a constant source of interest to a large number of fair visitors. The strong points of this machine are its simplicity and durability. The first feature commends itself on account of the ease with which it is cleaned and the latter is a strong recommendation to the prudent buyer.

KITCHEN CABINET

The ladies were particularly drawn to the exhibit of C. C. McDonnell, agent for the Chatham Manufacturing Company, the magnet being the splendid kitchen cabinet that seemed designed to meet every conceivable want of the busy house-wife in her culinary work. Bins for flour, and sugar, apartments for all kinds of necessaries in connection with cooking and a table with metal top that it was evidently easy to clean.

The farmer was interested, at the same time, in the Chatham Fanning Mill, which has features intended, and evidently well fitted to clean thoroughly all kinds of grain.

Farm scales and the well known Chatham Incubator, were also included in Mr. McDonnell's exhibit.

CHOICE WHITE PLYMOUTH ROCKS

In the poultry tent, where quality in general was of a high order, the exhibit of R. W Lough, of Ida who showed a fine string of white Plymouth Rocks stood well up among the best, as his record shows; He won 1 and 2 cock, 1 and 3 hen, 1 and 2 cockerel, 1 and 3 pullet, which clean sweep speaks well for the quality of his birds, especially taking into consideration the strong competition.

J JOHN'S TEA EXHIBIT

The busiest spot in the main building was the roomy booth occupied by J. Johns' tea exhibit, where delicious cups of the beverage that cheers, but does not inebriate, were served freely to all who wished to sample the high-class goods handled by this firm. The booth itself was profusely decorated with flags and bunting and a large sign, telling whose exhibit it was. Numerous tables and chairs offered an inviting spot to tired sight-seers, who made use of them freely, and kept the corps of pretty waitresses as busy, as they could well be. The showing of tea was made attractive by the neat and handsome tins and packages in which it was put up, and the goods of Mr. Johns made many new friends during the exhibition. In conversation with the proprietor, he told the Review man the reasons why it pays to buy J. John's tea. First, because the quality is right, always uniform, and the prices right, too. Second, because the proprietor is a specialist in tea, and knows exactly the taste of the Canadian people. Third, because he buys for cash and sells for cash, he is able to give the best possible value, and fourth, because his tea never fails to satisfy the most exacting taste. The exhibit was a fine addition to the attractiveness of the fair, and cannot fail to be of great benefit to Mr. John's rapidly growing business.

J. M. GREENE MUSIC CO.

A fall fair is lost without music, and requires lots of it. It was forthcoming this year, as provided by the large gramophone in the booth occupied by the J. M. Greene Music Company's exhibit, and also by way of change, by the Edison phonograph. Mingled with the strains of music, was the gentle hum of the Davis' Sewing Machines, operated by experts, who took special delight in showing how simple the attachments were, and how unnecessary it was to have an expert to demonstrate their uses. The exhibit consisted of a full line of the Davis' Family Sewing Machines, also samples of the Manufacturing machines.

The leading features of the family machines was the vertical feed, the Davis' being the only one that will do the work with no underfeed. There being no teeth, it cannot pucker goods, and will not injure the finest fabric. Chiffon can be ruffled on this machine and will fell across a, fell and also bind and braid in one operation without guidance from the hand. It will make a scalloped plaiting, and sew it on at the same operation without hand guidance. These are exclusive features of the Davis', and give it a precedence over all other machines. The bearings are balls and rollers in both head and stand. It has automatic lifts, and all cabinet work is in quarter cut oak. The Greene Booth was surrounded all the time by an interested crowd.

CARRIAGES AND SLEIGHS.

In a prominent place on the grounds a large tent, held the exhibit of Messrs. Storey and Leary consisting of the high-class vehicles, made by the McLaughlin Manufacturing Company of Oshawa, the Cockshutt and Fleury riding and walking ploughs, the Success Manure Spreader, made by the Paris Plough Co., as well as a fine display of harness, robes, etc.

Among the many beautiful designs in carriages, the leader appeared to be a handsome run-about, with pneumatic tires and a good quality top. This comfortable and serviceable rig, has a highly finished piano box, covered at the back, a very strong gear, and springs, and is especially fitted for anyone likely to give a vhicle hard usage. A sample of the wood used in the manufacture of these rigs by the McLaughlin Co., is shown in the shape of a part of a pair of shafts, which have been put through a serious runaway, and come out so twisted and writhed as to almost resemble a rope, and it still held as strongly as ever, a break being evidently almost an impossibility.

Among the cutters, the favorite was a handsome one, finished in oak hand-rubbed and polished, and upholstered in rich plush. The wide seat is specially shaps for comfort, and the foot seat, has a high side that is a great protection against cold.

The Success Manure Spreader, has justly earned its name, and was subjected to a constant inspection by interested farmers. The sale of this labor-saving farm implement is growing rapidly during the last two years, and its use bids fair to become general in the best farming communities.

FAIR NOTES.

Mr. Fred Kennedy, Otonabee brother of Mr. H. P. Kennedy, of this city, exhibited a splendid two-year-old stallion. There was no regular class in which he could enter the horse but he was awarded a special diploma.

Mr. Baker, piano tuner for Heintzman & Co., will be in Peterborough in a few days. Any orders left at Lendrum's Photo Gallery, Charlotte St., will be attended to. 2d

On the Charge of Stealing Money From North Monaghan Farmer

Burton, who was committed for trial by Magistrate Edmison on a charge of stealing thirty dollars from the trouser's pocket of Richard Payne, North Monaghan, came up before His Honor Judge Weller this afternoon. Mr. R. F. McWilliams, is appearing for the prisoner, and County Crown Attorney R. E. Wood is conducting the prosecution.

ACQUITTED.

After the evidence had been heard, His Honor dismissed Burton, stating that he could not understand why the magistrate had committed a man on such evidence. Burton was honorably acquitted and walked out a free man.

You have Not One Reason for Not Using

Zutoo

Some people think that all headache cures are alike—that they all undermine the health, even if not perceived at the time of taking them.

Well, we'll admit that some cures do this, those, for example, which contain opium, morphine, antipyrene or chloral.

But this is no reason why you should not use Zutoo.

Zutoo Tablets do not contain one iota of any of the drugs above mentioned. They do not contain a single ingredient that does not come from Old Mother Earth herself.

One ingredient is soda—just old-fashioned soda that our grandmothers used to take to settle the stomach when they had sick headache.

There is not one ingredient in Zutoo tablets that is not approved by both the British and American Pharmacopoeias. And the world has no higher authority in medicine than these.

Your family physician, even if a personal friend, would approve of and prescribe every ingredient.

There is absolutely no reason why you should not use Zutoo.

If you suffer from headache there is every reason why you should.

Taken in time, two tablets will ward off a headache. Taken later, they will stop it in twenty minutes, and leave you feeling bright and well in both mind and body.

It is Harmless as Soda

The Natural Cure For Rheumatism

"Fruit-a-tives" remove from the blood the poison which causes Rheumatism.

Rheumatism means poisoned blood. The kidneys, bowels and skin should rid th system of waste matter. If either of these vital organs become weakened or diseased, the body cannot throw off this waste fast enough.

One of these body poisons is UREA, which is eliminated both by the kidneys and skin. If the skin action is poor—if the kidneys are inflammed—urea stays in the system—is changed into uric acid—carried by the blood to the nerves and joints—and causes Rheumatism.

"Fruit-a-tives" cure Rheumatism because they eliminate urea, by increasing the action of bowels, kidneys and skin.

This is the only possible way in which Rheumatism can be cured to stay cured. And "Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy in the world that completely eradicates the disease from the system.

"Fruit-a-tives" will cure almost any case of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia.

"Fruit-a-tives" are fruit juices in which the natural medicinal action of fruit is many time increased by the process of combining them.

Then tonics and antiseptics are added and the whole made into tablets. 50c. a box—6 for $2.50. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa. 111

New Methodist Chuch is Required in the South End

Matter Discussed at District Meeting of Methodist Church—Resolution in Favor of Such Action Passed.

A new Methodist church is wanted in the south end of the city. The rapid extension in that direction and the fact that a large number of families who belong to the Methodist church are settling in that quarter, has made it necessary that a Methodist church be built in that section of Peterborough.

The matter was discussed at some length at the financial district meeting of the Methodist church yesterday, and there was a unanimity of opinion that a Methodist church was needed in the south end of the city. A resolution was passed to this effect that in view of the rapid expansion in the southern and of the city, and the large number of Methodists residing there, the district meeting would bear with great satisfaction of any steps taken by Methodist to erect an edifice for the worship of God in that quarter.

At the present time, there is no Methodist church south of Char-street, so that the Methodists residing in the south end have a long walk to attend service. At the present time too, Charlotte street church is none too large to accommodate those who attend, in fact, it is not large enough to meet present requirements. A new church in the south end would relieve the congestion at Charlotte street.

CROP WILL BE ONLY FAIR ONE

Many Acres of Wheat Will Not be Cut at all

Mr. R. Percival Langford, of Wolseley, Sask., who recently returned to the West after spending the summer in this city, in a letter to his father, Major William Langford, says that in the wheat district around Indian Head there will be only about sixty per cent of a crop, owing to the cold, late backward spring, and the cool summer. There are many acres of wheat which will never be cut at all, as the grain will not come to maturity in time to be of any value.

Heating System of North Ward School

Mr. Duranceau Explains the Reason Why Classes Were Dismissed

In connection with a paragraph appearing in last night's Review to the effect that the furnace in the North Ward school was not working properly and that the classes in several of the rooms had to be dismissed, pending repairs, Mr. C. A. J. Duranceau who has the contract for installing the new heating system in the building, called at the Review office today and stated that the old furnace had been removed. A new system of steam heating is being installed. The boiler was not completed until yesterday and it is now being bricked in. As soon as the mortar dries the new heating apparatus will be in fine working order. Mr. Duranceau has a month yet in which to complete his contract, and the fact that certain classes had to be dismissed is no fault of his, nor of the furnace, as intimated. It is due solely to the fact that the boiler was not completed, and there was no means of putting on a fire to warm the class rooms. However, everything will be working smoothly next week.

On Street Car for First Time

Mr. Taylor of Hastings Was Never on Car Until Yesterday

A gentleman, Mr. Taylor, by name, who appeared to be between sixty and seventy years of age, and who said he resided in the vicinity of Hastings, was never on a street car in his life, until yesterday morning. He stepped on car 17 at the corner of Charlotte and George streets and said to the conductor, "When are you coming back?"

"We're just going down to the river, and then we'll come right back" was the reply.

"Are you the boss?" he asked.

"Yes," replied the ticket collector, "just step inside and take a seat."

"I never rode on one of them before," said the passenger. A little farther on he remarked, "They ride easy."

"I want to be able to say when I go home," he said, "that I have been on a street car."

He took in the trip to the river and back and apparently enjoyed it.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 28, 1907

MR. STRATTON'S AMBITION

A rather significant letter appears in this week's issue of the Lakefield News. It is intended to serve as a quiet tocsin to help Mr. J. H. Stratton secure the coveted Grit nomination for the Commons in East Peterborough and displace Mr. Finlay the present member. It is signed "Onlooker." Reading between the lines and putting two and two together the average reader does not have to delve very deeply before finding indications that "Onlooker" is endeavoring to sound Lakefield in the interest of Mr. Strattton.

Now, if that gentleman wants the Grit nomination let him come out boldly and and manfully declare his intentions of allowing his name to go before the convention. It is far better than inspiring anonymous communications and tentatively remarking "I do not know that he will accept the nomination as he is a busy man."

Yes, particularly "busy" just now feeling this way as to his chances of capturing the Grit nomination. As to whether he would "accept" the "honor," every one at all conversant with the trend of political events in the neighboring constituency knows full well that J. H. Stratton would "accept" it host hasts if he thought he could secure it. But he is shrewd enough to feel his way and tricky enough not to be thrown down if he can avoid it. Every possible influence, direct and indirect, that can be brought to bear on the situation, every string that can be jerked and every individual who can be worked are in evidence in behlaf of the candidature of the late provincial secretary. Almost everybody knows that Mr. Stratton wants the Grit nomination in East Peterborough for the federal parliament and wants it badly. The question is, can the scoure it? There is where the rub comes in. He is non persona grata with a large element of the party and the problem is how can he reconcile this element or outdo them in manipulating the party strings. He recognizes that many wires have yet to be pulled, but it must all be done cautiously. There must be no open ruction. On the surface a dead calm must to all intents and purposes prevail, and so "Onlooker" and other like anonymous contributions are likely to appear in certain papers of the East riding from now on to convey the impression that there is a general "demand" in the Grit ranks for Mr. Stratton as a standard bearer and to prepare the semblance of a stamp that the just the man required.

Here is the significant letter in question:

Editor of the News:—

I notice in your issue of last week a paragraph referring to the "growing feeling in Lakefield and its vicinity that Lakefield having made such rapid strides in advancement during the last few years and being easily the most important place in the East Riding of Peterborough should at the next nomination for the House of Commons have a candidate from this part." In this I quite agree with you. Norwood and Keene have their representatives and Otonabee more than its share and it is time Lakefield had a show. But why should the "News want a Conservative? Will it be reflecting any particular glory on Lakefield to have a defeated Conservative candidate, when it is everywhere believed that the Laurier Government will be sustained.

I would like to see Mr. W. H. Casement run and I believe he would obtain the nomination and more than that the election. But if Mr. Casement or some other of our worthy friends at Lakefield will not be a candidate then I would like to see Mr. Stratton the Liberal candidate. He accomplished a great deal for the West Riding and he knows how to go about doing anything required by his constituents, and if he accepted the Liberal nomination were it offered to him, he would be a vauable representative and would be sure of election. Now I will throw up both my hands for a Lakefield man, but if we do not get a Lakefield man then we want Mr. Stratton. I do not know that he will accept the nomination as he is a busy man but I hear his name mentioned as the coming candidate for East Peterborough.

We are readers of the Lakefield News and we do not want you to take sides in this matter other than to advocate a local man, then if we can not get a Lakefield man let us have the man nearest to us that will make a useful representative.

Yours truly,
ONLOOKER.

MAIL DELIVERY SYSTEM

Everything comes to him who waits and at last the system of street mail delivery in Peterborough has been inaugurated.

This morning the seven uniformed men started out on their rounds and by ten o'clock the city had been pretty well covered. It is not expected that the system will proceed without errors or delays. The public must be patient and allow for shortcomings until the carriers become thoroughly familiar with their duties and respective beats. Then citizens can do a great deal to help make the service a success by having their friends address all letters correctly to their street and number. Do not fail to have your house number in a place where it can be easily seen and a letter box placed at the side of the door, or a slit cut in the door, so that letters may fall inside. This will add materially to the convenience and rapidity of delivery. If a carrier has to ring the bell at every house and wait until the summons is answered there will be considerable delay. Again, many people may not be at home and as mail matter, which often cannot be shoved under the door, cannot be left lying around, the recipient will meet with many disappointments. It is hoped that letter boxes will be placed at every house. The cost is small and the convenience great. Do not condemn the mail delivery system. Any little difficulties will adjust themselves in time. The congestion and delay in the public lobby will be avoided. There will be no crushing delays and vexation of spirit. The system of house to house delivery of mail has not come too soon and, now that it is here, it is the duty of the citizens to assist in every way possible, to make the service a success. The tenders for numbering all houses will be opened on Monday next and it is hoped that the work will be proceeded with fastenter.

Peterborough now boasts of all the accessories of a great city—electric cars, fire alarm service, sewerage, waterworks, gas, electric light and mail delivery system. Progress is the watchword.

If Hon. Mr. Graham, the new Minister of Railways and Canals, wants to be a Minister, what is a Minister, he will have an opportunity of assuring the great Midland district, that the Trent waterway will be rushed to completion, as quickly as—well, as quickly, don't cher know, its political exigencies demand.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

Mr. Garvin States Some Facts Regarding Defunct Sugar Co.

Corrects Certain Misapprehensions That Have Gone Abroad in Reference to the Organization and Winding Up of the Company—While Under no Obligation to Pay Shareholders' Losses, He Expects to be Able to do so in the Near Future.

To the Editor of the Review:

Sir,—I have recently learned with surprise that there is considerable misapprehension abroad in the city and county, in regard to the defunct Peterborough Sugar Co., Limited, In justice to the undersigned will you do me the favor to place before your readers the following facts,—

1. The Sugar Company originated with Mr. T. E. Bradburn and Mr. A. P. Poussette. The provisional directors were Messrs. T. E. Bradburn, James Kendry, Thomas Hunter, Arthur Stevenson, and J. W. Garvin.

2. When I consented to act as a provisional director, I was under contract to go to Detroit, on the 1st of March, 1903, as Michigan State Manager for the Manufacturers Life of Canada, with a salary of $3,000 per annum, travelling and hotel expenses, an overriding commission on the work of my agency staff, and the usual renewal interest. This being so, I secured a written release from Messrs. Bradburn and Poussette, from any obligation to pay the company for the $1,000 of stock subscribed for by me, in the requisition for the charter.

3. At the first meeting of the provisional board, Mr. T. E. Bradburn was appointed president, and Mr. A. P. Poussette, secretary. The latter also acted as the company's solicitor, and the bookkeeping was done and capably done, in his office. Subsequently, Mr. Poussette resigned the secretaryship, and the Managing-Director, was appointed in his stead.

4. About two weeks before the time of my departure for Detroit, Mr. Bradburn urged me strongly to cancel my engagement with the Manufacturers' Life, and to accept this Managing-Directorship of the Peterborough Sugar Co., Limited, with a salary at the rate of $3,000 per annum, together with a small commission on the stock sold, sufficient to pay office and travelling expenses. Mr. Bradburn gave me distinctly to understand that if I refused his request he would persevere no longer in the flotation of the company, and he and I should have to suffer the loss of $3,000, which we had raised by a joint note and forwarded to the National Construction Company of Detroit.

Under such pressure I yielded, procured release from my engagement with the Manufacturers Life and accepted the Managing-Directorship of the Sugar Company.

5. Not a director had paid $1.00 into the treasury of the company, excepting Mr. Bradburn and myself, and that cash had gone to the National Construction Company, and not one bona fide subscription had been received from anyone else at this time of my appointment.

I was expected to sell sufficient stock to pay my own and other salaries, to pay the National Construction Company, to provide for the wages of the men in the beat fields, etc., and to attend carefully to the management of the company as well.

6. It was not intended by the promoters of the company, that the subscribers in the Charter requisition should be held liable for their subscriptions. So, after seeing members of the board, and the recently appointed head of the agricultural department, I started out to sell this stock, with a bona fide subscription list of $3,000 only,—T. E. Bradburn, president, $1,000; J. W. Garvin, managing-director, $1,000; Thomas Hunter, director, $500, and Dr. Jeffs, agriculturist, $500.

7. The original price of the Sugar Factory, to the company, in cash, stock and bonds, was to be $565,000. This sum was to be paid, from time to time, to the National Construction Company, Limited, of Detroit.

Within six weeks after I became managing-director, I forced the latter company to reduce this price to $450,000, and that without a single change being made in the specifications. It took two trips to Detroit to squeeze out $115,000 of water. Mr. Poussette accompanied me on the first trip, when the price was lowered to $500,000.

8. It has been assumed by many in Peterborough that the Sugar Company was wrecked by the bad management of the managing-director. Will they be surprised to learn that apart from the instructions given by the provisional board, the managing-director, took no definite action in conducting any part of the affairs of the company, until a committee, consisting of the president, the company's solicitor, and the managing-director, had carefully considered every detail, and decided unanimously. Hence if any blame attaches to the management, which is not admitted, apart from decisions of the board, it must fall equally upon T. E. Bradburn, J. W. Garvin and A. P. Poussette.

9. There would have been little difficulty in successfully floating the Peterborough Sugar Company, had it not been for the unexpected failure of the best crop in Michigan (due to excessive rains) during the years 1902 and 1903. This not only scared the capitalists of that state, but also discouraged Ontario capitalists. A year or two before, Wallaceburg and Berlin, had raised the necessary capital in Michigan and in Ontario, with comparative ease.

10. After months of hard, determined effort, with little success, Mr. D. A. Gordon, president of the Wallaceburg Sugar Company, was induced to undertake the construction of our sugar factory, and to accept this presidency of our company. He was then, as now, known as the Ontario Beet Sugar king. He had succeeded in Wallaceburg, and was confident he could succeed in Peterborough. All he asked the City of Peterborough to do, was to guarantee the company's bonds to the amount of $100,000, and not a bond was to be issued by the city until the factory was erected, and the machinery installed. He and others pointed out that the city would have $400,000 in buildings, machinery, implements, etc., as security, yet the bylaw was defeated. Had that bylaw carried, the city would not have lost $1.00, and a great sugar factory would have been constructed and in operation two years ago. These facts being so, is it fair to blame the company's management?

11. The defeat of the bylaw forced the company into liquidation. IN JULY OF THIS YEAR, THE LIQUIDATOR PAID EVERY CREDITOR IN FULL WITH FIVE PER CENT. INTEREST TO DATE. About a year before a large number of the creditors sold their claims for forty cents on the dollar. Why they did this, or what inducement to sell was held out to them, is not known to me. HAD THEY WAITED ANOTHER YEAR THEY WOULD HAVE RECEIVED EVERY DOLLAR DUE THEM WITH INTEREST, as above indicated.

12. The shareholders of the company are also to receive in cash, five per cent. of the face value of their stock.

13. When the company failed, notwithstanding, I had drawn out of the treasury, little more than half of my salary, and had gone into debt $1,000, in a vain attempt to save the company's credit, at once, unhesitatingly, I obligated myself to the amount of $3,500 to save lady shareholders from loss. All my savings out of salary the last three years have gone to wipe out these obligations.

14. While under no obligation, either legal or moral, to repay the losses of shareholders, yet, if financially able, as I expect to be in the near future, it will give me great pleasure to do so. No experience in life has been more painful to me than the knowledge that fellow citizens had lost money by taking my advice, or by having faith in my ability and judgment. Very truly yours,

J. W. GARVIN.

E. F. Mason & Co's lower store and is attracting much attention. "Gee, ain't that a whopper," remarked a small boy today. The squash weighs 170 lbs.

A TRUE STORY ABOUT A DOG

Allen Doone the Irish Comedian Had a Funny Experience

Allen Doone, the noted Irish comedian, who is, at present, starring in "A Romance of Ireland," and will appear at the Grand Opera House, on Saturday, Oct. 5th, was, before he adopted the stage, as a profession, an expert bicyclist, and held the world's championship for two years, winning numerous medals and trophies, which he prizes very highly. While training for a match, says the comedian, he started one day for a long jaunt on his wheel along a shady country road in Yorkshire, England, and shortly after starting he noticed that he was being followed by a very small, and very disreputable looking dog of the genus poodle, who just trotted behind the wheel, stopping when the actor stopped, and going on again, when his adopted master resumed his progress. After a bit the man and dog became quite friendly, and then the poodle frisked quite contentedly alongside the wheel barking joyously, and wagging his stump of a tail madly, whenever he favored by a word of a look by his companion. As the noon hour approached the comedian began to feel the pangs of hunger, which moved him to look about him for a place to dine. At last they arrived at a substantial-looking farm house, alongside of which was a small building bearing a sign which read "Horse Shoeing and Dog Clipping," in front of which lounged a good-humored appearing native, who, on being interrogated, agreed to furnish refreshment for man and beast. "That's a likely little dog, sir," said the native pleasantly. "Yes, he is," replied Doone. "Look all the better for a clipping," continued the man. "Yes, I suppose he would," said Doone. "Well, mister," ventured the well-meaning native, "if you have no objections, I'll clip him while you're a eatin' of yer dinner.' I have no objections," if you insist," responded the comedian. After a plain, but satisfying repast, Mr. Doone prepared to resume his journey, being joined at the gate by his thoroughly "clipped," and rather injured looking canine friend, who gazed at him reproachfully. "Well, how much do I owe you?" asked Doone. "About half a sovereign, sir," was the reply. "What! Isn't that rather a stiff price for a dinner," exclaimed Doone. "Oh, that indog's clippin' an' a cheap job too!" answered the native. "Why, what have I to do with the clipping of the dog," cried Doone, jumping on his wheel. "He isn't my dog," and, tossing the man half a crown, rode away.

New Officer for the Regiment

Mr. Gerald Rackham Will Hold Rank of Lieutenant

Mr. Gerald Rackham, late of the Queen's Own Regiment, Toronto, is joining the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers. He will hold the rank of lieutenant and will be a valuable addition to the officers of the popular corps. Mr. Rackham was accepted at a meeting of the officers' mess last night, at which Col. Miller presided.

Several other matters of business were also discussed. The captains of companies were instructed to send in at once the scores made by the members of their respective companies during the shooting done last spring. It is urgent that they should be returned at once, as the efficiency pay cannot be secured until this is done.

To-day's Market Prices Were High

Butter Sold at 30 cents—Few Persons on the Square

Despite the cold and disagreeable condition of the weather this morning, today's market was very good. There were very few waggons and buggies on the outside market, but upstairs the number of sellers and buyers was large. Prices soared rather high, and especially in some things the figures asked were considerably beyond what was demanded last Saturday. Thirty cents cents a pound for butter was the prevailing price for this family necessity. Some were satisfied with 27 and 28 cents, but these were few. Eggs are beginning to look scarce, and today twenty cents wa sthe ruling figure. Fowl was also in large quantities. Chickens ranged in price from forty to seventy-five cents a pair, while ducks went at from fifty to ninety cents a pair. Geese and turkeys were not plentiful, but what there were of them brought good prices, the former selling at ninety cents, and the latter at a dollar. On the outside market potatoes sold at $1.00 a bag, and pears at 25 cents per peck.

INDIANS WILL NOT TAKE TRIP

The excursion of the Chemong Indians to Georgians Island and Rama reserve in Lake Couchiching, which was to have taken place on October 3rd has been cancelled owing to the extremely cold weather and the report that the water in the canal near Kirkfield is low. The steamer Manita had been engaged but to-day it was decided to call the trip off.

The Tale of a Wyandotte Hen; How She Was Lost and Found

"The Tale of a Golden Wyandotte" or "The Mystery of the Hen Coop," would be suitable titles for a chain of events which culminated in a little episode at the Peterborough fair yesterday. It is not often that a hen comes into the limelight as the central figure in a matter of public interest, but then it must be borne in mind that this was no ordinary hen; it was a pullet of the Golden Wyandotte variety, of aristocratic birth and with feathers that glittered like unto the gold of Ophir. Furthermore the said hen had won numerous prizes at leading Ontario shows and last, but not least she was a Port Hope pullet. Whether that added or detracted from her value we are not going to say; Port Hope won that baseball championship.

To come back to the story, and commence at the beginning. Mr. J. H. Magill, of Port Hope, is a poultry fancier and makes a specialty of Golden Wyandottes. Last August, about the sixth of the month to be precise, Mr. Magill had a visit from a young man from a village not a hundred miles from Peterborough, who is somewhat of a poultry fancier himself and called on Mr. Magill with a view of purchasing some birds. In company with Mr. Magill the looked over the latter's poultry yards and while admiring the birds did not buy any. The visitor seemed especially impressed with a Golden Wyandotte hen, one of Mr. Magill's best and the winner of numerous prizes at leading shows. The visitor came back to Peterborough on the evening train and next morning Mr. Magill's prize winning Wyandotte pullet was missing. Of course he had suspicions as to where the bird had gone, but he laid low and said nothing. A short time later he was in Peterborough at a baseball match and told the tale of the missing Wyandotte to a poultry fancier in this city with whom he was acquainted and the latter offered to make a little investigation to solve the mystery. One afternoon he took a trip to the nearby village and being acquainted with the man who had visited Mr. Magill's yards had no difficulty in going through his poultry yard. Sure enough he noticed a pullet that answered to the description of the one Mr. Magill had lost. A closer examination showed that a numbered band on the pullet's leg corresponded with Mr. Magill's number, thereby leaving no doubt as to whom the bird belonged. The Peterborough man informed Mr. Magill of what he had discovered, but the Port Hope fancier still laid low. He took no action until he came to Peterborough fair yesterday. Strolling through the poultry exhibit he kept his eyes wide open and it was not long till he came across his Golden Wyandotte pullet. He at once saw some of the exhibition directors and just what happened is not known, but at anyrate the pullet was a passenger on the same train as Mr. Magill when he returned to Port Hope last night and is now feeding in his yards again. 'Tis said that the man who had the pullet on exhibition saw Mr. Magill going through the poultry department and obscured himself until he was sure the Port Hope man had taken his departure.

Needless to say Mr. Magill is thankful to his Peterborough friend for the assistance given in helping him to obtain his bird.

Drop in C. G. E. Stock Causes Shiver in Financial Arena

General Meeting Called Regarding New Issue in the English Market—Statement of the President of the Company.

A Toronto despatch says:

Canadian General Electric stock has once more become a bomb in the local market, its recent drop to 102 being a shiver to pass through the entire financial arena. Sales yesterday as low as 102 1-2 caused numerous private conferences between [illegible] of the day's transactions were reported to have been for the account of London shareholders, who had taken the stock when it was first put out on the English market and who found it difficult to [illegible] on the English Exchange.

The downfall in General Electric has become a matter of extreme importance in financial circles. The stock at one time sold as high as 235 and although there has been no reduction in the dividend, which is still 10 per cent., the price of the shares is more than cut in half.

Ugly rumors were afloat regarding the company in the street yesterday, but none of these could be confirmed. It is admitted that the company is heavily involved in debt to the Canadian Bank of Commerce. The current loans from the bank at the last annual meeting of the company were $1,112,983 and it is thought that this account has been increased since that time.

To pay off the bank and to provide working funds, the shareholders at a special meeting decided to increase the capital by $2,000,000 preferred stock and $1,000,000 common stock.

The original proposition was to make the preferred stock preferred, both as to assets and dividends, but at the meeting of shareholders this was changed to preference only as regards dividends.

RUMORS DENIED

Frederic Nicholls, the general manager of the company, has been in London the last few weeks in connection with financing the new issue and according to the opinions of local financiers, he has found it impossible to get British subscriptions to the preferred stock except under the original arrangement, viz., that the $2,000,000 preferred must be a first charge against the company or practically a bond.

A good deal of the common stock of the company was distributed at London over a year ago at about 110 a share, and considerable of the local holdings are said to have gone to that centre since that time.

W. R. Brock, president of the company, was spoken to last night. He said: "The rumors regarding the concern are altogether untrue. I have upwards of 1300 shares of the stock and am holding them for investment. Mr. Nicholls has cabled that indications for floating the new issue of securities are quite favorable, but the matter is not yet definitely arranged. I have the greatest possible confidence in the company and think it a shame that some people are endeavoring to embarrass so substantial an institution. I am informed that several Toronto brokers are advising their clients to sell their holdings for the purpose of buying the stock in at a low figure. The company is controlled by a directorate of substantial business men and the dividend paid has always been warranted by the earnings."

GENERAL MEETING CALLED.

Yesterday a circular letter was issued to shareholders notifying them that a general meeting has been called for Oct. 28 to authorize a by-law meeting the English wishes. To sanction this a two-thirds vote of all stockholders is needed. In making a request for proxies for this meeting President Brock points out that the meeting is to confirm a by-law passed by the directors to confer on the $2,000,000 of 7 per cent. preferance stock of the company a preference as to capital. He says: "With regard to the resolutions passed at the meeting of shareholders held in Toronto on Aug 15 last, authorizing the increase in the company's capital by the creation of $2,000,000 7 per cent. accumulative preference, and $1,000,000 common stock, your board beg to inform the shareholders that they had completed negotiations with a London financial house for the issue of the $2,000,000 7 per cent. accumulative shares. The solicitors however, for the issuing house have pointed out that the above mentioned resolution authorizing the increased capital does not, in their opinion, confer upon the holders of the new preference stock a priority as to capital, which is necessary to effect the sale."

ROGUE ELEPHANT'S WORK.

Human Life and Property Destroyed By Them In India.

Mr. Lloyd and Mr. James were camping in the vicinity of Mohergong Garden when one of their elephants, breaking his chains, made for freedom and to this day roams the Terai Dooars and the Mooroong with his jungle mates, writes the Terai, Bengal correspondent of The India Field.

For thirty years that and other elephants have been allowed to work their wicked will on human life and property unrestrained, and the tale of mortality has grown year by year till it is past bearing. About two years ago the Government offered a reward of 300 rupees for the destruction of Mr. Lloyd's runaway, which is now known as the club-footed rogue by reason of same malformation caused by the chain round his foot, which made it swell out. He is said to have but a single tusk. I am under the impression that the same animal is known by the name of "the Rooara rogue," and the number of his victims alone meant high, though I am certain that he is not the only offender.

Last September an old woman and her two young children were sleeping in their hut. Hearing movements about their granary in the night, one of the children woke up their mother, saying there were thieves at their dhan. The sound of human voices was enough. An elephant which had just torn off the grainhouse charged the house and killed the woman and child, one child escaping by hiding.

Next morning showed this animal to have been a female, for she had a calf with her. Though retreating to the Government reserved forest at night, Terai elephants are getting bolder and bolder, advancing well into the cultivated houses and gardens everywhere, till the dread and loss caused by them are so great that tenants are throwing up their lands on all sides.

King Edward Had No Cash.

A valuable autograph is in the possession of a shopkeeper in Bond street in the form of a cheque signed by King Edward. It happened a week or two ago that His Majesty entered the shop to make a purchase, and finding himself not provided with sufficient cash, pulled out his cheque book and drew a draft upon Messrs. Coutts.

The incident is probably without precedent, and it is certain that the cheque has not been presented at the bank for payment, the tradesman much preferring to retain the document, as it is said that no other cheque payable to a tradesman and bearing the King's signature is in existence.

As a matter of fact His Majesty seldom knows the luxury of spending money, for his real "privy purse" is invariably carried by an equerry or gentleman in attendance, who pays all outgoings. In fact the King often carries no money at all.—London Tit-Bits.

A. A. HOLLINGSHEAD, Mgr

CHURCHILL HAS IDEAS.

Expresses His Opinions On Imperial Preference.

There was a big muster of members of the Cobden Club at a dinner given at the Hotel Metropole recently under the presidency of Lord Welby. In proposing the only toast of the evening, "The Cause of Free Trade," Lord Welby said he doubted whether free trade has ever been in such danger as now since that memorable night 50 years ago when its advent was hymned at Manchester, for the reason that the party of reaction and coercion was gradually but surely gravitating and consolidating upon a pure policy of protection. This party had behind it all the moneyed classes, monopolists, publicans, and, he was afraid, the clergy. That being so, the free fooders must show equal energy in defence of their cause.

Mr. Churchill thought Lord Welby was well advised to sound the note of alarm among the free trade ranks in this country. He himself strongly held to the opinion that the free traders should remain mobilized for active warfare, but he saw no ground for any despondency. The great social and economic principle embodied in the Cobden Club was challenged four years ago by the statesmen who above all others had the power at that time to move the people of this country.

Then the most gloomy and dismal prophecies were uttered as to the ruin of our country and of our industries. What happened? The total destruction of the protectionist army, who were beaten from Dan to Beersheba "and a lot of other constituencies," added Mr. Churchill, raising a laugh, "whose names I do not remember."

Was there a single prediction or assertion made by the protectionist friends at the beginning of the campaign when they started out to conquer the world to prove that taxation could be made to raise itself and that the foreigner would pay if he were only asked in a proper manner—was there a single fact about the British trade which had not already been scientifically disproved by the hard, brutal facts of our trade returns? Our colonies were more attached to us than ever.

He warned free traders not to neglect the necessary work of propaganda and instruction, which could only enable them to secure permanently what they had been able to gain by the events of the last two years. At the recent colonial conference no new plan was brought forward and no new offer was made, except the offer of the colonies to take anything that we might like to give. (Laughter.) Offers like that came from many quarters (Laughter.) It had no effect on the organization of the Liberal and Radical party. It had, however, produced a profound effect on the Conservative party, which was now a protectionist party.

Dealing with the subject of taxes, Mr. Churchill asserted that food taxes and the taxation of manufactured articles were inseparably linked together. They could not be separated by any device, however clever and ingenious. He thought free traders would always be able to smash food taxes in the country, and also protective taxation of manufactured articles in the House of Commons. (Applause.)

Upon the question of imperial preference, he asserted without hesitation that the movement did not derive its force from any consideration for the desire of unifying the British Empire, but it was a mere varnish on the sordid protectionist appetites. (Applause.) If it were not supported by all the vested interests which felt that they could get a special advantage for themselves, he ventured to think that the movement of imperial preference would have no life, or stability, or strength whatever. (Applause.)

Opium a Curse.

An important memorial, signed by the Archbishops of Canterbury, York, Armagh and Dublin, by more than seventy bishops, and by many other church dignitaries, has been addressed, on behalf of the church anti-opium committee, to the Prime Minister, to Mr. John Morley and Sir Edward Grey.

The object of the memorialists is to endorse the memorial upon the Indo-British opium traffic with China addressed by the Anglican bishops in China to the Archbishop of Canterbury in September, 1906. They urge that the opium traffic has twice been declared by the House of Commons to be "morally indefensible," and they contend that it is not right that the initiative in the suppression of that which is morally indefensible should be left to China, hampered as she is by serious difficulties largely due to British policy.

The memorial concludes: "In view of the loss to the Indian revenue and the dislocation of industrial occupation that would temporarily result from the abolition of the opium trade, we hold that Great Britain might justly be expected, as on the abolition of negro slavery, to make some contribution towards those losses, and we believe that the people of Great Britain will not refuse to render financial assistance, should such assistance be deemed necessary, when the situation is clearly before them."

Attacked By Hornets.

An unpleasant adventure fell to the lot of Captain and Mrs. Gidney recently, while they were on a panther-shooting expedition in the Dinajpur district of Assam. They were both on an elephant, and had sighted a panther. Captain Gidney was about to fire, when their thoughts were rudely turned from sport. One of the beating elephants disturbed a swarm of hornets, and these attacked the captain and his wife. Driven wild by the stings, they jumped off the elephant and ran, forgetful of panthers, and forced their way through the tangled jungle. They broke off branches of shrubs to try and drive the pests away, but found little relief. After running for a while Mrs. Gidney stumbled, and her husband carried her to a pool of water, which they fortunately chanced upon. There they took shelter from the infuriated hornets, which after a time withdrew, and the pair set about tending their stings.

The Last Stroke.

BY LAWRENCE L. LYNCH,

Author of "A Woman's Crime," "John Arthur's Ward," "The Diamond Coterie," "Against Odds," Etc.

"You see, sir," he began, as Brierly joined him, "we can walk slow, for a few steps here, where all's quiet."

Brierly paused to look back. The cab was turning at the corner, and it followed them, at a snail's pace, and close behind, down the still and shady side street. "You see, I've been noticing, for a couple of weeks, or maybe more, a fellow who just seem to patrol the street next below this, almost as faithfully as I did, and for quite a time I wondered why; and thus I began to watch him, till I found that his promenades always took him round the corner, and seemed to bring him up right opposite the house you live in. I guess I ought to step a little brisker, sir; somebody's coming. The man was not very tall, and thick set like, and if I hadn't taken notice of him, at the first, almost, I might not have recognised him, for he changed his clothes almost every trip; sometimes dressing common, sometimes quite swell; but I knew him every time."

"Make it as short as you can, officer; we're almost at the corner."

"All right, sir." The man glanced back. "Your cab's here, all right, sir, I was just going to tell you how we came to arrest the fellow."

"Ah!" Brierly smiled in the dusk. It had puzzled Ferrars or seemed to, the sudden cessation of the spy's visits, and now he would be able to enlighten the detective. "You have him, then? This shall be worth something to you."

"I don't want a reward for doing a plain duty, sir. Just walk on ahead for a step; somebody's coming."

Preoccupied with the story, and without glancing behind, Brierly did as he was told, and had advanced, not ten paces from the corner, when there was a swift blow, a fall and a cry, three pistol shots in swift succession, and the rattle of wheels; all so close together that the time could have been counted in seconds.

"Brierly! Are you badly hurt?" The revolver fell from the fingers of the man who had prevented the second blow, and put to flight the sham policeman, who had so deftly contrived his appearance, with the aid of the cab, between the rounds of the policeman proper, who now came up panting, his footsteps hastened by the shrill call of the whistle in the hands of the new or latest comer. And then the inmates of the neighboring houses rushed out, and, for the moment, there was confusion, consternation and clamor.

"Is he dead?"

"How did it happen?"

"Was it a sandbag?"

"To think of a holdup on this street!"

"There was a carriage, I'm sure."

And then the policeman was flashing his lantern about among them, as he bade them stand back, and the rescuer, who looked like a workman in his Sunday clothes, looked up, from the place where he knelt, supporting the head and shoulders of the unconscious man, and said:

"Gentlemen, this is Mr. Brierly, Robert Brierly of 1030 C— Avenue; the Myers house, only two blocks away. He must be taken home at once. Has anyone a cot? No, he must be carried." For at the name name of the Myers house, a gentleman had proffered his carriage at once. "And, officer, call up help. If possible, that cab must be traced. Send to stand just above and find out what cabs have left within the past quarter hour. Let someone go ahead and bring Doctor Glessner from just opposite 1030. He's at home."

"How did it happen?" asked Mr. Myers, two hours later, when the injured man — his wounded head carefully dressed — lay, still dazed and in a precarious condition in his darkened room, with a trained nurse in attendance.

Ferrars, having seen his friend in his own room, and in the hands of the doctors, had not waited for their verdict, but had set off to put in motion his plan for hunting down the would-be murderer, and he had but now returned, full of anxiety for the fate of the sufferer.

"How did it happen? After all our precautions, too!"

"It's easy to tell how it happened," replied Ferrars with some bitterness. "It happened, first, because the enemy outwitted me, in spite of my cordon of guards; and, second, because Brierly lost patience and exposed himself."

"But how?"

"I can only give you my theory for that. He was alone in the house, eh?"

"Yes. We were both out when he went."

"He wanted, doubtless, to go to town. There was no servant at hand whom he wished to send, so he walked toward the hack stand, or so I suppose. At the corner he met a policeman, as he thought, of course, and so, for a moment did I. They stopped, spoke together, and the sham policeman hailed an empty cab that was close at hand; then they crossed the street, the cab following, and the policeman seemed to be doing the talking, as I saw when they passed under the light at the corner. I had suspected some new plot, from the fact that the spy had so suddenly disappeared, and I had watched your place, in person, for the past three nights."

"Oh! And that is why we have seen so little of you?"

"In part. Well, I made up my mind, when they walked away together down that tree-shaded cross-street, that there was something wrong. I was on the opposite side, and concluded to close up, seeing that the cab was getting very near and edging close to their side, against all rules of the road. I had got half way across, and was just behind the cab, when I saw Brierly step ahead of the other, and then came the blow. As I sprang forward the cabby gave a loud hiss and the scoundrel saw me, and sprang for the cab with his arm still uplifted for another blow. I fired twice, running, the third time turning long enough to send another shot at him as he entered the carriage door. Then he was off. I think he was hit, once at least."

"He will be caught, don't you think so? A cab driven like mad through those quiet streets??"

"No. He will not be caught, I fear."

"But why?"

"Because he will have had a second vehicle, a carriage, no doubt, not far away, and he will leave the cab, which will slacken up for a moment, and then dash on."

"How can you know that?"

"Because, when I find that I am dealing with a clever rascal, I ask, what would I do in his place? And that is what I would have done."

"Well, well!" The lawyer sighed. "Poor Robert."

"If he only had been less impatient!" exclaimed Ferrars.

"If we had been wiser, and had not left him! The boy was in a peculiarly restless mood. Even my wife had observed that since morning."

"And why since morning?"

The lawyer looked at him gravely for a moment. "Did you ever hear of Ruth Glidden?" he asked.

"The orphan heiress? Of course; through the society columns of the newspapers."

"Ruth Glidden and the Brierly boys grew up as the best of friends and neighbors. The elders of the two families were friends equally warm. I believe in my soul that Glidden would gladly have seen his daughter marry one of the Brierly boys. And if things had run smooth—but there! Brierly was accounted a rich man, and he was until less than a year before his death, when the failure of the T. and S. Railway Company, and the Northwestern Land concern, within three months of each other, left him a heavy loser. Even then, if Glidden had been alive all might have been well. But he died, two years before Brierly's death, and Ruth went to live with her purse-proud aunt, her father's sister. The two families had resided for years, side by side, on this avenue."

"And where is Miss Glidden now?" asked Ferrars.

"Here in this city since day before yesterday. She and her aunt have been abroad for a year, but I believe that they care for each other, though Robert is so proud, and that is not all. The brothers have each a few thousand dollars still, and it appears that shortly before his death, Charlie—he was always a methodical fellow—instructed his brother, in case of his sudden death, to make over all of his share to Miss Hilda Grant. Robert told me of this upon his return with the body, and he also said that all he possessed should go, if needful, to the clearing up of this murder mystery."

"It may be needful," sighed Ferrars. "I fear it will be."

"Then, good-bye to Robert's hopes! With it he might make a lucky hit; might have a chance. Without it," he shrugged his shoulders, "what can even so bright a journalist, as he undoubtedly is, do to win a fortune quickly. And he won't accept help, even from me, his father's oldest friend."

"No," said Ferrars, gloomily. "Of course not. How could he? Mr. Myers, I'll be honest and tell you that I'm afraid we've struck a blank wall. Things look dark on all hands, just now, for poor Brierly."

"What! Do you think the clue, the case, is lost, then?"

"Not lost. Oh, no. Only I fear, out of reach."

CHAPTER XVII.

Francis Ferrars sat in his sanctum, one could scarcely call it an office, although he received here, now and again, visitors of many sorts on business bent. For, since his coming to America, five years before, to find the heiress of Sir Hillary Massinger, he had read many another riddle, and now, as at first, he worked independently, but with the difference that he now undertook only such cases as especially attracted him by reason of their strangeness, or of the worth, or need, of the client.

Two letters lay before him, he would take up one or the other and re-read a passage, and compress his lips and give vent to his thoughts in fragmentary sentences. For he had grown, because of much solitude, to think aloud when his thoughts grew troublesome, voicing the pros and cons of a case, and seeming to find this an aid to clearness of thought.

"It's a most baffling thing," he declared, taking up for the third time a letter in the strong upright hand of Doctor Barnes. "I wonder just what the man meant by penning this," and once more he ran his eye over this paragraph which occurred at the end of a long letter:

"Mrs. Jamieson has not forgotten you. She asks after you now and then, when we meet, and desires to be remembered to you. She is not looking well, and, I fancy, finds Glenville duller than at first."

"I'll wager she does not think of me any oftener than I of her. And she can't know how ardently I long to stand before her and look into those changeful, blue-green eyes of hers. What strangely handsome eyes they are—And say—Ah! how will those eyes look then, I wonder?"

Presently he turns the sheet and reads again:

"I think you did well to instruct your two men here to make use of, and place confidence in, Doran. He's a host in himself. And what do you think of the tramp they have traced to the vicinity of that boat on the morning of the murder? He was seen, it appears, by at least three."

"Umph!" laying down the letter. "If you were here, my dear Barnes, I would tell you frankly—I feel just like being brutally frank with someone—that I have no doubt that the tramp is a link—there seems to be so many of them, and all detached—a link—and that he approached the boat in that tramp disguise, after separating from his confederate at some distant point. Bah! It looks simple enough. Confederate leaves vehicle—or two horses, possibly—they could slip off the saddles and hobble them in a thicket, where they would look, to the passer-by, like a pair of grazing animals, or they might have used a wagon, traveling thus like two innocent bucolics. Then, how plain to me, the assassin goes through the woods, watchfully, like an Indian. The tramp boatman patrols the shore, to signal to the other when the victim appears; or, should the assassin on shore be unable to creep upon his prey, the assassin in the boat may row boldly near, and, at the signal from the other, telling him there is a clear coast, fire upon the victim. If he is sure of his aim, how easy! And if seen by the victim, well—Dead men tell no tales."

He muses silently awhile now, puts down the doctor's letter, and takes up the other.

"This," he murmurs, "is tantalizing." And then he reads from a letter, signed "Hilda G—."

"Mrs. Jamieson begins to complain of the dullness of this place, in spite of the fact that she has had a visit from her husband's brother, a Mr. Carl Jamieson. He did not make a long visit, and I saw but little of him. He is something of a cripple, a sufferer from rheumatism, and just back from the hot springs. I met him but once. He looks and talks like an Englishman, and has a dark eye that betokens, if I am a judge of eyes, a bad temper. I give you these details knowing that all concerning the little blonde lady is of interest to you."

"Of interest!" he muttered, "I should think so! Doubly so, now that there's so little else of interest, or—" He stopped short, and wheeled about in his chair. His office boy had swung open his door and was saying:

"A lady to see you, sir." And Ferrars arose to confront a visitor, a brunette so tall and lissom, so glowing with the rich hues of health and beauty, so clear of eye, and direct of gaze, that Ferrars could not at first find his usually obedient tongue, and then she spoke.

"Mr. Ferrars!" her voice was a low, rich contralto. "I am Miss Ruth Glidden, and I have come to you to seek information concerning the awful death of my friend, Charlie Brierly. Pray, let me explain myself at once."

Ferrars bowed, placed her a chair, and closed the half open door.

"The Brierly's and my own people were old friends, and Robert and Charlie Brierly were my childhood playmates. I arrived home, ten days ago, after a year spent in Europe, and learned, soon, of Charlie's sad fate. While this shock was still fresh upon me, I heard of Robert's narrow escape from a like attack. Mr. and Mrs. Myers are my dear friends. I have spent much of the past week under their roof, and—" There was a little catch of the breath, and then she went bravely on. "And I have had a long, frank talk, first with Mrs. Myers, and then with her husband. He has told me all that he could tell. He has assured me that you are wholly to be trusted and relied upon, and, knowing my wishes—my intentions, in fact—Mr. Myers has advised me to come to you."

"And in what way can I serve you, Miss Glidden?"

"Please, understand me. I have heard the story; that there are clues, but broken and disconnected ones; that you know what should be done, but that there is a barrier in the way of the doing. Mr. Ferrars, as a true friend of Robert Brierly, I ask you to tell me what that barrier is? I have a right to know." The rich tints of olive and rose had faded from her rounded cheek, leaving it pale. But the dark eyes were still steadily intense in their regard.

As Ferrars was about to reply, after a moment of silent meditation, the door opened and the boy came in again, softly and silently, and placed upon the desk a handful of letters, just arrived; laying a finger upon the topmost one, and glancing up at his employer, thus signifying that here was his excuse for entering at such a moment.

The letter was marked "immediate," and the handwriting was that of James Myers.

With a murmured apology, the detective opened it and read.

"My Dear Ferrars—During the day you will no doubt receive a call from Miss Glidden. I cannot dictate your course, but I write this to say that no friend of Brierly's had a better right to the truth — all of it—nor a stronger will and greater power to aid. Of her ability to keep a secret you can judge when you meet her. Yours, "James Myers."

When he had read this letter Ferrars silently proffered it to his visitor, and in silence she accepted and read it.

"I was strongly inclined to accede to your request, after, first, asking one question," he said when she gave the letter back, still without speaking, "And now, having read this, I am quite ready to tell you what I can."

"And the question?"

"I will ask it, but have no right to insist upon the answer. Have you any motive, beyond the natural desire to understand the case, in coming to me?"

She leaned slightly toward him and kept her earnest eyes steadily upon his face as she replied, "I cannot believe that you credit me with coming here, on such an errand, simply because I wish to know as much as possible, but let me first tell you, plainly, my motives and why I have assumed such a right or privilege. To begin with, I am told that Robert Brierly will not be able to think or act for himself for some time to come."

"That, unhappily, is true."

"And how does this affect your position?"

"It is unfortunate for me, of course. The case has reached a point when I can hardly venture far unauthorized, and yet no moment should be lost. The time has come when skilled investigations, covering many weeks, perhaps, as well as long journeys, are necessary. We need also the constant watchfulness of a number of clever shadowers."

"And this requires — it will incur great expense?" she asked quickly. "Is it not so?"

Ferrars bowed gravely.

"Mr. Ferrars," she began, and there was a sudden subtle change in her voice, "I am going to speak to you as a woman seldom speaks to a man, for I trust you, and we must understand each other. Two years ago, when I was leaving my old home for my aunt's house, having still a half year of study before me, with the year abroad, already planned, to follow, Robert Brierly came to bid me good-bye, and this is what he said; I remember every word: 'Ruth, we have been playmates for ten years, and dear friends for almost ten years more. Now I am a man, and poor, and you a budding woman, soon to be launched into society, and an heiress. I would be a scoundrel to seek to bind you to any promise now, so I leave you free to see the world and to know your own heart. I have not a fortune, but if labor and effort will bring it about I hope to be able to offer you a fit home some day, for I love you, and I shall not change. I want you to be happy, Ruth, more than all else, and so I say, go out into the world, dear, and if you find in it a good man whom you love, that is enough. But, remember this; as long as you remain Ruth Glidden, I shall hope to win you when I can do so and still feel myself a man, for I do not fear your wealth, Ruth, only I must first show myself to possess the ability to win my way, on your own lever.'"

She paused a moment, and bent her face upon her hand. Then she resumed, almost in a whisper. "He would not let me speak. He knew too well that he had always been very dear to me, and he feared to take advantage of my inexperience. I loved and honored him for that, and every day and every hour since that moment I have looked upon myself as his promised wife and have been supremely happy in the thought. And now—" There was a little pause and a sobbing catch of the breath—"Have I not the right, Mr. Ferrars, to put out my hand and help in this work? To say what I came here to say? My fortune is ample. It is mine alone. I am of age, and my own mistress. Take me into your confidence, to the utmost, make me your banker, and push on the work. Robert Brierly may be helpless for weeks or months longer. Charlie Brierly was as a brother to me. No one has a stronger right to do this thing."

"Miss Glidden, have you thought or been told that—"

"That Robert may die? Yes. But I will never believe it. And even so, there is yet more reason why this work should not be dropped, why no moment should be lost." She paused again, battling now for self-control; then—

"There is one other thing," she resumed, "Mr. Myers has told me of the poor young lady, poor Charlie's fiancee. Will you tell me her name? He did not speak it, I am sure, and I want to write to her, to know her."

"That will be a kindly deed, for she, too, is an orphan. Her name is Hilda Grant."

"Hilda! Hilda Grant! Tell me, how does she look?"

"A brown-haired, gray-eyed, sweet-faced young woman, with a clear, healthy pallor and a rich color in her lips alone. The hair is that golden brown verging upon auburn; she is tall, or seems so, because of her slight, almost fragile gracefulness."

"Ah! Thank you, thank you. That is my own Hilda Grant, who was my schoolmate and dearest friend, and who cut me because she was poor, and buried herself in some rustic school house. She shall not stay there. She shall come to me."

"I fancy she will hardly be induced to leave Glenville now."

"I must see her. She will come up to see Robert, surely!"

"She is only waiting to know when she may see him."

"Of course. And now, it is agreed, is it not? You will take me as a silent partner?"

"Since Mr. Myers sanctions it I cannot refuse. Besides I see you are quite capable of instituting a new search, if I did."

"I will not deny it." And they smiled, each in the other's face.

"Perhaps," he said, now grave again, "when I have told you all my ideas, theories and plans, you will not be so ready to risk a small fortune, for, unless I am greatly in error, you will think what I am about to propose, after I have reviewed the entire situation, the wildest bit of far fetched imagining possible, especially as I cannot, even to you describe, name, or in any manner characterize the person, or persons, whom I wish to follow up, for months it may be, and because the slender threads by which I connect them with the few facts and clues we have, would not hold in the eyes of the most visionary judge and jury in the land."

"It will hold in my eyes. Do you think I have not informed myself concerning you and your work? Is not Elias Lord my banker, and Mrs. Bathurst persona grata in my aunt's home? I am ready to listen, Mr. Ferrars."

CHAPTER XVIII.

At first she only entered while the patient slept, but after a few days the stupor began to lessen, and the flightiness, with which it had alternated, to decrease. And then one day he knew them, and, by the doctor's orders, the nurse withdrew and Ruth came to the bedside and sat down beside him.

"Robert, dear," she said smiling down upon him. "You have very nearly let that wretched footpad spoil the good looks of the only lover I ever had, and to prevent further mischief I am come to take care of you." She said very little more then, but gradually the patient found himself being ruled by her nod, and liking the tyranny: so that when he was told that he was going away to try what change of air and scene would do for his maltreated head, he listened to her while she told him a tale which seemed to interest her much and through which the names Ferrars, Myers, Hilda, and the pronouns "they," and "them" often occurred. And then it came about that, supported to a carriage and transferred then to a swinging cot, he was taken on board a Pullman sleeper, and with nurse and attendant was whirled away southward.

Two days later, James Myers said good-bye to wife and friends and set sail, on board the good ship Etruria en route for Europe.

"Yes," he said to an acquaintance whom he met at the wharf. "I've wanted to make the trip, you know, for a long time, and now a matter of business, the looking up of certain titles and records, makes the journey needful, and I can combine pleasure and business." And then he turned away to say a few last words to Francis Ferrars before the signal sounded and he must say good-bye to his anxious wife, to serious-faced Ruth Glidden.

"And now," said the detective to Ruth, "The next flitting will be towards Glenville.

Before the end of that week Mrs. Myers, who stood staunchly by Ruth, and would not hear of her going alone, Ruth herself, and a keen-eyed maid—not the one who had accompanied the young heiress home from Europe, but another supplied by Mr. Ferrars — all arrived at Glenville, and took quarters at the Glenville House, where Hilda Grant soon sought her friend, and promised herself much comfort in her society.

At first, Miss Glidden did not seem to desire acquaintances, and Mrs. Jamieson complained that she found herself almost deserted, Hilda was so preoccupied with her newly-arrived friend. But this was soon changed.

Miss Glidden and her party had at first been placed in quarters which the young lady did not find to her taste. There must be a pleasanter chamber for her friend, Mrs. Myers, and a reception room for their joint use, and it ended in her securing the little parlor suite adjoining that of Mrs. Jamieson.

For a time even this close proximity did not seem to break the ice, and while having been introduced by Hilda, the two ladies were for some days, strangers still.

For reasons which Ferrars might have explained if he would, Hilda Grant had not visited Robert Brierly while he lay under the care of doctor and nurse, and now that they were together, the two girls, having first exchanged fullest personal confidences, had much to say about Robert and his dead brother.

At the end of their first confidential talk, Ruth had said: "Apropos of this, Hilda, my dear, let me remind you that I have not outgrown my dislike of being quizzed or questioned by the simply curious, for the sake of curiosity. I know what a small town is, and so, I warn you not to let the dear inhabitants know that I am more than a friend of your own. To proclaim me a friend of the Brierlys as well, will be just to expose us both to the inquisitive, and to set vivid imaginations at work."

Hilda's eyes studied her face a moment, "I think you will not be troubled. My acquaintances all know that I do not willingly talk on that terrible subject, Even Mrs. Jamieson, who saw its fearful beginning and who is with me often, seldom speaks of it to me."

"The pretty widow? Mr. Ferrars, pardon me, your cousin, spoke of her more than once," and Ruth cast a keen side glance at her friend's face. "And she speaks of him, now and then."

"As which?"

"As my cousin; for so she believes him to be."

"And you think them mutually interested? I must really see more of my pretty neighbor."

Miss Glidden and her party had been a week in Glenville when "Mr. Ferris-Grant" arrived, and spent a few days in the village, making his home at the doctor's cottage, and passing most of his time with Hilda and her friends. Mrs. Jamieson had now made better progress with her fair and stately neighbor, and they might have been seen strolling toward the school house together, or driving along the terrace road—for Mrs. Jamieson had declared that the tragedy of the lake shore had spoiled the lakeside road for her — in Doran's pony carriage, and, sometimes with "Miss Grant's cousin" for charioteer.

One evening the little party sauntered away from the pretty hotel together to walk to Hilda's home and sit for an hour upon Mrs. Marcy's broad and shaded piazza, which Mrs. Jamieson declared so charmingly secluded, after the chatter and movement, the coming and going upon that of the Glenville House.

They had been taking tea with Mrs. Myers and Ruth, Hilda, Mrs. Jamieson, and the sham cousin, who seemed to rather enjoy his role, if one might judge by his manner, and they seemed inclined to pass the remainder of the evening together.

HUNDRED LIVES LOST

Terrible Conflagration in Chinese City.

Wholesale Destruction of Houses and Boats—Supposed Work of Incendiaries—Property Loss Amounts to Quarter Million Dollars—Looting Going on But Foreigners Are Safe —Kerosene Depot Exploded.

Hong Kong, Sept. 28.—Hundreds of houses and many boats and pontoons were destroyed yesterday by a fire at Wu Chow, on the Siakiang River, about 180 miles from Canton. About 100 lives were lost.

The conflagration is said to have been due to incendiarism in connection with the recent establishment of a new interior customs stations at Wu Chow, the inhabitants of which are bitterly opposed to any extra taxation.

The fire was put out after a kerosene depot had exploded. Property valued at a quarter of a million dollars was destroyed.

Looting is now going on in Wu Chow, but all the foreigners there are safe.

TOSELLI WAS RUDE.

Paris Journal Pokes Fun at ex-Crown Princess of Saxony.

Paris, Sept. 28.—The brief stay in Paris Thursday of Signor Enrico Toselli and his wife, the ex-Crown Princess of Saxony, to whom he was married in London, Sept. 25, is amusingly described by The Matin. The couple arrived here at daylight and went to the refreshment room of the railroad station, where Signora Toselli ordered some chocolate and Toselli asked for beer and saurkraut.

The bride was described as looking tired, worn and old enough to be Toselli's mother, but she displayed a most affectionate attitude towards her husband, who, however, replied to her questions only in monosyllables while bolting his food. He afterwards smoked a cigarette, blowing the smoke in his bride's face.

Later Signor and Signora Toselli took a dilapidated night cab, drove through the streets for two hours and then went to a small hotel, from which they started in the afternoon for Italy, by way of Switzerland. A despatch received here from Geneva, Switzerland, quoted Signora Toselli as "rejoicing" at her pluck in marrying for love, and saying she and her husband were soon going to Africa with her little daughter, the Princess Anne Monica Pia.

OUTBREAK OF BOXERISM.

Italian Priest and Number of Converts Murdered.

Shanghai, Sept. 28.—An outbreak of Boxerism has occurred at Wankangsien, in the southern part of the Province of Kiangsi.

An Italian priest and a number of converts have been murdered at the village of Tawouli, and the Lazarist Fathers' mission at Kanichowfu has been burned.

The missionaries escaped to Kiafu, whence they telegraphed for assistance.

Killed at Port Elgin.

Port Elgin, Sept. 28.—The Port Elgin fair here yesterday was a success, but was marred by an accident which cost John Donald of Southampton his life.

In the saddle horse class the horses were sent around the track, and one of them, a fractious beast, bolted at an opening near the gate.

Mr. Donald, a man nearly 70 years of age, was struck in the face and knocked down, the animal falling on him and injuring him internally. He died in about 20 minutes.

A young man named D. Caven was also injured, but not seriously.

NOT IMPERIAL ISSUE.

Negotiations Over Vancouver Incident Confined to Ottawa.

London, Sept. 27.—Baron Komura the Japanese ambassador and the Foreign Office, unite in saying that the issue between Japan and Canada over the admission of Japanese to Canada has not yet become an Imperial question, to be dealt with by the authorities here.

Proposal For Settlement.

Tokio, Sept. 27.—The Foreign Office has received a communication from Baron Komura, Japanese ambassador in London, which is understood to contain a proposal for the settlement of the Japanese situation in Canada. The contents of this communication have not been announced.

LUSITANIA MADE SLOW RUN.

Eastbound Voyage Takes Five Days Four Hours—Stokers Blame Coal.

Queenstown, Sept. 28.—The Cunard line steamer Lusitania, from New York Sept. 21, arrived here at 3.56 a. m. yesterday, the passage thus occupying 5 days 4 hours and 19 minutes, or 3 hours 25 minutes more than her outward run. The only record broken was that of the Lucania of the same line.

The comparative slowness of the voyage cannot be attributed to fog. On only one day, Monday, was fog entered on the log, and the ship ran 524 miles that day, only six miles below her best day's work. On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday a strong northeasterly wind, with a rough sea, was encountered.

The American coal was said by the engineers not to have been so satisfactory as the coal used during the westward trip, and the stokehole work was not altogether up to the proper mark. But the confidence of the engineers in the Lusitania's ability to beat all competitors when things are running smoothly is not diminished.

The new liner behaved splendidly during the very heavy weather of the last three days of the trip, and the passengers were lavish in their praise of the comfort which they enjoyed on board the vessel.

WHERE WAS THE ERROR.

Commission Find No Fault In Connection With Quebec Bridge.

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—The commission which has been making an enquiry into the causes of collapse of the Quebec bridge brought its Canadian sittings to an end in Ottawa yesterday afternoon, and go to New York next week.

Mr. Holgate, the chairman, after the last witness had been examined, said: "As far as we have been able to learn, there had been the greatest care taken all along the line to ensure the safety and permanency of the Quebec bridge structure.

"The best engineers on the continent prepared the plans and specifications, and a wonderful care and accuracy in carrying them out was shown.

"We found absolutely no trace of dishonesty or graft in connection with the construction of the bridge. This seems to be the case of the best engineering brains on the continent and the very best accepted engineering methods being on trial.

"As far as the Government's connection with the enterprise is concerned, it seems to us that everything is quite regular, and everything was done that should have been done."

Rudyard Kipling Arrives.

Quebec, Sept. 28.—Rudyard Kipling, whose prose and verse have charmed the English-speaking world, was a passenger on the Empress of Ireland which arrived in port at a very early hour yesterday morning. It was expected that he would remain in the ancient capital for a few days, as apartments had been reserved for him at the Chateau Frontenac, but at the last moment he decided to proceed west without delay, and, accordingly, left on the C.P.R. special at 8 o'clock for Montreal.

He left his cabin with Mrs. Kipling and crossed the wharf to take the train, which was in waiting just a few hundred feet away, thus almost entirely excluding the possibility of his according an interview on things Canadian.

He wore a dark overcoat and derby hat, and, although he is slightly below medium height, there is a magnetism about his personality that instills confidence in his sincerity.

"Yes," he said to a reporter, "I've come to Canada and I expect to be here for several weeks. Your country has undoubtedly made wonderful progress since I was last here ten years ago, and it will indeed be most interesting for me to note as I go through your principal cities what steps you have made in this direction. I have followed closely your doings out here, and it's a great pleasure for me to be among the Canadian people once more."

Prince Taken For Thief.

Perugia, Sept. 28.—Prince Louis of Battenberg was the victim of an error on the part of the local police on his arrival here from Florence yesterday, but he accepted the incident with a good grace and made no complaint.

When he stepped off the Florence train he was stopped and searched by detectives, who had received instructions from Florence to look out for three men charged with the theft of a pocketbook on the train.

On learning of the mistake made by his subordinates, the commissioner of police hastened to call at the prince's hotel and apologize. Prince Louis derived much amusement from the mistake.

SIX SURVEYORS SHOT

Wounded in Alaska by Guggenheims' Guards.

Were Making Preliminary Survey for Alaska-Nome Railroad—Surprised by Ambush in the Canyon—Party Thought Threat to Stop Them Was Bluff — Greeted by Fusilade of Bullets.

Valdez, Alaska, Sept. 28.—Six surveyors and workmen were shot and wounded in a clash between the Guggenheim forces of the Copper River & Northwestern Railroad and the Alaska-Nome Railway. All the wounded were men of the latter company.

The party was making a preliminary survey for the Nome Railroad, which is planned from Valdez to the summit. They had advanced 100 yards up the canyon when they were surprised by an ambush of the Guggenheim men, headed by Edward Hassey, once a United States marshal.

Hassey hailed the surveyors and ordered them to stop, saying his men would shoot if any further advance was made. The surveyors believed Hassey was bluffing and continued working. They were met by a fusillade of bullets. Deputy marshals are searching for the assailants.

WANDERING DOUKHOBORS.

In Danger of Being Run Down by Trains Near Kenora.

Winnipeg, Sept. 28.—The C.P.R. authorities to-day wired to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. R. P. Roblin, pointing out the condition of affairs in regard to the Doukhobors who are at Kenora and Whitemouth. The telegram reads, in part:

'They are now proceeding on their march. With the sparse population around Lake Superior, the cold winter coming on and the danger resulting from walking along the tracks, action should be taken at once.

"We offered to take them back to Yorkton, but they persist in their march along the track."

Premier Roblin has stated that the government can take absolutely no part in the affair.

NOT OBSTRUCT NAVIGATION.

Wreckage of Quebec Bridge Lies In Deep Water.

Montreal, Sept. 28.—Engineer Cowie of the harbor commissioner's staff, in replying to people interested in St. Lawrence navigation, who expressed fear that the wreckage of the Quebec bridge would be detrimental to the early opening of navigation in the spring of 1908, states that the steel work is in such deep water that it cannot possibly make any difference or interfere with the passing out of the ice, neither can detached parts be moved and become dangerous, as the whole mass of steel is solid and may never be moved. The shore portion might collect some ice, but it can cause no trouble.

A Ferryboat Tragedy.

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 28.—A special to The Advertiser from Mobile says that Leslie Vermille, a white boy of Mobile, and 15 negroes were drowned in the Tombigbee river at McCrew's Shoals on Thursday, while crossing the river in a ferryboat from the Government's works, where they were employed. They were on their way to dinner when the accident occurred. About mid-stream the little boat drifted from control of the men into the rapids and soon capsized. Two of the negroes in the boat scrambled on top as it overturned, but the other occupants were thrown into the swift current and were drowned almost instantly. On account of the strong undertow, rescue work was impossible. Late in the evening two of the bodies, both negroes, were recovered, and the others are being dragged for.

Indemnity Not Discussed.

Tokio, Sept. 28.—(C. A. P.)—It is authoritatively stated here that Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Commissioner Ishii did not at their recent meeting touch upon the question of an indemnity for the losses which the Japanese incurred in Vancouver, and the restriction of immigration. They discussed only the measures to be taken to prevent a recurrence of disorders and the maintenance of the existing treaty. The consul-general at Ottawa has since had under consideration the various claims made, but the particulars are as yet unsettled. The Japanese Government is appointing an extra official to supervise immigration affairs.

An Enquiry at Once.

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—The Department of Marine has ordered a commission of enquiry into the collision of the steamer Harona and Mongolian off Amour Point, in the Lower St. Lawrence. The necessary subpoenas will be issued to-day, and the enquiry will open in Quebec on Monday, under the presidency of Commander Spain.

Testimonial For Palma Victors.

New York, Sept. 28.—The executive committee of the National Rifle Association has decided to open a public subscription to secure a testimonial to the members of the American rifle team which recently won the Palma Trophy at Ottawa.

One Hundred Drowned.

Malaga, Spain, Sept. 28.—A renewal of the rain yesterday is causing fresh inundations and a suspension of the rescue work. A bread famine is feared. The bodies of about 100 drowned persons have been recovered near here.

Strike Gas at Calgary.

Calgary, Sept. 28.—After boring for natural gas for the last 14 months the efforts of the Natural Gas Co. were rewarded on Thursday by its discovery in paying quantities. The strike was made at 2,800 feet.

Mrs. James Stone, 74 years old., of London, was injured, perhaps fatally, by a street car on Saturday.

Police Officer Drunk.

St. Catharines, Sept. 28.—Another lively meeting of the police commissioners is now expected owing to the second police constable, within three weeks, having been, it is said, found drunk on duty. On Thursday, it is alleged, William Groff, whose appointment was strongly opposed by Judge Carman at the meeting two weeks ago, was reported helplessly drunk in the vicinity of Welland station, Geneva street, and was taken to headquarters by Sergt. McCarthy, where he was suspended by Chief Parnell, who reported the facts to Police Magistrate Comfort, secretary of the commission.

Eight Injured in Wreck.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 28.—Eight persons were injured in a wreck on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Juniata Bridge, west of Duncannon, yesterday, when the Altoona accommodation, leaving Harrisburg at 10.40 a. m. ran into a freight train. Railroad officials say nobody was killed. A relief train having four physicians aboard was rushed through to Harrisburg.

Ultimatum to Sultan.

Explosion Kills One.

Coshocton, Ohio, Sept. 28.—Two persons were burned, one fatally, in an explosion in the dry cleaning department of the Eureka Laundry & Domestic Rug Co. here yesterday.

4226.—A DAINTY LITTLE BERTHA FROCK.

The little dress here illustrated will be a joy to the maternal soul. It is made with exquisite simplicity of fine French batiste, the yoke and bertha being decorated with delicate hand embroidery, but the design lends itself equally well to development in almost any fabric suitable for children's wearing, whether of linen, silk or fine wool. To develop the medium size 3 1-8 yards of 24 inch material will be required.

4226.—6 sizes, 1-2, 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 years.

The price of this pattern is 10c.

4221.—A PRETTY DRESS FOR A YOUNG GIRL.

THE LATEST DEAN PATTERN.

A PRETTY ONE-PIECE NEGLIGEE

The modern American woman can never be too well supplied with dainty dressing sacques, and when a model presents itself which is both pretty in effect and easy of development the temptation to add one more to her store is irresistible. The accompanying sketch charmingly illustrates a sacque which answers both descriptions. To fashion it is simplicity itself, for since it is made in one piece it is well within the capabilities of the least experienced of home dressmakers. As portrayed in the illustration it is made of white Japanese cotton crepe, and ornamented with rows of pale rose satin ribbon; while a featherstitching of pale rose silk supplies the garniture for the edges. The same model may be made up quite without trimming, as shown in the outline sketch and utilized as a bed jacket for an invalid. In this case French flannel of fine flannelette would be an appropriate fabric for its development. For the medium size 3 1-8 yards of 36 inch material will be needed.

6961.—In three sizes, small, medium and large.

The price of this pattern is 10 cents.

Creed is Not The Essential

Rev. Dr. Griffin Says That it is Not Most Important Thing

"As long as a man or woman loves Jesus Christ, no matter what their creed, I love them, even Catholics."

Thus spoke Rev. Dr. Griffin, of Toronto, at Charlotte street church last night. Dr. Griffin's point was that creed is not a fundamental truth and that it did not have much bearing when it came to getting to heaven. To know and love Jesus Christ was the primary thing, the essential element.

Rev. Dr. Griffin is treasurer of the superannuated Minister's Fund of the Methodist church, and it was in this connection that he preached in Peterborough yesterday. Dr. Griffin, although of advanced age, still preaches with considerable force and has a way in the pulpit that is all his own. Large congregations heard him both morning and evening despite the somewhat inclement weather and his appeals for Superannuated Ministers' Fund met with a generous response.

In the evening he only gave a few minutes to a plea for the support of this work and devoted the rest of the time to an interesting and helpful gospel sermon. He devoted his morning sermon to the work that is being done to provide for the superannuated ministers of the Methodist church. On the superannuated list there are at present about 300 aged ministers, 250 widows of ministers, and 75 or 80 orphan children, sons and daughters of Methodist ministers. The money paid to widows and orphans is paid entirely from the superannuated list, but the churches are only asked to contribute 20 per cent. of the money that is paid to the aged ministers. The rest is provided from other sources. (Practically all the superannuated ministers are men who have labored all their lives in the Master's cause at small salaries and thus have been unable to lay by sufficient to provide for their old age. Therefore they are deserving of every support in order that they may have comfort in their declining years. The fund was not for ministers who had been paid high salaries; it was for those who had not been sufficiently remunerated.

For his gospel sermon Dr. Griffin took as his text the 40th verse of 5th chapter of St. John; "And ye will come to me, that you might have light." In the course of his sermon the reverend gentleman dwelt on the point that creed was not of fundamental importance. There were many things in creed that were not fundamental truth, but it was fundamental that to get to heaven one must know, love and obey Jesus Christ. The speaker said that he loved Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists and Catholics, all alike as long as they knew Jesus Christ.

An Advance in Price of Coal

It Will go up to $7.50 per Ton To-morrow

Today coal is selling in Peterborough at $7.30 per ton. Tomorrow the selling price will be $7.50.

The dealers will all advance the figure of the dusky diamonds twenty cents, and later on in the season it may go still higher. Last year the highest quotation for coal in Peterborough was $7.30 per ton; the year before it was $7.50, and tomorrow, it will again reach that figure.

"What is the cause of the raise from $7.30 to $7.50," inquired the Review, of a coal merchant today.

"Well," he replied, "we are not making any money selling at $7.30. By rights we should be getting $8 per ton. You know that hay is especially high in price and that we have to pay more for our accommodation at the barns. In fact, the cost of everything has advanced. We have, in short, to pay higher wages, more for feed, and a higher rate of interest for money, and it is therefore no wonder that we have to get more for coal than last year."

Adjt. Wiggins Will Say Farewell

At the S. A. Barracks Next Sunday—Leaving City Next Week

Next Sunday will be the farewell service to Adjutant and Mrs. Wiggins at the Salvation Army barracks. They are leaving the city about the middle of next week, but where they are to be stationed is not yet known.

The fall congress of the officers of the army will be held in Toronto from October 9th to the 14th, and it will be at this convention that the different officers will learn where their next stations will be. Brigadier Hargrave of Montreal, will be here to-night and will conduct a business meeting, relative to the adjutant's removal.

Adjutant Wiggins has been in Peterborough for the past year and during that time has been very successful in his work. He has enjoyed his stay here and regrets leaving. He came to the city from Halifax, N.S. He has been engaged in the work of an officer of the army for over twenty years. He has made a great many friends, not only in the Army, but among other denominations as well, who will be sorry to learn of his departure.

HARVEST HOME.

The annual harvest home services were held yesterday at the Salvation Army barracks. It was the custom in former years to have the hall suitably decorated, but this year that part of the festivities were dispensed with. Only thanksgiving services were held. Messrs. Wright and Howell, of Toronto, were present at the meeting yesterday. Last evening Mr. Wright gave an interesting talk on "What they are doing in Manitoba." Mr. Howell also gave several solos.

A new cornet player has been added to the membership of the Army band in the person of Mr. Fitton, late of Blackburn, Lancashire, England. Mr. and Mrs. Fitton came out on the steamship Lake Champlain, arriving here on Friday. Mr. Fitton was for 14 years cornet player in the Army band at Blackburn. He has taken a position at the C.G.E. works and will no doubt make a good citizen.

Strangers' Tea Held at Y.M.C.A.

The first Stranger's Tea for the season at the Y.M.C.A. on Sunday evening was well attended, and very enjoyable to those who were present. Mr. Harding was in the chair and commented on the fact that the General Secretary, who had been instrumental in organizing the club and promoting its work, would be leaving the city soon. All the strangers present testified to the helpful hand the association had given them.

FEARFUL PAINS

SUGGESTIONS HOW WOMEN MAY FIND RELIEF.

While no woman is entirely free from periodical suffering it does not seem to be the plan of nature that women should suffer so severely. This is a severe strain on a woman's vitality. When pain exists something is wrong which should be set right or it will lead to a serious derangement of the whole female organism.

Thousands of women have testified in grateful letters to Mrs. Pinkham that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound overcomes women's special pains and irregularities.

It provides a safe and sure way of escape from distressing and dangerous weaknesses and diseases.

The two following letters tell so convincingly what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will do for women, they cannot fail to bring hope to thousands of sufferers.

Miss Matilda Richardson of 177 Wellington Street, Kingston, Ont., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Some four years ago my usually good health began to fail. I had severe pains in my back, my head ached, I would have dizzy spells, and during my monthly periods I would suffer intense pain. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so glad that I did, for it brought new life and health to me. My monthly periods were natural and painless, and my general health improved. I have not had an ache or a pain since, and I feel it a duty as well as a pleasure to tell you what your medicine has done for me."

Mme. Louise McKenzie, of Mount Carmel, Montreal, Canada, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I had heard so much good about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before I started to take it for painful periods so that when it cured me I was not surprised. I had suffered with blinding headaches and pain until it seemed that I must scream. These pains lasted from five to ten days every month, and you can understand how glad I was to get relief. I am in the best of health, and am pleased to give you this testimonial for what your medicine has done for me."

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound rests upon the well-earned gratitude of Canadian women.

When women are troubled with irregularities, displacements or ulceration of the organs, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation, backache, bloating, (or flatulency), general debility, indigestion and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

Don't hesitate to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about your sickness you do not understand. She will treat you with kindness and her advice is free. No woman ever regretted writing her and she has helped thousands. Address Lynn, Mass.

Ask Mrs. Pinkham's Advice—A Woman Best Understands Woman's Ills.

Strong Suspicion of Foul Play; Terrible End of a Storekeeper

Man Shot in Toronto Under Mysterious Circumstances.

Revolver Was Hidden Away—Doctor Discovered Bullet Wounds — Had Penetrated Arm and Body In Such a Way as to Discredit Accident Theory — Alleged Brothers Had Been Quarrelling.

Toronto, Sept. 30.—Michael Turpenoff, a Macedonian shopkeeper living at 21 Eastern avenue, was shot and killed in a room above his shop yesterday morning.

The explanation of the shooting, as given by his brother, Leo, and two boys, who were in the room at the time, does not satisfy the police, and has only possibility to favor its truth. The brother says that Turpenoff had an argument in his room with the brother and two boys employed in the grocery. Turpenoff threw open his coat, and the revolver, dropping from his right breast pocket, fell to the floor. As Turpenoff stooped to recover it, it exploded.

The bullet entered the right arm on the outside slightly above the wrist joint, passing upward diagonally through the forearm. It came out on the inner side of the arm, just below the elbow, then penetrated the coat, vest and two shirts, entered the right breast slightly above the nipple and came out almost directly opposite at the back but did not penetrate shirt, coat or vest at the back.

The pistol is hammerless, and the only explanation which bears out the brother's story is that the thumb or fingers of the hand stretched out to regain the pistol up-ended it so that the barrel pointed against his wrist and a further pressure of the hand pressed the trigger.

Another theory is that the dynamite said to be in these cartridges exploded with the concussion when the gun fell, and that the dead man, having reached over to catch the gun as it dropped, received the wound.

Dr. Glendinning, in addition to his telephone call, was summoned by a Scotchman who is engaged in missionary work in the vicinity. This man and another son of J. K. Lea, the druggist, told him that a Macedonian had fainted in the street. It was not until the doctor had examined the man, who died as he entered the room, that he discovered he had been shot.

Trupenoff was lying across the bed with his head to the wall. Dr. Glendinning moved him lengthwise in the bed and bound the hole in the right breast. The man was not bleeding from the wound and the doctor made no further examination of the body, giving him only an injection of strychnine.

The room was filled with Macedonians. Only one of these could speak English. Of this man the doctor enquired: "Were they quarrelling?" And he, coming close to the doctor, whispered "Yes." In replying to all other questions put to him he consulted with those in the room before answering.

The pistol with which the man is supposed to have been shot was mysteriously hidden when Dr. Glendinning arrived. He asked where the pistol was. After asking the brother of the dead man the reply came "in the bed."

Found Under Mattress.

The Macedonian looked between the mattress and springs from the outside. Finding nothing, he turned up the mattress from the bottom uncovering an old revolver, 32 calibre. The doctor examined it. The spring of the trigger was broken, and the gun had evidently not been used for some time. The men then turned the mattress from the far side of the bed, which was placed close against the wall and found another revolver resting on the springs about the centre of the bed. Dr. Glendinning took possession of the pistol, which was fouled at the muzzle, apparently from recent discharge. Dr. Glendinning says that the pistol could not have been placed where it was found by the man before he died, nor indeed would the man have been capable of any intelligent movement after he was shot.

London's New Lord Mayor.

London, Sept. 30.—Sir John Charles Bell, ex-sheriff of the City of London and head of a big brewery company, who has held a number of important offices in connection with the municipality, was on Saturday elected Lord Mayor of London, to succeed Sir William Treloar, Bart.

The election took place with all the customary, ancient ceremonies in the Guild Hall at noon. The new lord mayor will be installed in office November 9.

Case Chadwick's Condition.

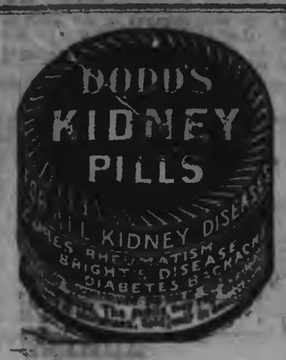
Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 30.—Mrs. Cassie Chadwick, who is serving a term in the penitentiary for bank wrecking, is in a critical condition. Her doctor says:

"I examined Mrs. Chadwick this morning and found her heart very irregular, and her articulation bad. Although her condition is not dangerous, it is not improbable that she may drop off at any minute."

Quebec Bridge Commission.

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—The members of the Royal Commission have changed their plans and will not go to New York yet.

It is likely they will return to Quebec, where a further examination of the wreck will be made before they cross the line to go to Philadelphia or New York.



GERMAN EMPEROR'S RECEPTION.

Channel Fleet Will Meet Him at Sea —London's Cordiality.

London, Sept. 30.—Every possible nerve is being strained to give the German Emperor and Empress a reception the like of which they have never experienced outside of their own country when they come to England in November. The court officials are co-operating with the civic, naval and military authorities to insure a cordial reception, and the result will probably be such as even to impress the Imperial visitor and his consort.

Not very much can be done to impress the Emperor in a military way, but he is to be honored with a naval welcome of imposing dimensions. The whole channel fleet, under Lord Charles Beresford, will go out to sea to meet him, and more than a hundred pennants will fly at Spithead to salute Their Majesties on their arrival.

There is no doubt this royal visit is intended to mark in a dramatic and picturesque way the better understanding between England and Germany, on which this country is now congratulating itself. Since the Kaiser last made a state entry into the City of London many things have happened, including the notable limitation to his own influence in the field of European diplomacy. The Kaiser has kept the peace through everything, but so long as he remained a dominant figure in European politics the world had an uneasy feeling that it was too much at his mercy. When he comes back to London a few weeks hence the popular welcome will be all the more enthusiastic because by force of circumstances this feeling has passed away.

The city is going to exceed itself in the cordiality and splendor of its hospitality. The main reception to the Emperor and Empress at the Guildhall will be on familiar lines, but the details will be filled in with quite exceptional solicitude and lavishness.

$30,000 FIRE IN TORONTO.

Defective Electric Wires Cause Blaze in Early Morning.

Toronto, Sept. 30.—Defective electric wires are blamed for a $30,000 blaze, which broke out in the Carter-Crume Co.'s premises in the four-storey brick building at 447 West King street, on Saturday morning.

Type-setting machines, presses, type and paper were severely damaged, the loss being heaviest on machinery.

The western sections of the fire department, under Deputy Chief Noble, had a hard time of it for a while, owing to the dense smoke.

The fire apparently started in the southeast corner of the flat and, swept by a southeast wind, soon played havoc with the interior. The loss to the stock is fully covered by insurance.

Sixteen men and as many women were thrown out of work, and it will be a week or more before the company is able to resume operations.

BIGAMIST CAPTURED.

Hintonburg Girl Returns Home Broken-Hearted.

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—Charles Gagne, who had a wife and children in Ottawa, surreptitiously courted and won the approval of Irene Schau of Hintonburg.

The pair eloped to Montreal and married there a few days ago. The man called himself Russell.

The girl's brother-in-law, hearing of the other wife, who is now at Arnprior, went to Montreal, quietly spotted their lodging and called in a detective, who placed the bigamist under arrest.

Gagne owned up to his deed.

Miss Schau did not know he was married prior to the ceremony with herself. She has returned home heartbroken.

Italian Vengeance.

Kingston, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Giocoona Morana, an Italian, was indicted on Saturday by the grand jury for murder in the first degree. He was convicted of a crime in Westchester County several years ago upon testimony offered by Louigi Pica, and upon his release from prison early this year began searching for him. While in New York City he killed another Italian and fled to Ulster County, where in June he discovered Pica. After finishing a card game, Morana walked behind Pica, drew back his head and cut his throat. Emotional insanity will be his defence.

Japs Must Have Passports.

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 30.—Dr. Monro, Dominion immigration officer at this port, has stated that in spite of Ottawa despatches to the contrary, he had received instructions from the seat of Government not to allow any more Japanese to land here without having passports direct from Japan to Canada. Futher than that, he stated that he had notified the steamboat and transportation companies to that effect.

Cars Collided.

Toledo, O., Sept. 30.—One man was instantly killed, two persons, one a woman, was fatally injured, and about a dozen others more or less injured on Saturday in a collision on a curve on the Toledo, Port Clinton and Lake Side Electric road.

Midland Prince Struck Dyke.

Sault Ste. Marie, Sept. 30.—The steamer Midland Prince, upbound with coal, struck at the dyke through the parting of her steering gear. The No. 1 tank on the starboard side is full of water. Temporary repairs are being made here.

London Election Date.

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—On account of some delay in arranging for the manhood suffrage vote, the London election for the Dominion House bye-election will not take place until Oct. 29.

All three bye-elections take place on the same day.

For Life.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—Frank J. Constantine, recently convicted of the murder of Mrs. Louise Gintzy, on Saturday, was sentenced to life imprisonment at Joliet.

The bye-elections in London, East Northumberland and Wellington are to be on Oct. 24, it is said.

FLEETS TO MANOEUVRE

Britain's First Line of Defence Will Make Brilliant Show.

Program a Secret — Main Object Is Strategical—To Show Officers What Would Be Required In Case of War With Germany — No Attaches Invited—Press Excluded — Beresford to Command.

London, Sept. 30.—Under the supreme command of Lord Charles Beresford, the combined home, Atlantic and Channel fleets will leave Portland about Oct. 14 for the autumn manoeuvres, which are being conducted in the North Sea this year, and will be somewhat similar to those held in the spring off the coast of Portugal. The greatest interest is being taken in this gathering of England's first line of defence, for while the usual fleet manoeuvres and exercises will be carried out, the main object, it is believed, is strategical, to teach the officers what the Admiralty would expect of them in case of war with Germany. The program is being kept a strict secret and journalists will not be invited to accompany the ships.

Lord Charles Beresford will be accompanied by no less than nine admirals, and the big ships of his fleet will include 25 battleships, 14 armored cruisers and 10 protected cruisers, with a fleet of smaller vessels, including torpedo-boat destroyers numbering over 60.

The naval attaches have not been given any information, and will not be present, except the Japanese, who as Great Britain's allies have in recent years been the guests of the officer in command on occasions of the kind.

The meeting of the fleets and so many officers is also to be taken advantage of to test the suitability of Cromarty, on Moray Firth, as a place of anchorage for big ships and its eventual adoption as an auxiliary naval base to that being developed at Rosyth, on the Firth of Forth.

'TWAS OWYANG KING.

How Deputy Minister of Labor Got "Misquoted" on Asiatics.

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—The mystery surrounding the despatch from Vancouver containing an alleged interview with W. L. Mackenzie King on the Oriental situation, has been solved.

The gentleman who was interviewed and whose opinions were attributed to the Deputy Minister of Labor was Owyang King, a member of the Chinese legation at Washington, who is now in Vancouver in connection with the trouble in that city. Owyang was evidently gibberish to the operator who received the message, so he substituted Mackenzie.

Cuban Strike Spreading.

Havana, Sept. 30.—The railroad trainmen's strike, which was inaugurated Sept. 26, is spreading. Neither the United nor Western Railroads were able to operate trains on Saturday.

The Santiago express, just before entering Havana, was held up by strikers, who attempted to assault the engineer, but the quick arrival of the police reserves dispersed the crowd.

Burned $190.

Brockville, Sept. 30.—A woman in Watertown lost $190 in bills, the collateral having been placed in a stove for "safe" keeping during the summer months when it was not in use.

The loser is a poor woman who has to earn her own living.

REFORM HOUSE OF LORDS.

Lord Rosebery Prepared to Outline a Plan.

London, Sept. 30.—Lord Rosebery is chairman of the select committee appointed to consider the reform of the House of Lords. The committee was appointed against the wishes of the Government. It will sit and take evidence for the greater part of the next session.

In his latest public utterance Lord Rosebery has made it quite clear not only that his committee intends to deal fully with the question of a reasonable reform of the Upper House, but that its recommendations will in all probability form the basis of a bill.

All the radical headquarters arrangements had been almost completed for commencing the long threatened autumn campaign against the gilded chamber. The crusade promised to be rich in furious assaults against a hopelessly weak position, but the ball had been set rolling in the wrong direction, with the spirited defence of that very position by the man who was formerly Premier, and who is admittedly the most brilliant Liberal statesman of the day.

Lord Rosebery had declared that he was not a House of Lords man, but he certainly is a second chamber man. He has said, "I am from the bottom of my heart and soul convinced by every iota of political life and historical experience that an effective second chamber is necessary."

STRIKE ON LUSITANIA?

Story That Six of the Stokers Were Placed In Irons.

New York, Sept. 30.—The Herald's London cable states:

Passengers on the Lusitania, who reached London at 10 o'clock last night, had a great deal to tell about strikes and rumors of strikes which enlivened the voyage across.

Last Monday morning a large delegation of strikers, with their faces carefully freed from coal dust and wearing their best clothes, wended their way to the bridge and asked to see the captain.

One of them was received, and complaint was made, it is said, of the quality of food served to the men, and the commander agreed to have the ship's doctor pass upon it. The ship's doctor pronounced it all right, and the men were ordered below. The story went about the ship that some of the men refused to work and that six were put in irons.

HALIFAX POOL RAIDED.

Police Swept Down, Made Many Arrests, Recovered Money.

Halifax, Sept. 30.—The police department sprang a big sensation on Saturday night by raiding Neville's Billiard Hall, where pools on the exhibition races were being sold.

Chief Powers, accompanied by a body of detectives and sergeants, went to the bowling alleys so quickly that there was no time to get anything out of the way, and they scooped in $1,247 in money, the books and papers, besides arresting one of the large number present.

This was B. M. Beckwith, a well-known commercial traveler and a prominent sporting man. Included in the booty was $400 one of those present had won on the 2.19 trot Saturday. Beckwith was released on $2,000 bail, and will be arraigned in the Police Court this morning. More arrests are likely to follow.

WELL-DRESSED MAN KILLED.

Found Near Track of Aylmer-Hull Railway.

Ottawa, Sept. 30—An unknown man, well-dressed, with a gold watch and money in his pocket, and apparently about 26 years old, died at the Water street Hospital yesterday morning.

He was found lying unconscious near the track of the Aylmer-Hull Street Railway line, some four miles from this city, and was brought to the city. His skull was very badly smashed and part of the brains were oozing from the wound.

Whether he had fallen from a car, or how he got there, is not known. He was brought to the city from the Hull railway station by a C. P. R. detective, and Drs. U. McKinnon and Dowling attended him at the hospital.

Up to 6 o'clock the body had not been identified. Dr. Lyster, the Hull coroner, was notified.

Dropped Sixty Feet.

Regina, Sask., Sept. 30.—About one o'clock Saturday afternoon while John McPherson and Mr. Stewart were polishing the brick top of the tower of the new city hall a rope on one side of the scaffold gave way. McPherson was precipitated 60 feet on the stone steps, and died from his injuries. Stewart clung to a rope and was rescued. McPherson was unmarried and had only recently arrived in the city.

Unionists Hold Seat.

London, Sept. 30.—The determined attempt made by the Labor Socialist candidate to capture the seat in the House of Commons for the Kirkdale division of Liverpool made vacant by the death of David MacIvor, Unionist, resulted in failure, and the outcome of the bye-election was that Charles MacArthur, Unionist, assumed the seat with a slightly increased majority.

Found Dead on Track.

Hamilton, Sept. 30—James A. Plant, aged 23, who lived with his grandfather, Joseph A. Plant, of 13 Fisher street, was found dead on the railway tracks near Burlington yesterday morning. A kit of machinist's tools was found near him. His mother lives at Trafalgar, near Oakville, and his father is a manager of a big plant in Oregon.

Killed by Train on Street.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 30.—Mrs. H. C. Munsell and Mrs. Henry Holmes, both of Springfield, Mass., here to attend the Millenial Dawn Tract Society convention, were killed Saturday night on Main street by a Norfolk & Western Railroad shifting train.

The police had to interfere to prevent Mr. Holmes jumping into the river.

Joseph Wyns, in jail at Portage la Prairie on a charge of murder, escaped yesterday. But was recaptured within an hour.

The Last Stroke.

BY LAWRENCE L. LYNCH,

Author of "A Woman's Crime," "John Arthur's Ward," "The Diamond Coterie," "Against Odds," Etc.

They had not been long seated upon the vine-shaded piazza when Doctor Barnes came up the walk and dropped down upon the upper step, like one quite at home. It was now more than two weeks since Robert Brierly had been carried southward and the people of Glenville, for the most part, had heard most discouraging reports from the invalid, most of them given forth by the doctor, or "Sam" Doran, who, by the way, had been for the past month entertaining a warmly welcomed and much quoted "first cousin" from "out west."

The doctor held a letter in his hand, and seeing this, Miss Grant's cousin asked carelessly:

"Any news of general interest in that blue envelope, doctor?"

They could not see the doctor's face, but his voice was very grave when he replied, "I'm sorry to say yes. Our friend down south is in a very bad way."

"Mr. Brierly?" exclaimed Mrs. Jamieson. "Oh, doctor, tell us the worst." And then she murmured to Ruth, who sat near her, "Miss Grant's friend, you know, but of course you do. I have grown as much interested in his welfare, somehow, as if he were not really a stranger, whom I never saw but once."

The doctor had left his place, and crossed to the open window, through which the lamp-light shone upon the open letter.

"I think I can see to read it," he said, as he bent over the sheet. "The writer says:

"'I fear our friend will not see many more Florida suns; will not be here with us long. The change has been surprisingly rapid, and the heart is now seriously implicated. Do not be surprised if ill news comes at an early day.'"

He folded the letter. "Ill news should always be briefly told," he said.

When the ladies came in, that night, having parted from the two gentlemen who escorted them as far as the piazza steps, they found Miss Glidden's maid hovering in the passage, near her mistress's door.

"Miss Glidden, ladies," she began in evident agitation, "I have been terribly frightened. Someone has been in your room, and, I fear, in that of this lady also. I sat, for an hour, on the back piazza with two of the house maids, and when I came up, only a few steps from this room, someone slipped out from Mrs. Jamieson's door and round the corner toward the south hall. I did not think about it until I had gone into your room to make all ready for the night, and when I saw the closet door open, and the things upon your table pulled about as if someone had hurried much, and had left, when they found it was not a sleeping room. Then I thought of the next room, of the person coming out so still and so sly—"

Miss Glidden pushed past the maid, and opened her own door. "Look in your room, Mrs. Jamieson," she said, "and see if you have really been robbed before we alarm the house, Susan, go with her."

Mrs. Jamieson found that her door was indeed unlocked, and her inner room showed plainly that a hasty hand had searched, here and there.

"It's lucky that I never leave money where it can be got at," she said to Ruth, when she had taken in the full extent of the mischief, "and that I haven't taken my jewel box from the hotel safe for three days. Even my purse was in my chatelaine with me. I find absolutely nothing gone. But my boxes, my frocks, my boots and wraps, even, have been pulled out. It's very strange. The thief must have been frightened away before anything was taken."

"Perhaps," suggested Miss Glidden, the person wanted clothing, and heard Susan coming down the hall."

It was very strange, but, although they called the landlord, and told him privately of the invasion, and though there was a quiet but strict investigation, nothing came of it, and no one was even suspected.

"It was certainly some one from outside, who slipped in through some open door in the dark, while every one was out on the piazzas, or in the grounds. These halls are not lighted until quite dark, sometimes, I find. I am thankful that you met with no loss, ladies," said mine host.

Next morning Mrs. Myers declared herself more than ready to leave Glenville. The thought of being in a house where an intruder found it so easy to make free with a lady's wardrobe, was not pleasant, and she hoped Ruth would not ask her to spend another week in the town. In fact she only stipulated for a fortnight's visit with her friend, Miss Grant, upon which Ruth promised that they would really go very soon, although she was enjoying herself.

Three days later a party of Glenville's guests set off, after an early breakfast for a long drive, and a day's fishing, at a spot some miles distant and near the north end of the lake, at a famous picnic ground. Mrs. Jamieson was one of the merry crew, and she urged Ruth Glidden to join them, as did the others, all; but Ruth "never fished and detested picnics," besides, the other people, she declared, were for the most part utter strangers, and Hilda and "Mr. Grant" were not invited.

When Mrs. Jamieson came back with the rest of the tired merry-makers she knocked at Ruth's door to announce her return.

There was no response, and she entered her own rooms where she found, conspicuously placed, a note. It was in a strong masculine hand, and she opened it quickly, looking first at the name at the bottom of the sheet. It was F. Grant.

She sat at her breath, and sat down to read, wondering still and her heart beating strangely.

"Dear Madam," so ran the note. "You will be surprised, I know, to hear of our so sudden departure. Poor Brierly is dead, and we start to-day by the four o'clock express, hoping thus to reach the city before the party from the south arrive there. They started, we learn, on Tuesday morning. Mrs. Myers and Miss Glidden have kindly accompanied us, that my cousin may have the comfort of her friends' companionship, and the protection of the elder lady, whose guest she will be. In the haste of departure I am commissioned to say what they would have gladly said in person. For myself, while I trust we may meet again, and soon, may I presume to ask — in the event of your going away from Glenville, for my cousin has said it was possible — that you will let the doctor know where we may in future address you? In the hope of seeing you again, at an early date, I am

"Sincerely and hopefully,

"F. Grant."

An hour later she sent for Doctor Barnes, who came promptly.

"Doctor," she began, as soon as he had entered her room, and closed the door. "I won't try to deceive you. I have had twinges of neuralgia today, and my bottle is quite empty. But I want, most of all, to hear more about this sudden flitting. They have left me just a line of farewell. Of course I know about poor Mr. Brierly. There's no doubt of his death."

"Not the least in the world, I regret to say."

"It is very sad, but I suppose they were prepared for the news."

"Yes."

"Now tell me about Miss Grant. Is she coming back to her school?"

"I don't quite know. Her cousin, who is a very successful man in business, goes abroad soon, and he would like to have her among her friends. Miss Glidden is anxious to keep her, for a time at least. I believe she, Miss Grant, had a few words with Doran. I fancy it will end in her resignation."

"Then how I wish she would come abroad, if not with her cousin, then with me. For I shall go soon, I quite think. In fact there are business matters, of my husband's, money matters that require my presence. I must write to Miss Grant."

"Then address her at the Loremer House for the present. Miss Glidden has a suite of rooms there."

A week later Mrs. Jamieson, accompanied by her friend, Mrs. Arthur, looked in upon Doctor Barnes.

"I have come to say good-bye, doctor," said the former. "I leave here in the morning. My brother-in-law, who is on his way eastward, after a second hurried western trip, will be in the city to-morrow; I meet him there, and we sail in three days. Mr. Grant has written me that the ladies are all out of the city, so I shall not see them, but he thinks they will all be in London before the end of summer."

Thus of all the active dramatis personae of our story, but few were left in Glenville by mid-July.

"And so the pretty widow's gone," said Samuel Doran to the doctor, the day after this final flitting. "Looks like Glenville couldn't be a healthy place in July. Even my 'first cousin from out west' skipped out sort of sudden yesterday; couldn't stay another minute."

"You don't look heart-broken," suggested the doctor.

"Oh, I can spare him. Anyhow, I guess 'twas time he went. Powerful eater, that first cousin of mine." And Doran grinned from ear to ear.

CHAPTER XIX.

From James Myers, Att'y, to Wendell Haynes, solicitor, with offices in Middle Temple Lane, off Fleet street, which is London's legal heart and brain of life. Fleet street, with such a history past, present, and to come, as may never be written in full by all the story-telling pens combined in this greatest literary centre, and working harmoniously; no, not in the space of a lifetime. Drafted in the office of the American lawyer, two days before his setting sail from New York, bound for London: and it was received, owing to stress of weather, five days before its writer set foot on British ground; and read by its recipient with no little surprise.

This is what it contained:

"Wendell Haynes, Esq., Middle Temple Lane, Etc., London.

"Dear Sir: After four years I find myself in the act of reminding you of my continued existence, and of your promise of proffered help, should a day come when you, on that side, could aid me, on this, because of what you chose to consider your debt to me. To proceed: in two days I set out for England, and it will take me, upon my arrival, many days, perhaps, to find out what you, with your knowledge of places and people, and your easy access to the records, can do in half a day, no doubt. I feel sure that I can rely upon you to do for me this personal favor, which is not in the direct line of your business routine, perhaps, but it is quite within your ability, I trust and hope; and without taxing too much your time and energy. And now to business.

"I have reason to think that a certain Paisley estate over there awaits an heir; and that one Hugo Paisley, or his heirs, have been advertised for. To know the exact status of the case, and something about the people with whom I may have to deal, at once, upon my arrival, will help me much. And it is to ask for this information at your hands that I now address you, and, being sure of your will to aid me, as well as confident of your ability, I shall trust to hear that which I so much wish to know, upon my arrival in London, and from you.

"I sail by the Etruria, and shall stop at Brown's.

"Yours sincerely,

"Jas. Myers."

Wendell Haynes, solicitor, smiled as he read this missive. He had a most vivid remembrance of his first and only visit to America, and of his meeting with James Myers, quite by accident and shortly after his arrival in Chicago, which city had seemed to the visitor, a more amazing thing than the howling wilderness which he had been in daily expectations of seeing, would have appeared to him.

In his efforts to run down a friend from the suburbs, Myers had consulted a hotel register, and seeing the name of the English lawyer, written by its owner just under his eye, he had first looked at the man, and then at the name, and, upon learning that he was an utter stranger to the city, and to the ways of its legal fraternity he had presented his card.

Solicitor Haynes had visited America and the "states" to investigate what had appeared to be an effort, on the part of American agents, to cheat the widow of a certain English ranch owner out of her just rights and lawful income, and the assistance rendered by Mr. Myers had carried him the lasting and earnestly expressed gratitude of his brother attorney, who asked for nothing better than an opportunity to repay the favor in kind, and no time was lost in the doing of it; so that when James Myers arrived at Brown's, and put his name upon the big register, the following letter was promptly handed him across the clerk's desk:

"James Myers, Esq., Brown's Hotel, London.

Dear Sir: Your favor of — was very welcome, affording me, as it did, some small opportunity to return a very little of what I owe you for many past courtesies and most valuable service, and I have lost no time in looking up the information you desire.

"There is a large estate, that of the Paisleys of Illchester, awaiting the next of kin, who should be, so far as is known, the descendents of one Hugo Paisley who left this country nearly 80 years ago and whose heirs, male or female, are entitled to inherit. There has been an effort made to hear from these heirs, and, strange to say, there has been no reply, nor has any other claimant appeared of lesser degree. If you will call upon me upon your arrival I will give you all details and addresses so far as known to me, and shall be very glad if I can be of yet further use. Yours sincerely,

"W. D. Haynes."

"You see," said Solicitor Haynes, at the close of an hour's talk with Lawyer Myers, "thus far all is quite clearly traced, and there is no doubt of the rights of the Hugo Paisley heirs — if such are to be found, and if they can prove their heirship."

"And the family, here in England, is quite extinct, then?"

"In the direct male line, yes. There may be cousins, or more distant relatives, but the father of Hugo Paisley had four children, the three eldest being boys, the youngest a girl. This girl married young and died childless. The elder son married, had one son, who did not live to become of age, and himself died before he had reached his forty-second year. Then the second son, Martin, inherited, and the last of his descendants died not quite two years ago, a widow and of middle age, I hear."

"And there have been no claimants?"

"None, I am told. The case was advertised, both here and in the United States, but with no results as yet, unless—" The solicitor stopped short and looked keenly at his visitor. "Something," he said, "has surprised, and I could almost imagine, disappointed you."

"You are quite sure of this?" the other urged, unheeding their last words. "There have been no claimants, near or remote?"

"Absolutely none." The solicitor looked again, questioningly, into the face of his vis-a-vis, and then something like surprise came into his own. "Upon my soul, Mr. Myers, if I were to express an opinion upon your state of mind, I should say — yes, upon my word I should say that you were disappointed, absurd as that would seem."

"Disappointed—how?"

"Because, by Jove, there have not been any applicants or claimants for Hugo Paisley's money."

"Well, you wouldn't be far wrong. I am surprised, at any rate, and I shall have to admit that this fact disarranges my plans, stops my hand, as it were." He got up and took his hat from the table. "I came here with the intention of telling you a rather long story, in the hope of enlisting your interest, perhaps your aid. Now, I find that I must defer the story, and go at once and cable to friends at home."

He wasted no more words, but, promising to dine with his friend later, hurried back to his hotel, where he found a cablegram awaiting him.

Previous to his departure from New York, Ferrars had given him a code by which to frame any needful cable messages, concerning the business of the journey, or the people whom it concerned. The detective had warned all of the little group, now so closely bound together by mutual interest and in the same endeavor, to be constantly on guard against spies.

"Unless I am greatly mistaken," he said, "every effort will be made to keep in view all who are known to be connected with the Brierlys and their interests, and the fact that we are fighting an unknown quantity makes it the more necessary that we use double caution. We don't want another 'blow in the dark,' any of us; and, above all, we do not want to be followed across the water, and shadowed when there."

The wisdom of this was admitted, for, since the attack upon Robert Brierly, the unseen foe had become a bugbear indeed to Hilda and Ruth; and they abetted Ferrars in all possible ways, no longer questioning and with growing confidence in his leadership, in spite of the seeming absence of results.

The cable message which Mr. Myers read was worded as follows:

"Jas. Myers, Etc., Etc.

"H. has seen brother, who is watching affairs, unable to sail at present; letter follows. F."

These were the words, their meaning, according to the chart, was this:

"Hilda has seen the western tourist. He is watching us, and we will not attempt to sail until he is off the scent. F."

Half an hour later this message went speeding back to New York, and from thence westward:

"To F. Ferrars, Etc., Etc.

"Case all right; way clear; no claimants."

Which meant precisely what it said.

A few days later two letters passed each other in mid-ocean. The one westward-bound read thus:

"My Dear Ferrars: It will not take me long to tell all that I have to tell concerning my mission. As I had anticipated, Mr. Wendell Haynes was more than ready to assist, and had the few facts I now give you already tabulated and awaiting me. Here they are in the order of your written queries:

"1st. The Paisley fortune is no hoax. There is a fine country seat, a factory, a town house, and various stocks, bonds and other investments amounting in all to above a million in American dollars.

"2d. The English Paisleys are quite extinct, and the claim to the whole estate can surely be established by our claimant.

"3d. And this may change all your plans possibly, and will startle you quite as much as it has me. There has been no effort made by anyone to claim or get possession of the property, and there is no clue to such a person if he, she or they exist. This balks us. How shall I proceed? Was ever a trial so completely hidden?

"Mr. Haynes has placed himself, and his knowledge and resources — both being extensive — entirely at our disposal. If you still think well of the advertising plan, wire me. I am idle until I hear from you, and mean to employ myself doing London, which will render my part of the enforced waiting very pleasant.

"By the by, I omitted to say that there have been but two 'notices' published. No unseemly haste, you observe. Awaiting your reply, I am

"Yours sincerely,

"Jas. Myers."

The letter which passed this midway was from Ferrars, and contained some information.

"Dear Sir and Friend," it began.

"This finds us all in the city, the ladies at the flats, and myself in the old quarters, with which you have lately grown familiar. I fancied that we were quite snugly placed and could pass our period of waiting your summons with some care of mind. Your house, which looks as untenanted and forbidding as possible, has been viewed, your care-taker, says, by a 'party' who, from the description, I take to be the man whom we have termed the 'westerner,' and who was seen for a day or two in Glenville.

Grand Duke Frederick Dead.

Constance, Grand Duchy of Baden, Sept. 30.—The Grand Duke Frederick of Baden, who has been suffering from intestinal inflammation for some time past, after remaining unconscious for many hours, died early on Saturday morning.

Throughout the night the Cabinet Ministers and the court officials and chaplains had waited in an apartment adjoining the death chamber for the end to come.

At the grand duke's bedside when he expired were the Grand Duchess, Princess Louis of Prussia, the hereditary grand duke, Frederick of Baden; Prince Max of Baden, brother of the grand duke; the Crown Princess of Sweden and others.

The public life of the deceased was for fifty years intimately connected with the efforts to unite the German states of the empire.

Hanged Himself In Station.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—A gruesome discovery was made by officers in one of the waiting-rooms at the Grand Trunk Bonaventure street station on Saturday, when the body of a young foreigner was discovered hanging by means of his belt and a couple of towels. The man's name is Ouery Yakowanke, supposed to be a Russian, and his ticket was purchased at Milwaukee.

Broke Jail, But Returns.

Brockville, Sept. 30.—William (Problem) Turner, the man who made his escape from the jail yard early in August, while serving a sentence of six months for vagrancy, was captured Saturday afternoon in the Central Hotel. He was intoxicated. Turner carried out the prophesy of those who knew him that he would turn up, and arrived here from Charlotte.

An Editor's Troubles.

San Francisco, Sept. 30.—Fremont Older, managing editor of The Bulletin, and prominently connected with the graft prosecution, was arrested here on Saturday evening on warrants sworn to by Luther Brown, who charges Older with criminal libel.

Every housewife appreciates the necessity of the big apron, but few realize that this may be made becoming as well as practical. Here is an excellent example of an attractive work apron, having a bib in one piece and long skirt portion with unique pockets at the sides which look as though they might be a continuation of the bib. Broad ties form a bow in back which are always becoming.

WEDDING BELLS

O'BRIEN—MORGAN

A pretty wedding was solemnized this morning at eight o'clock in St. Peter's Cathedral, when Miss Sylvia Morgan, daughter of the late Wm. Morgan, Otonabee, was united in marriage to Mr. Patrick J. O'Brien of Elyria, Ohio. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. O'Brien.

To the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Doherty the bride, leaning on the arm of her brother-in-law, Mr John Duignan, entered the church. She was becomingly attired in a travelling suit of blue Santoy cloth, with ball trimmings. She wore a blue hat, trimmed with sunset roses and carried a mother-of-pearl prayer book. The bride was attended by Miss Mary O'Brien, of Toronto, sister of the groom. The bridesmaid looked charming in a gown of lace over yellow silk. She also carried a white prayer book. The groom was ably assisted by Mr. Will O'Brien, nephew of the bride. During the service, Miss Pearl Morgan, niece of the bride, sang "Come Unto Me," very effectively.

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the residence of Mr John Duignan, 209 Dalhousie street, where about thirty guests sat down to a sumptuous wedding repast served by Mr. T. Hooper. The guests included a number from Toronto and St. Catharines. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain, to the bridesmaid an emerald ring, to the groomsman, a pearl scarf pin, and to the soloist, Miss Pearl Morgan, a gold locket.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien left on the 11.45 G.T.R. train for Toronto, where they will spend a few weeks, prior to leaving for their home in Elyria, Ohio.

BROUSSEAU—HOBSON

A quet wedding was solemnized at St. Peter's Cathedral this morning, when Mr. George Brousseau was united in marriage to Mrs. Mary Ann Hobson. Both the contracting parties are residents of the city. Tremendous Upheaval on Sun's Surface on Saturday

Rev. Dr. Marsh Saw the Largest Disturbance He Ever Witnessed—Did it Have Any Effect on the Weather or Not is the Question.

Have sun spots any bearing on weather conditions?

Opinions differ among astronomers on this point, and with a view to solving the question, records are now being kept at the leading observatories to ascertain if the disturbances on the sun have any influence on the weather. For instance, if it is found that a certain brand of weather exists when there are spots on Old Sol, then it can be taken that there is some connection between the solar eruptions and the weather.

Rev Dr. Marsh, of Springville, in conversation with the Review today, stated that on Saturday he made a discovery which bears on this question. The fact that during a period of rough and stormy weather, astronomers are usually unable to study the sun, owing to it being obscured by clouds, has made it difficult to secure information on this interesting question. On Saturday, however, Dr. Marsh was showing some friends how the telescope worked, and just at the time, the clouds parted for a minute, and the sun appeared in the rift. Dr. Marsh turned the telescope on it, and saw the largest upheavals on the solar surface that he ever witnessed. He judges that the disturbed area was about 125,000 miles in length and 15,000 miles in width. The big spot was on the western limb of the sun's disc, and an observation this morning showed that it was passing off.

Whether or not the great upheaval on the sun had anything to do with the unusual weather that existed at the week end, Dr. Marsh is not prepared to say, but he is greatly interested in the matter, as are many other astronomers.

Forty-ninth Anniversary of Mr. Ed. Green's Wedding Day

Old Resident of This City Tells of Peterborough's Pioneer Days—Came to Canada in 1836.

It is just forty-nine years ago today, that Mr. Edward Green, of 326 Water street, was united in marriage to Miss M. A. Mitchell, daughter of Capt. Mitchell, of Emily, by the late Rev. W. D. Roger, then pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Peterborough. Mr. Green, who is eighty-one years of age, is one of the pioneers of Peterborough, and when he took up his residence in this now prosperous city, it was only a village of about six hundred inhabitants. He was born in Kilbeggen, Westmeths, Ireland. Mr. Green, after a voyage of seven and three days on three masted sailing ship Celia, arrived in Montreal, in company with his parents and five brothers, and three sisters, in the month of July, 1836. Of the entire family, only two are alive at the present time. Mr. Green, the subject of this sketch, and his youngest brother, Robert, who lives in California. Mr. Green was married twice, the first time to Miss Elizabeth Cullen of Montreal, and the second time to Miss Mitchell. As the result of his first marriage, Mr. Green had but one daughter, now Mrs. Jas. Logan of Huntsville, Ontario, and of his second, one son, Mr. W. F. Green, who resides with his father, on Water street.

After living in Montreal for two years, Mr. Green with his father and mother, and the rest of the family went to Kildare, P.Q., sixty mile eastheast of Montreal. After staying there two years, their landlord bought them out, and they then went to Hamingsford, Ontario, about forty miles from Montreal. Shortly after this, Mr. Green left the parental roof, and journeyed to Ogdensburg, N.Y., where the Ogdensburg Railroad was then being built. He obtained a position in connection with the construction of the road and was engaged in the work for about five months. He then returned home again and after a visit of short duration there went to Port Hope and worked with his brother Joseph, who followed the occupation of teamster. He stayed in Port Hope between two and three years and then came to Peterborough for the first time, and assisted his brother Benjamin, in the carrying on of a general grocery business on George street, near where Messrs P. Connal & Son, are now located and also helped him in his soap, tallow and potash manufactory on Water street. After residing here for three years, Mr. Green went back to Port Hope where he engaged in the grain and hog buying business, and also held quarterly auction sales of groceries and liquors. He was employed in the Lake Ontario town, by the firm of McDermid & Welsh.

He returned to Peterborough in three years' time, travelling with his household effects by waggon, as far as Bewdley at the head of Rice Lake. Here he embarked on a two horse power, side-wheeler craft owned by Geo. May and popularly known as May's boat. Mary May, the daughter of the skipper, acted as mate.

The boat was too slow in making this trip, so Mr. Green got off and walked the entire distance to Peterborough, beating the boat out by three days at that. He stayed here for three years, and then went back to the firm of McDermid and Welsh, Port Hope, and after remaining there for the same length of time, returned to this place, and has resided here ever since. He followed the business of grocery for a long time, retiring from that line about thirty-eight years ago. Since then he has held the office of market clerk, for eleven years, and is widely known as a manufacturer of window sashes. He has been engaged in that particular line of work, for many years past.

Mr. Green bears the ravages of Father Time well and talks interestingly of reminiscent details of Peterborough, and the other parts of Canada so well known to him in the days of his youth.

Business Section of City To be Wired From the Rear

Bell Telephone Company to Make Important Change—Will Effect Great Improvement.

In addition to undergrounding their wires in Peterborough the Bell telephone Company are about to undertake various other improvements in their system in this city. Among them is the wiring from the rear of all business blocks in the central part of the city. Instead of the wires entering at the front of the building they will be brought in at the rear, thereby enmanating all wires from the street. In connection with the undergrounding of the wires now going on, conduits are being laid into the rear of the different blocks in the central part of the city and the wiring will be done from a central point in each block. For instance, a conduit has been laid at the rear of H. LeBrun's store on Hunter street, running into the rear of the block and from there the buildings in this area bounded by George, Hunter, Water and Simcoe streets will be wired. The same plan is being followed throughout the entire business section and will effect a big improvement. The work will be done within the next few weeks.

The Bell people are apparently sparing no expense in making their system in Peterborough everything that it should be. When the new building is completed nothing will be lacking.

Fall Assizes Opened To-day Before Mr. Justice Magee

Two Civil and One Criminal Case on the Docket—Presiding Justice Comments on the Absence of Crime—Moore Versus C. G. E. First Case Called.

The Fall Assizes of the High Court of Justice for the County of Peterborough, opened at the Court House this afternoon at one o'clock before the Honorable Mr. Justice Magee.

The docket this session is light, there being only three cases, two civil and one criminal action. The civil cases are Moore vs. the Canadian General Electric Co., and McCrohan vs. Kelly, particulars of which have already been published, and the criminal case is that of Herbert Meehan, who is charged with having committed rape upon Mary Payne on the 31st of May last. The plaintiff is a young English woman and had only been in Peterborough a few months, when the assault is alleged to have been committed.

MEMBERS IOF THE BAR

The members of the bar present were Messrs. D. O'Connell, K. C., F. McWilliams, G. N. Gordon, A. O. Langley, Lakefield, F. D. Kerr, E. L. Goodwill, and N. F. Patterson, Crown Prosecutor, of Owen Sound.

In his address to the Grand Jury, Justice Magee said that it was a were such a small number of cases. matter of congratulation to the county and to the people, that there The fact that there was only one criminal case was particularly gratifying. The bulk of criminal cases, said Mr. Magee, were now disposed of without a jury, being dealt with by police magistrates and by the county judge. However, in a county of the population of Peterborough, one might expect more cases of this nature. Usually, serious cases of this kind had to come before a jury and there was one on the docket for the present assizes. The seriousness of the crime of rape was enlarged upon by the presiding justice, who outlined the case of Payne vs. Meehan, in detail, and informed the jury that it was their duty to find whether the evidence justified a true bill being brought in against the prisoner.

Regarding conditions at the County Jail, Justice Magee, said he had been informed that there were nine prisoners under sentence there at present time. Of these, seven had been committed on the charge of vagrancy.

The fact that there should be such little criminality with such a large number of vagrancy was commented upon The term vagrancy implied that some crime had been committed. In fact, vagrancy was a criminal offence. It was often the case in places where there was no place where indigent persons could be cared for, that they were sent to jail as vagrants.

The Grand Jury were also instructed regarding their duties as to inspecting the public institutions.

The first case called was that of Moore vs the Canadian General Electric Company, in which the plaintiff is suing the company for $2,000 for injuries sustained while in the employ of the defendants. He claims that his injuries were received as a result of the defendant company not taking proper steps to prevent their employees being injured. The defendants contend that Moore received his injuries on account of his own negligence. The details of the accident have already been published, and in brief are:

Moore was working on the new transformer building last spring, when a scantling fell from some distance above him and, in falling, struck his left foot, smashing it badly. He has since been unable to work and spent several weeks at Nicholls Hospital.

The case is in progress this afternoon R. F. McWilliams is appearing for the plaintiff and F. D. Kerr for the defendants.

C.P.R. STOCK ROSE 14 POINTS

Special to the Review.

New York, Sept. 30.—The shorts in Canadian Pacific were cornered on the stock exchange today and a sensational rise of 14 points in that stock took place. The stock had been declining steadily for several days past, and everyone got short of it on the tip that it was going below 150. It touched 157 this morning and then rallied slowly to 160 only to fall back to 158 again.

In the afternoon when the shorts sellers went into the loan crowd to borrow the stock to make their short contracts good, they found there was none to be had. The bulls had taken everything that had been sold and then refused to lend it. The result was a panic by the shorts, as they tried to cover and found the market also bare of stock. The price jumped in leaps and bounds until it touched 171 and closed at 170, showing a net advance of 12 points for the day. What stock was loaned today, brought a premium of 1-8 over night.

The general market, after showing extreme weakness in the early dealings, rallied with C. P. R. and closed strong.

G. T. R. TIME TABLE CHANGED TO-DAY

The new time table on the G.T.R. for the fall and winter seasons went into effect today. The Belleville train, which formerly left here at 2 p.m., left ten minutes earlier today. The trains to Lakefield are considerably changed. The one leaving here at 5.40 and returning at 8.20 has been cancelled, and the one that formerly left at five minutes to twelve does not depart until 12.20 now.

MARRIED

EXCITING CHASE AFTER BLACK BEAR

Mr. Guy Quartermaine, Ruffled Fur of Brain Who Had Close Call.

Messrs. Guy Quartermaine, son of Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine, secretary of the Board of Trade, and Mr. Fred Reid, of the Bell Telephone Co., returned Saturday from a week's outing in Cavendish and Anstruther townships. They report having had a most enjoyable time, and spending most of it at hunting. They did not get many birds, the leaves preventing them from seeing them. They saw a black bear looking over a ledge of rock. Guy Quartermaine got one shot at brain and flurfled the fur of the animal but the ball failed to take effect. The bear made for the woods. Messrs. Quartermaine and Reid followed it for half a mile, but were afraid to give chase for any greater distance owing to fear of being lost in the thick woods. The Peterborough young men while away were the guests of the Cavendish Lumber Co., and speak in highest terms of the treatment accorded them by every resident they ran across.

RECOVERED THE WATCH

Mr. Geo. Kelly, while working on row of Carew's docks at Petrie's mills dropped his watch into about eight feet of water. Marking the spot with a buoy he obtained a long tin dinner horn sort of affair with a glass in the larger end. Weighting this to sink it he was enabled to see his watch without difficulty and said he could have used a five cent piece or a shirt stud. The watch had so tight a case that, though it was in the water three hours, it had not stopped. — Bobcaygeon Independent

TRIPPING OVER ITS OWN FEET

New York Sun Says Labor Logic is Good Deal of Mystery

According to Mr. Sargent, the commissioner-general of immigration, American labor is engaged in the complicated enterprise of trying to lift itself with one hand while holding itself down with the other. He says that "the fact that the United States pays higher wages than any other country on earth brings immigration here."

Of the truth of that statement there can be no doubt. Some of our immigrants come for other reasons, but the inducement to the great majority is the possibility of getting two dollars a day instead of two dollars a week. If our business slackens and wages fall the tide of immigration shows at once the close watch which the emigrant keeps on the American wage scale. The number of arrivals lessens and many of those of earlier arrivals go home with a little bundle of savings. Labor fights steadily for higher wages and almost as steadily opposes immigration. It puts up the premium and strives to beat back the hands which reach out to seize it.

Labor's ideal is monopoly of the labor market. It would limit the number of workers and so force from the community a higher wage than that compelled by competition. It may be only a coincidence and it may be the operation of an economic law, but the fact is that never in our history have wages been so high as during the last few years, the period of our heaviest immigration. Labor is disposed to overlook the fact that immigrants bring mouths to feed, and backs to clothe, as well as brawn. It appears not to see that the producers who frighten it are also consumers to keep it busy.

Labor logic is a good deal of a mystery anyway. Sometimes it goes to the point; sometimes it has the trick of stumbling over its own feet —New York Sun

Eyes Keen For Colors.

A young man who had made application for the position of clerk in the silk department of a large store was questioned closely as to the exact shade of a great variety of samples shown him. "We do that," the superintendent explained, "to make sure that you are not color blind. A dry goods store is the one place where color blindness is a positive bar to efficiency. Very often you hear of color blind workmen in all other branches of business. There are, it appears, even color blind engineers and color blind artists, but the big stores absolutely shut out men who have not a keen eye for all colors."—New York Post.

They All Thought About Alike.

Three "tired" citizens—a lawyer, a doctor and a newspaper man—sat in a back room in the gray light of the early dawn. On the table were many empty bottles and a couple of packs of cards. As they sat in silence a rat scurried across the hearth into the darkness beyond. The three men shifted their feet and looked at each other uneasily. After a long pause the lawyer spoke. "I know what you fellows are thinking," he said; "you think I thought I saw a rat, but I didn't."—Argonaut.

Observant Man.

It is a popular belief that no men "understand dress." Still, it should be known that they have a sort of rough appreciation of general effects. They can distinguish between the woman who dresses well by instinct and one who does so with an effort. They are able to recognize at a glance the girls and women who go through life in the wrong kind of garments and wearing hats which infatuation has impelled them to buy against their better judgment. — London Lady's Pictorial.

SITUATION OF ONTARIO BANK

There May be Statement for Shareholders in December

Although Curator Stavert, who is winding up the affairs of the Ontario Bank, has made no report yet, it has been learned authoritatively that three situations confront the mass of shareholders, the receiving of a very small dividend, the declaration of no dividend, or possibly a call on the shares.

It is planned to hold a meeting of directors and shareholders early in December, when some sort of report will be made by the curator.

MAY BE A CALL

"If," said a man entitled to know, this morning, "there is any forced liquidation of Ontario Bank investments, the losses will be so great, owing to the stringency of the money market, that the shareholders may be forced to pay a call on their shares. In any event, in the most favorable of liquidations, the dividend they may receive, if any, will be so small as to be infinitesimal."

McGILL A WITNESS.

It is understood that the suits against former President Cockburn, and Director Glass, will be proceeded with this fall, and Charles McGill will be brought down from Kingston as a witness.

The general action against the directors has not been as yet launched, and thee expendiency of bringing it on will form one of theee matters to be discussed at the next meeting.

The prospect before the shareholders today is in direct antagonism to that contained in the expression of opinion of some former directors that there would be 75 cents on the dollar for shareholders when the bank was wound up.

Express Train Was Wrecked; Eight Killed and Many Injured

Eight Dead, Score Injured in Train Wreck at Bellaire.

Operator Failed to Throw Switch—Train Dashed Into Siding—No Time to Apply Brakes — Engines Completely Smashed—Smoker Telescoped—Engineer Burned to a Crisp—Victims Entangled in Wreckage.

Wheeling, W. Va., Sept. 30.—Eight men were killed, four fatally injured and seventeen more or less seriously hurt late Saturday evening, when the Chicago & Wheeling express train No. 14, on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, was wrecked in the yards at Bellaire, O., a few miles below this city. There are no Canadians among the dead.

Operator Responsible.

The wreck was due, it is said, to the failure of an operator to throw a switch. The westbound freight had received orders to meet the passenger at the western limits of the Bellaire yard, and was moving slowly along the siding. At the point where the wreck occurred, there is a very sharp curve, which prevents the engineers of eastbound trains from seeing more than a few feet ahead. The passenger train swung around the curve very rapidly, being three hours late, and should have gone on in safety on the main line. The switch to the siding, however, had not been turned, and the train shot on to the siding and into the freight. There was scarcely time to apply the brakes and no time for the engine men to jump.

Engines Reduced to Junk.

The two big engines were reduced to junk by the impact, but the worst damage was done to the smoker, which was telescoped so completely by the baggage car that every seat was thrown out of the coach. Every occupant of the smoker was badly injured. The passengers in the other day coaches and two Pullmans were thrown from their seats, but not seriously injured.

Engineer Galbraith was burned to a crisp. The injured were taken to the Glendale, W. Va., and Bellaire hospitals.

General Manager Fitzgerald, who was in the neighborhood on an inspection tour, and General Superintendent W. C. Loree of Wheeling personally superintended the rescue work. Great difficulty was experienced in removing the injured passengers from the wrecked smoker. Work was slow because every movement of the debris caused someone to shriek with pain, the victims being entangled in a mass of timbers and twisted iron.

Theatrical Company's Experience.

Among the passengers on the wrecked train were the members of Richard Carlos Spring Chicken Opera Co., which was to have played at Wheeling yesterday. All the members of the company escaped serious injury, except Alfred Belby, the musical director. It was found necessary to amputate his right arm, thus ending his career in the profession. He was riding in the smoker and was found with a heavy timber tightly binding him by the arms.

Engineer's Terrible Ordeal.

Engineer H. A. Lipscomb of the passenger train was caught beneath his engine, and it was found impossible to remove the broken iron from his body on account of the way in which one of his legs was entangled. Escaping steam across his face made it impossible to administer anaesthetics, and as a result physicians amputated the leg as he lay there conscious.

Despite the burning steam and the pain of the operation he bore it bravely.

In St. Luke's church on Sunday afternoon, an interesting ceremony took place, when the holy rite of baptism was administered to the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Cyril Hill. Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, rector of St. Luke's performed the ceremony. The godfathers of the child were Dr. J. T. I. Halliday, and Lord Strathcona. Mrs. (Hon.) President Leary Extends Thanks

Is Grateful to Those Who Patronized Industrial Fair

This includes the citizens and outside visitors who patronized the exhibition, the merchants who displayed their wares on the grounds and the numerous exhibitors in the different classes.

Although very much disappointed at the heavy fall of rain on the last day of the fair, President Leary is greatly pleased with the record-breaking attendance of the second day. "I don't think such a large crowd ever attended an exhibition in Peterborough before," he said. And beyond a doubt he is right.

Fine Programme at "The Crystal"

Good Moving Pictures—Illustrated Song is "Way Down East Among the Shady Maple Trees"

The bill now being presented at "The Crystal" for the first part of this week is a particularly good one. "Crime in the Mountains," is a graphic motion picture and the other picture, "Frolics of Ding Ding's Imps," is original and entertaining. "Way Down East Among the Shady Maple Trees," the illustrated song, tells a pretty story and is excellently rendered by Miss Edwards.

Frederick Dutton of London, appeared in the police court yesterday on a charge of selling his son's chickens to buy liquor.

City Should Buy Grounds

This is the Opinion of Mr. J. M. Brooks One of the Fair Directors

Mr. J. M. Brooks, one of the directors of the Peterborough Industrial fair, is of opinion that the city should buy the fair grounds and control the fair.

He thinks that the buildings on the grounds are not in keeping with the size of Peterborough, from either a standpoint of modernity or accommodation and further suggests that all the buildings be constructed on that portion of the grounds on which the race course is. The premises on which they stand at present could be divided into building lots or used for any other purpose that might suggest itself. Mr. Brooks thinks that good athletic grounds for games and sports of various kinds, could be made in the ring inside the track.

MISSING BIRDS WERE RETURNED

Mr. Jas. Baptie Had His Stolen Hamburgs Restored to Him

At the exhibition grounds on Friday night, Mr. Jas. Baptie, the well known poultry man of Springville, missed a coop of Golden Hamburgs from the poultry tent. He reported his loss to Supt. Bennett and, as Mr Baptie had a pretty shrewd idea of who took the birds, Mr. Bennett went to the party in question and informed him that the fowl must be returned the next day or else there would be a prosecution for theft.

The result was that the stolen Hamburgs were returned and on Saturday Mr. Baptie had recovered his valuable birds.

GIVES THIS VERY SIMPLE TEST

To Find Out if the Kidneys are Affected and How to Cure Them

A well-known authority states that there are more cases of kidney trouble here now than ever before, while recent reports show that more people succumb each year to some form of kidney disease than any other cause.

When there is sickness examine the urine. Rheumatism is only a symptom of kidney trouble. It is nothing more or less than excessive uric acid in the blood, which the sluggish, inactive kidneys have failed to sift out, leaving it to decompose and settle about the joints and muscles, causing intense suffering; frequently resulting in deformity; often reaching the heart when death ensues.

Pains across the back, frequent, painful and suppressed urination and other symptoms of weak bladder are not the only signs of kidney trouble; many cases of stomach disease, headache, pain in the heart, inactive liver, etc., are but symptoms; the cause of which can be traced to feeble, clogged kidneys.

The physicians for the insurance companies always carefully examine and report on the condition of the urine. It is a certain sign of sickness or health of the human body.

A test of the urine should be made by every man and woman at least once each year. A simple test is to void a small quantity of urine in a bottle or glass and let it stand over night; next morning, if there is a reddish brick-dust sediment, or white, cheesy substance present, either consult some reputable physician or take a good vegetable treatment. The following prescription is recommended highly in these cases, and if desirable the sufferer can mix it at home. Any good prescription pharmacy has the ingredients, which are harmless and inexpensive: Compound Kargon, one ounce; Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well and use in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. Where any of the symptoms enumerated above are present, good results are sure to follow immediately the use of this simple prescription.

Some Dates of Fall Exhibitions

Keene and Millbrook Shows Will be Held This Week

The fall fair season will be lively for a few days.

The next exhibition, in which Peterborough people are interested, will take place at Keene village on Wednesday and Thursday of this week, Oct. 2nd and 3rd. The Otonabee Agricultural Society has made many improvements to the grounds and the entry list is the largest on record.

On Thursday and Friday, Oct. 3rd and 4th, the big Millbrook Central Fair will come off and a large number will attend.

On Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, October 8th and 9th, the East Peterborough Agricultural Society will hold its annual show at Norwood.

Among the features of interest will be a Marathon road race, which is arousing considerable enthusiasm.

Acquitted on Charge of Theft

Mrs. Wm. Duncan charged with the theft of a gold chain from the National hotel a week ago, appeared before His Worship Magistrate Dumble on Saturday afternoon and was discharged. Mr. R. F. McWilliams appeared for the defendant and explained that while his client was working at the hotel, she found the chain and had intended to leave it at the office, but there was no one in at the time. His Worship accepted the explanation and with some good advice allowed Mrs. Duncan to go.

J. Barlow has been committed for trial at Moose Jaw, on a charge of attempting to poison a harvest hand.

Fine Exhibits at Bobcaygeon Fair

All Departments Well Filled—Good Attendance

The fair held at Bobcaygeon on Thursday was quite a success, and despite the bad weather, large crowds attended. The exhibits were first-class, especially those in the ladies' department where a great quantity of very fine and intricate work was displayed. The other departments of the show were also filled.

At about 1.30 a large procession of school children, headed by the Sylvester band of Lindsay, and followed by a long line of prettily decorated carriages, started in front of the Rockland House and led the way for the crowd to the fair grounds. Each child waved a flag as he marched, and some of the rigs in the procession were very prettily festooned, sheaves of grain being bound to each spoke of the wheels, and to the body of the carriage, and the hubs of the wheels being buried in flowers. A decorated dog cart, some pony riders and a couple of waggons with two span of horses drawing each, drew quite a bit of favorable comment.

When the crowd reached the grounds the children marched onto the band stand and sang a few patriotic songs very prettily. They also gave a well executed flag drill.

Among the many exhibitors of ladies' work are Mrs. J. W. Junkin, of Fenelon Falls, Mrs. Stinson, Red Rock; Mrs. W. J. Read, Bobcaygeon; Mrs. S. Oliver, Lindsay and others too numerous to mention. The work was all of the best and deserving of the highest praise.

In the lower hall were large quantities of apples, grain, roots, vegetables, hot-house plants, and preserved fruit. There were some very fine mangolds, and a large pumpkin or two, which brought forth numerous comments. Among the many exhibitors were Mr. T. Fairbairn, Mr. J. A. Wallis, Mr. Roland Thurston, and Mr. W. D. Winters. In the sheep exhibitors were Mr. B. Seymore, Mr. T. Robertson, Mr. R. Robertson, and Mr. J. Johnson. The principal exhibitors of hogs were Messrs. R. E. Thurston and T. Fairbairn. The stock exhibit was rather small for certain reasons, but what there was of it was good. Messrs. J. W. McDonnell, J. J. Robertson, Dunsford, C. W. Heaslip, Ross Kimble and R. Thurston were the principal exhibitors.

Mr. Boyd had a fine herd of half-breed buffaloes on the ground which attracted a good deal of attention. The Society built bought from the pedigreed herd of W. W. Ballantyne, Stratford, was much admired. The directors were much pleased with the attendance this year and report the total number of exhibits, 1350, to be far in excess of any year, since the fair began. Quite a crowd of people from Lindsay, Dunsford, and places along the C.P.R. were present and enjoyed the fun a great deal. An open Farmers' race caused a great deal of amusements. There were four starters and the track could take for three. The man who had fourth place persisted in getting up in the places allotted to the other horses. All were amateurs, and caused great excitement and merriment by their methods, the reins trailing out behind, and all the horses sometimes running at one time. The crowd thoroughly enjoyed every minute of the race.

In the evening a concert and dance was held in the Town Blues Hall, and large numbers attended. It was the most successful fair held in Bobcaygeon in years.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for an ycase of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. F. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

The "Sailor Boy" brand of canned goods are the best that are put up. They never fail to please. Try a few cans.

AMUSEMENTS

ENGAGEMENT CLOSED.

The Summers' Stock Company closed their Peterborough engagement Saturday night, when "The Price of Silence," a strong melodrama, was presented at the Grand opera house. A big audience enjoyed the production which was well put on in every respect. The specialties were of the usual high standard. Mr. Summers and his capable company played to good houses all week and will be welcomed back again.

There are two attractions, both good ones, booked for this week. On Thursday night Guy Bros.' minstrels will hold the boards, and on Saturday, matinee and night, Allen Doone and his company will present "A Romance in Ireland," a high class production.

HARRY MAY

Saw you cot with its blooming flowers gay,
In it lived honest-hearted Harry May,
The pride was he of that humble cot,
And often cheered the parents humble lot.
There too, the robin would sweetly sing,
Its morning and its evening theme;
But now no robin sings near that spot,
And no flowers now grow around that cot,
No more the owner can you see,
Pruning and trimming the early rose tree,
But now all the flowers are withered away,
For the owners are laid in the damp cold clay.
But where is Harry, that child so young and fair?
That used to hop out his evening prayer,
Go ask the glittering bar room, for it can tell,
How Harry used to drink and how he fell.
For there he would go his evening hours to pass,
There he would go, and take that poisoning glass.
There he would go his manly brains to muddle,
There he would go the cards and dice shuffle.
Yet this father would often kindly speak to him,
Begging of him to leave the path of sin,
And this mother too, would speak words of cheer;
But Harry was deaf and dumb to all he would hear,
For at last he added sin to that already done,
For he left his parents humble home
From town to town his race he ran,
Till picked up by some degraded man,
Who taught him how to pick and steal,
Yet often left him without a meal.
Till one fair day on the race course ground,
Poor Harry found himself in handcuffs bound.
Straight before the judge he was brought,
But cared not for what he did or thought,
For while all eyes were on him cast,
He pleaded guilty to the charge as bold as brass.
Guilty said the judge of stealing this watch and chain,
Then, Harry May, you make my duty plain,
And as you seem so bold and void of shame,
We will put a stop to your thieving game.
Ten years we you to prison send.
And drops and trust when your time does end,
You will come home and your ways and manners mend,
And now in yonder jail could you peep in,
You would see a young man sitting pale and thin,
Yes, there he sits a most pitiful sight,
With his clothes striped both black and white.
There he sits and sighs and weeps,
As if his very heart was going to break,
Yes, there he sits and sighs and weeps
While scalding tears run down his cheeks,
Soon his parents the news did hear,
And over their child's misfortune shed many a tear,
But they did not much longer live,
For sorrow, and shame their grave had dug.
A few more years they lingered on,
Then silently sunk into the tomb.
And now, in yon church yard as you pass by,
A little white grave stone you there can spy,
Which says to all who pass that way,
Here lie the broken-hearted parents of Harry May.
How lived Harry, and how played he his part,
When out of prison he came with a broken heart.
In a bar room you could him find,
Miserable, wretched and wild.
There he would sit day by day,
And with the cards and dice box play,
Thus for years this life he run,
And died at last a drunken bum.

Signed,
CHAS. BRANDON.

THE PETERBOROUGH FAIR

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is over and it is gratifying to record that, in spite of the most untoward circumstances, so far as the weather was concerned, it was a success. Had the elements been at all propitious on the closing day, there would have been a handsome surplus. As it is, it is thought that the management will, financially, come out about even. The exhibition was well managed, and the directors did everything in their power to place it on a high level.

President Leary, Secretary Hall, Supt. Bennett, and all the other officials, worked assiduously, and left no stone unturned to ensure its success so far as they were concerned.

The entry list was larger than ever before, and the crowd on the second day, when fine weather prevailed, was a record breaker. The exhibits were good and thoroughly representative in character and, in many departments, the showing was away ahead of previous years.

Saturday, the closing day, should have witnessed even a larger attendance than was present on Friday, but the rain descended and kept falling all day. There was no let-up, and all the events on the track and the performances before the grand stand, had to be cancelled. It was, indeed, a dull, dreary day for which the directors were in no way responsible. They did their best, but they could not prevent Jupiter Pluvius from upsetting his tank.

However, it is pleasing to state that the fair is on the up grade; the corner has been turned; there is more enthusiasm evidenced on the part of the citizens generally, and the business men have taken a hand and are loyally supporting the institution.

The management have certainly done well and, although the weather was "again" them, they have every reason to go ahead and persevere in their splendid undertaking.

Those, who visited the fair on Friday, came away with nothing but words of praise, and it is certain that, had fine weather been the order on Saturday, there would have been fully 10,000 people on the grounds.

They were not only sadly disappointed, but the directors as well. However, all have the consolation of knowing that, so far as human effort could avail, everything was carried out in a business-like, progressive manner and, after what has been done this year in spite of many obstacles, after all that has been accomplished, in the words of Hon. J. I. Tarte, "Just wait until you see us next year."

PEN POINTS

The Toronto Globe on Saturday contained some excellent cuts of Mr. R. L. Borden's successful Canadian tour. The engravings were made from splendid photographs by Mr. Wm. Banks, jr., of the reportorial staff, who accompanied the popular and talented chieftain on his trip through Ontario. One picture shows Mr. Borden and Mr. J. G. H. Bergeron, M.P., of Beauharnois, Que., sitting on the top deck of a steamer on the Otonabee river on the occasion of their recent visit to Peterborough. Another one affords a view of the Opposition leader addressing an enthusiastic gathering of his admirers at the railway station at Orangeville.

It is in the interests of the genuine settler on the land that the Conservative party is fighting against the system of plunder of the public domain that is going on in the West, "The land for the settler, and not for the political speculator and middlemen," is the policy. The area of a kingdom has been thrown to political favorites under the form of Saskatchewan land grants, grazing leases and irrigation concessions. For this same land the farmer will pay high prices to the political beneficiary. Nothing has been done to protect the Western settler from the extortion of the land grabber, the holder of timber leases, the coal mine owner and various other monopolists who have been favored by government. Mr. Borden thinks that it is time to consider the man who does the work in the country, the original producer of all, the principal taxpayer, the great consumer of imports, the man for whom the railways carry, the man who pays the postage, who owns or ought to own the public franchises and the public domain.

The Review has received a handsome souvenir number of the Brockville Times, issued in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of that excellent paper. The edition is superbly printed on finished paper and is replete with interesting information regarding Brockville, its industrial, commercial, social and religious development. Views of the town's leading business houses and business men are shown and the descriptive matter is admirably written, while the letterpress could not be improved. The Brockville Times issued its first number on Sept. 27th, 1882, and now occupies a fine cement brick publishing house with 7,000 feet of floor space. Its proprietor, Mr. A. T. Wilgress, may well feel proud of his property. The Times is a bright, readable and wide awake daily, and a tower of strength to the Conservative party in Eastern Ontario. Its plant is strictly up-to-date. Recently a big Hickok ruling machine, a Montgee folder, a Miehle press for fine art work and other machines have been added, making the outfit at the disposal of the establishment sufficient to meet every demand. The Times has, by its enterprise and public spirit deserved success, and it is a pleasure to learn that it has always been extended a kindly, generous and loyal support. Long may it flourish.

LAID TO REST

Funeral of the Late Frederick Howson Was Largely Attended.

The funeral of the late Frederick Howson, who passed away on Friday last, took place on Sunday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery, from the family residence, 188 Edinburgh street. There was a large attendance, many carriages being in the cortege. The deceased was a popular and highly thought of young man, and many floral tributes bore silent, yet fragrant evidence of the esteem and confidence in which he was held. So numerous were the offerings that it was necessary to have one special conveyance to carry them to the city of the dead. The Hamilton pattern makers, Hamilton; the Ideal Works, Port Hope; the C.G.E. Angling Club, Peterborough Lock Co., Camp '05-'07 Peterborough; Pattern Makers' League of North America; the Young Men's Guild of St. Paul's church, and other representative bodies sent pretty floral emblems, including the Y.M.C.A. boys, and C.G.E. pattern makers.

At the house Rev. E. A. Pearson, of George street Methodist church, and Rev. Dr. Talling, of St. Paul's church, conducted the services.

The pall bearers were Messrs. F. Dawson, Garnet Galley, A. Laing, H. Cook, R. McKee and P. Gilbert.

Arriving at the cemetery the remains were placed in the vault, Rev. Mr. Pearson reading the burial service. The remains will shortly be transferred to a cement vault, which will be built in the family plot.

GRAFTERS' CLUB IS THE LATEST

Unique Name for Local Social Organization

Peterborough has a "Grafters' Club." This may not look well for the city, although no doubt many people have among their acquaintances several parsons whom they would nominate for active membership, but happy to say, the membership of the Grafters' Club is not made up of astute politicians, etc. etc. Far from it. A number of young men have banded together for social purposes, have secured club rooms, and for some reason or other have christened their organization the "Grafters' Club." The membership is not yet very large, but it is growing, and apparently the club is going to prosper. The "Grafters' Club," be it understood, has no relation to the Lemon Club, of recent and somewhat painful recollection.

Polile Court Will Meet at 10 O'clock

Commencing tomorrow police court sessions will be held at 10 o'clock instead of at 9, as has been the custom during the summer months. The prisoners who spend the night behind the bars, will have to wait an hour longer before they are brought before the Magistrate. The frequenters of the court will be pleased to know that they will not have to be on hand before 10 o'clock to hear the daily grind at the mill of justice.

CONFIDENCE IS STILL ABROAD

Progress of the West Will Not be Interrupted

The Calgary News says: During the past week, there has been a vast improvement in the weather and the later days, have been amongst the brightest and best which have been experienced this summer.

The result has been beneficial to the crops and the hearts of the community, which had been depressed to some extent, have been considerably revived.

A close calculation of the ill that may result from the recent severe weather places the loss at not more than 10% to 12 per cent., and this will more than be compensated for by the enhanced market value of the grain in the West this year.

A feeling of confidence prevails everywhere in this western country, and there is every reason to believe that the progress that has been so observable during the past few years will be not only maintained, but considerably improved, when the returns from the crops come in and loosen up the bank stringency that has prevailed for some months past.

VISITOR FROM NEW MEXICO

Mr. Douglas Stocker Visiting His Brother in Peterboro'

Mr. Walter Stocker, has as his guest his brother, Mr. Douglas Stocker, of New Mexico, who will spend a couple of weeks in the city. Mr. Stocker has been away from Peterborough for the past two and a half years, and is doing well in the southern land. He is engaged in mechanical work for which good wages are paid in that country, from $4 to $5 per day being paid to good men.

Mr. Stocker has much information of interest about New Mexico, the conditions and people. Bull fighting remains the national sport of the people, and in Mexico city, thousands of people gather to see the contests between the animals and men. These are usually held on Sunday, and the spectators do not consider that they have had a good day's sport unless a man has been killed or maimed.

Mr. Stocker will return to New Mexico in about two weeks, going by way of San Francisco.

OLD CHURCH MOVED ACROSS THE ROAD

Large Attendance at Sunday Services in Park St. Church.

The Park street congregation worshipped on the west side of the road for the first time yesterday. The services were very hearty and the day's income was exceptionally large. The Sunday School was very full, each class being well represented. The banking up and the approaches of the church will be attended to at once, which will ensure comfort in worship during the short time that the structure will be needed.

The services for the week are as usual Monday, B.Y.P.U., subject, "Lord's Supper." Wednesday, public service. Friday, building committee.

Is Now Licensed as Lay Reader

At the morning service yesterday, Rev. Dr. Langfeldt presented Mr Arthur Kingdon with the Archbishop's License for Lay Reader and Catechist. Mr. Kingdon is a most faithful church worker, and, as the rector said, of great assistance to him in the work of the church. It gave him great pleasure to have Mr Kingdon thus honored, and encouraged in the spiritual work he was doing.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH

The following meetings will be held at St. Luke's during the week:

On Monday at 7.30 the Girls' Auxiliary will meet.

The Brotherhood of St. Andrew will meet on Tuesday at 8 p.m. A Junior Chapter will be formed and the boys are requested to attend.

There will be a meeting of the Mothers' Guild on Wednesday at 3 p. m.

The W. A. will meet on Thursday afternoon at 2.30.

A meeting of the Parochial Missionary collectors will be held on Friday at 4 p.m. at the residence of Mrs L. Turner.

On Friday at 8 p.m. the first social of the newly formed Anglican Young People's Association, will take place, to which all young people are invited. A strong committee has the programme in hand and a pleasant evening is assured. Refreshments will be served.

Collections were taken up in the Sunday school yesterday for the support of the field secretary for Sunday Schools, whose appointment was recently recommended by the Synod.

Best Off Highwaymen.

Chatham, Sept. 30.—William Stedman, a local butcher, who boards on Edgar street, was the victim of a couple of hold-up men while crossing a dark lot near the G. T. R. depot. Stedman had been in Toronto with some cattle. He was waylaid by two unknown men, one of whom struck him on the head with a short stick. Stedman, however, swung out and hit the nearest of the men with all the force of his strong right arm. The men decamped.

Stoney Creek Hotel Burned.

Hamilton, Sept. 30.—The Elkaino Hotel, Stony Creek, was burned to the ground early yesterday morning. It is believed that it was set on fire. Trouble started in the washhouse and the flames spread to the hotel building, which was frame. The furniture and contents, with the exception of a piano and some other articles, were destroyed. The loss is placed at about $3,000. Frank Chapman was the proprietor and William Sutherland owned the building.

Barn Burned.

Comber, Sept. 30.—The barn and cattle stables of Hugh Lindsay, a few miles south of this village, were destroyed by fire Saturday evening.

RAILROAD WRECKERS.

More Strenuous Workers Than Fire Fighters in Big Cities.

The career of the wrecker on a big railroad is like that of a fireman in the fire department of a big city, only more strenuous. Like the fireman, the wrecker is on duty every second day and night, and, like the fireman, the wrecker braves blizzards and sleet storms, often facing hardships and cruel suffering and even death for the saving of life and property. But whereas even in emergency the fireman never covers an area greater than the most populous section of a city—the line traversed by the wrecker covers a hundred or more miles—and whereas the fireman is in touch with at least such comforts as he may snatch while on his feet, not infrequently the wrecker is landed in the heart of a wilderness miles and miles from the nearest town, and the pangs of hunger are added to privation.

Sometimes when a big wreck has happened and cars and engines are piled high on crushed and mangled bodies the wrecker is rushed through darkness and snowdrift to work from twenty-four to forty-eight hours without even a chance to take his cap off, and just as his "job" is nearly completed along comes another alarm that sends him sixty or seventy miles in an opposite direction, where box cars and coal cars have heaped themselves thirty feet high, paralyzing the road and costing thousands of dollars' worth of loss in time and prestige almost every hour.

Despite these hardships, the danger, the excitement and the bustle of the work endear it to the men.—A. W. Rolker in Appleton's.

EASY FOR MORPHY.

Story of the Great Chess Master and a Celebrated Painting.

Paul Morphy, on his visit to Philadelphia, was the guest of a clergyman, the Rev. Mr. H. On his arrival at the minister's home the chess master was first ushered into the library, and his attention was at once attracted by a painting over the mantel, which was a fine copy of a celebrated painting representing a game of chess between a young man and the devil, the stake being the young man's soul.

The artist had most graphically depicted the point in the game where it was apparently the young man's move, and he seemed just to realize the fact that he had lost the game, the agony of despair being shown in every line of his features and attitude, while the devil from the opposite side of the table gloated over him with fiendish delight. The position of the game appeared utterly hopeless for the young man, and Mr. H. said he had often set it up and studied it with his chess friends, and all agreed the young man's game was certainly lost.

Mr. Morphy walked up to the picture and studied it for several minutes, when finally, turning to Mr. H., he said:

"I can win the game for the young man."

Mr. H. was of course astonished and said, "Is it possible?"

Mr. Morphy replied, "Get out the men and board and let us look at it."

The position was set up, and in a few rapid moves he demonstrated a complete win for the young man, and the devil was checkmated.

Rice at Weddings.

At a wedding breakfast, according to What to Eat, a bridesmaid was heard to tell the true reason for rice being used at weddings. It was once believed that if on their wedding journey a newly wedded couple saw a flock of doves it would mean a long life of peace and happiness to them. A bridal party in passing so frightened a flock of these timid birds that they flew away in great alarm, and to avert the evil omen that their flight signified for the newly married couple rice was thrown in great quantities to lure the birds back to the place from which they had flown. This plan was so successful that the wedded pair went on their way rejoicing and lived ever afterward a happy and prosperous life. Since then rice has been used as a symbol of good luck, peace and happiness at weddings.

Variations of Cards.

There are an enormous number of possible variations of cards in card games. Every man when he takes up his cards at whist holds one out of 635,013,559,600 possible hands. The total number of variations possible among all players is so great as almost to exceed belief. It has been calculated that if a million men were to be engaged in dealing cards at the rate of one deal every minute day and night for 100,000,000 years they would have exhausted only a hundred-thousandth part of the variations of the cards.

Rome.

Rome is an eternal study. One of the popes asked some strangers whether they had been in Rome for days or weeks or for months.

"If you have been here but a short time," he said, "you may not return, but if you have been here for months you are sure to come back."—Boston Herald.

Labor Conditions Reviewed; Decline in Building Activity

Especially in Houses—Heavy Influx of Immigration Has Over Crowded the Labor Market in Peterboro —Good Progress on Public Buildings.

Ald. W. J. Johnston, the local correspondent for the Labor Gazette, sends the following interesting report from Peterborough for the month of August:—

The general condition of labor has not varied from that of last month. Building activity has somewhat declined, especially on houses. The heavy influx of immigration has overcrowded the labor market. Later on work will become more brisk as a number of large buildings now under way will be ready for woodworkers. The dredging of the channel of the Otonabee river is still being carried on giving employment to a large staff of men. The Bell Telephone Company is busy building conduits under ground. The erection of the new Collegiate Institute, Normal School and armories is being hurried to completion. The laying of granolithic sidewalks, the building of new sewers and the laying of waterworks piping provided work for the laborers. Goods for the fall trade were being imported by the retail merchants.

The Cavan swamp drain provides considerable employment. When completed large tracts of land will be drained and used for growing grain and pasture.

Grafton & Co. have decided to close their place of business on Saturday evenings at 10 o'clock instead of 11 o'clock, as heretofore. Wholesale and retail trade was active during August. Wages and hours of labor were unchanged, and no unrest was reported in the labor market. Banks reported fair business.

CONDITION OF LOCAL INDUSTRIES.

Agriculture—Work is practically mainly in harvesting the grain crop.

Lumbering—The lumbering industry has been very active, the companies here doing a very large export trade. The Charlton Lumber Company's season's cut consisted of 20,000 logs, equivalent to 12,000,000 feet of lumber.

Manufacturing—All establishments were very busy, employing full staffs and running full time.

Mining—The opening of ores from the mines at Marmora will greatly increase mining activity in this vicinity.

Railroad construction and employment.—The ballasting of roadbed and general section work were employing large forces of men.

CONDITION OF PARTICULAR TRADES.

Building.—All were actively employed. Carpenters and joiners, painters, etc., were busy.

Metal, engineering and shipbuilding.—Iron moulders, workers and helpers, machinists and engineers, steam engineers, electrical workers and linemen were busy, and brass workers of all kinds were busy. Blacksmiths, boilermakers, shipworkers, on repairs and remodelling, sheet metal workers, bicycle workers, tool sharpeners, horseshoers, jewellers, etc., found employment active.

Woodworking and furnishing.—Woodworkers, upholsters, varnishers and polishers, carriage and wagon makers were busy, and car builders, on repairs work, were actively employed, as were pattern makers and coopers.

Printing—The allied trades were well employed, notwithstanding that August is always considered a slack month on account of the holiday season.

Clothing—These trades had active employment, excepting hat makers, who found dull conditions.

Food and tobacco preparations.—All were actively employed, with tobacconists very busy.

Leather—Active conditions prevailed.

Miscellaneous—All experienced active conditions. Theatre employees became active towards the end of the month. Laundry workers were very busy.

Transport—Railway employees were never more active in every department, freight and tourist traffic being very heavy on all lines. Steamworkers of every class had a very busy month. Street railway employees, cabmen, hackmen, carters and draymen were very busy, and teamsters, busy.

Unskilled—This class was actively employed.

DISTRICT NOTES.

Work throughout the district consisted mainly of harvesting and threshing the grain, the crops turning out well. The apple crop is expected to be a good one. Berries were 15 cents a quart, which is considered high. New potatoes were selling at 25 cents per peck; butter, 24 cents; eggs, 20 to 22 cents a dozen; chickens, 90 cents to $1.00 a pair. Beef, which has been retailing at 15 to 17 cents a pound, has been reduced to 12 1-2-15 cents a pound. There was abundance of vegetables of all kinds. Four thousand five hundred and ninety-five boxes of cheese sold for 10 13-16 cents on the Peterborough market. Saw and grist mills and general stores reported business very active.

House-Cleaning To-day at The Exhibition Grounds

Supt. Bennett and His Men Straightening Things Up—Prize Monies to be Distributed on Oct. 15th.

The Peterborough Fair is all over. The exhibitors have removed all their exhibits and Supt. Bennett and his staff of men are busy straightening up the grounds and getting everything in ship-shape for the "big show" next fall. Secretary Hall will now be able to rest more easy and President Leary and the rest of the officials have been relieved for another year, of the great responsibility of making arrangements for an exhibition that proved a greater success, the weather considered, than was ever anticipated by the most optimistic.

All the prize winners have been decided, and practically all the exhibits were removed from the grounds by Saturday night. The gate receipts on Friday were the largest ever taken in on a single day, as any day in the history of Peterborough and were so great, in fact, that the secretary is able to report that there is no debit balance on his books, but that the big gate of the second day enables him to report an "even break" in the matter of the fair finances.

The secretary will be able to pay the prize money out on about the 15th of October, and would be obliged if all those having accounts against the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition would send them in at once.

It is pleasing to note that there was not a single accident, serious or trivial, during the time the fair was held, and not a pickpocket got his hand in. In fact, everything proceeded smoothly and satisfactorily to the officials, the exhibitors and the general public as well.

The Art Section in the main building at the fair last week held some notable specimens, conspicuous among which was the fine exhibit of photography by Herr Mendel, George street. Having studied under the best masters and professors in Germany Herr Mendel seeks to give his customers the full benefit of his high attainments in his arts. His special, strong points are, naturalness of pose, and the obtaining of the very best expression for his subjects.

One specially fine picture of a lady done in sepia, was selected by the judges of the Canadian Photographers' Association, as worthy of a place in the collection shown at the Toronto Industrial Fair. Other fine specimens of new and difficult processes were shown, and received a lot of attention.

Motorman Killed.

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—Hugh A. Hayes, a York street motorman, died in the General Hospital yesterday.

On Saturday a car he was running, belonging to the Ottawa Electric Railway Co., in some way collided with another. Hayes had a leg so badly injured that amputation was necessary, and he never rallied after the operation. He leaves three children.

Coroner Baptie is investigating.

SPORTING COMMENT

Bobby Kerr, the Hamilton sprinter, has won 39 firsts this year and has only been beaten twice.

Messrs. Chris Graham and A. Regan both say they will not have time to play rugby this fall.

There will be many entries in the Examiner road race and that interesting event promises to be better than ever this fall.

It seems rather unfortunate that the first rugby match of the season and the matinee of the Peterborough Turf Club should be held on the same day—Thanksgiving Day. There are doubtless many people who would like to see both.

THE TURF

Owing to a misprint in yesterday's Review, there was some confusion in the publishing of the order in which the horses finished in the 2.22 class at the second day of the exhibition. They finished as follows:

Hazel Belle, Dr. Johnston, Peterborough	1	1	1
Joe Allen, W. Simpson, Lindsay	2	2	3
Dr. Mac, Dr. Broad, Lindsay	4	3	2
Lady Gothard, M. Connors, Peterborough	3	4	4

Lindsay papers please copy.

"Gillie" Kearns, who drove Hazel Belle to victory in all three heats of the 2.22 class at the Peterborough Fair, handled the ribbons with a skill and knowledge that would do credit to a professional. He understands this mare well and displayed good judgment in regulating her speed.

Joe Allen, the fast stepper, owned by Mr. Wm. Simpson of Lindsay, covers the ground in fine style. He was a good second to Hazel Belle in all the heats of the 2.22 class, except the last one, which Dr. Mac., owned by Broad, another Scugogite, beat him out for second place.

City Queen, the property of Mr. L. Bennett, Port Hope, is one of the fittiest travellers seen here in many moons. City Queen gets there too.

Mr. Fred Peake, the genial Campbellford turfman, who was one of the judges of the speeding in the ring events at the exhibition, is one of the best posted and most enthusiastic horsemen in this part of the country. He was well pleased with the races and says the track is one of the best half mile courses in America.

Mr. A. Rountree was manager of the races in the absence of Mr. J. M. Brooks. Mr. Rountree is a former secretary of the Peterborough Turf Club and anything that happens in the world of harness racing that he doesn't know about isn't worth keeping track of.

Flying Cloud, owned by Mr. Jas Kelly and driven by Mr. Bert McCollum, his former owner, showed splendid form in the 2.40 class. Flying Cloud is a green one, and gives every promise of developing into a worthy dust gaiser. Mr. McCollum has exercised him for some months past and knows how to handle him to the best advantage.

Congratulations to Mr. Jack Gibson on winning the blue ribbon in the saddle horse class.

There is no reason why horse racing in Peterborough couldn't be made a success. On the second day of the Peterborough Fair, the races were clean and well contested although the horse that landed first money, pulled under the wire in the lead in all the heats. The time in both the 2.22 and 2.40 classes was fast.

The track at the Driving Park is without a doubt one of the finest in Canada, and Peterborough is a big enough city to make the racing game a paying proposition, provided it is conducted on square lines with everything above board. The Peterborough Turf Club will hold a matinee on Thanksgiving Day and from present indications it should be a success.

RUGBY

There will be a meeting of the executive of the Rugby club at 8.30 to-night at the Examiner office.

BOWLING

There will be a meeting of the bowlers to-morrow night at 8 o'clock at the Majestic Bowling Alleys. The meeting will be an important one and all bowlers are asked to be present. A schedule will be drawn up for the coming season and several clubs will be formed.

WANTED THE GIBLETS.

An Incident of Revolutionary Days in South Carolina.

There are innumerable stories of Revolutionary days in Charleston. The old ladies used to tell with glee how, when the British were supposed to be out of the way, the young fellows would come home to dance with them. A message would go to the nearest cousins and friends and a supper be cooked. It might be only rice and bacon, but it was good to hungry men, declares Charleston's historian, Mrs. Ravenal. The dance and the feast would continue until the stars grew pale.

Often these merrymakings were disturbed by the enemy, but there was always a negro or two on the watch, and the harsh note of the screetch owl or the cry of the whippoorwill would give the alarm, then "partings in hot haste," a rush for the horses, a sharp scuffle, a hot pursuit and perhaps a prisoner taken.

The young men had odd adventures. One young fellow betrayed himself by his appetite. He was pursued and had taken shelter at Mrs. Motte's place, on South Santee. She rolled him up in a carpet and, pushing it against the wall, told him to keep quiet until the enemy had gone and she could release him.

Unluckily he heard through the open window his hostess giving directions to the cook about the chickens which were to be dressed for the dragoons' dinner. He could not bear to be left out and thrust his head from the carpet chrysalis and cried out, "Keep the giblets for me!"

The soldiers heard, and he was at once caught and carried off to repent at leisure of his indiscretion.

DOUGHERTY ISLAND.

It Is the Most Remote and Desolate Spot on Earth.

Which is the loneliest, most desolate and most inaccessible island on the face of the globe? Many people would doubtless plump for one of the Crozets, in the south Atlantic ocean. And yet Hog Island, the westernmost of the group, is by no means an undesirable place of residence, abounding as it does in hares and rabbits, penguins, albatrosses and sea elephants.

Herd island, in the same seas, is far more isolated as well as more barren, but it possesses, as does Hog, a shelter hut for castaways, and it is visited by whalers occasionally. So, too, is South Georgia, but it has no shelter hut, and as it is right out of the track of shipping any one unlucky enough to be cast away thereon would stand a very poor chance of ever getting off alive.

Bouvet island, in the same seas, is visited even more rarely, and on the last occasion when a ship touched there five corpses were found frozen on the beach, grim mementos of some unrecorded tragedy of the sea. Possession island, in its turn, is still lonelier and more inhospitable than Bouvet.

But probably the palm in this direction must be ascribed to Dougherty island, on which, so far as is known, no landing has ever been effected. It has only been sighted twice in a century and is officially described in the admiralty sailing directions as "the most remote and isolated spot on earth."—Pearson's Weekly.

"DEAD" MAN IS ALIVE.

Father of Family Returns After Having Been Buried.

Astonishing is the story of a man's double, and with marks so distinctive as to deceive his own wife and family, which has come to light at Bickley, Kent. Arthur Albert Steer has just returned home to discover that, according to the records, he is dead. In a quiet spot in Bromley Cemetery his grave has plants and flowers growing upon it. Steer, who is between fifty and sixty years of age, belongs to Bickley, North Bromley. That place, however, was not large enough to hold his freedom-loving soul for long, so, now and again, he has gone out into the world, and it was while he was on one of these excursions that his family identified someone else's body as his and buried it with lamentation. In April a man's body was recovered from the Thames. He had fallen in the water from Chelsea bridge, and there was nothing to indicate his identity. A description appeared in the press under the heading, "Mystery of a one-eyed man," and Steer's eldest married daughter, Mrs. Seats, who then lived at Penge, felt convinced that it was her father. Nothing had been heard of him for five weeks, and he was depressed when they last saw him. The news was conveyed to Mrs. Steer's large family of grown-up sons and daughters, six of whom went to Horseferry road Mortuary and pronounced the body to be that of their father. The deceased had one eye missing—so had Steer; he had an exceptional ginger-colored moustache—as had Steer; he had a slightly broken nose—so had Steer. Also there was the evidence of a split toe and of spectacles in a coat pocket. The suit, marked "AP 100," was the only difficulty; but the family thought he might have acquired it recently. Mr. John Steer, the eldest son identified the body at the inquest, when the jury agreed that deceased was Arthur Albert Steer, and returned a simple verdict of "Found drowned." The funeral took place in the cemetery of St. Luke's, Bromley common. It was a pathetic little ceremony. The coffin, with Steer's name and the record of his birth and death on a breastplate, was covered with wreaths, carried in a hearse, behind which came two coaches conveying the sorrowing family. He was buried in a family grave, at each end of which a laurel bush was planted. Flowers have been placed upon it regularly ever since, and soon there would have been a tombstone. A fortnight ago some Bickley gasworkers were having a pleasure jaunt at Caterham, and in a public-house they met a man, who, hearing they came from Bickley, casually mentioned that a day or two before he had seen Steer. This provoked an offer of long odds. Wasn't Steer buried at Bromley? Being a man of great virtue, however, the stranger declined to take their money; it was a "cert," he said. Two of Steer's sons, John and Edward, made a cycle search of the district, and to add to the complications of the case they actually discovered another man named Steer, who was no relation, and was also one-eyed! Eventually the elusive Arthur Albert was tracked to Marden; but was not discovered. However, a butcher who knew him offered to tell him, when he saw him next, that a coroner's jury had pronounced him dead, and so it came about that the other night Arthur Albert Steer presented himself once more at the familiar portals of a Bickley public-house—and the apparition nearly gave the company apoplexy. Now he is at the house of his eldest son in Cannon road—a sad and apologetic man. The police were informed at once of this remarkable reappearance of the "dead," and the facts are to be laid before the coroner. Meanwhile, no one has the faintest idea who the man who was buried really is.

Elephants' Terrible Revenge.

The following exciting episode is translated from a native paper "Mambhum" for the "Amrita Bazar Patrira," Calcutta, from which the extract is taken:—"In Agrahayan last, a khera of the village Dalma, Pargana Barahabhum, having gone to his paddy field to inspect it, found a herd of elephants destroying his crop. Naturally he got enraged, and began to shoot arrows at the animals from behind a neighboring tree, which resulted in the death of a young elephant. No sooner did he notice this than the khera ran away, and took shelter in his cottage near by. Maddened at the death of the young elephant, the animals made a furious rush at the cottage, and surrounded and razed it to the ground. The khera, however, somehow or other, escaped with his life, climbed up a peepul tree, and took shelter on its topmost bough. Failing in their attempt, the animals roared in anger, and made another dash with aggravated fury toward the tree and surrounded it. Their strength was increased by a fresh contingent which responded to their roar. The revengeful elephants had the sagacity to fetch water in their trunks from a neighboring pond, sprinkled it around the foot of the tree so as to loosen its hold in the ground, and ultimately succeeded in uprooting it and avenging themselves in the blood of the unfortunate man."

Wizard's Warning.

The traditions connected with the historical residences of the British aristocracy are many and varied, but none perhaps is more curious than that related about Yester, the Scottish home of Lord and Lady Tweeddale. The old castle—now a picturesque ruin—referred to by Sir Walter Scott in "Marmion, contained a wonderful vaulted hall which Hugh Gifford, the magician, is said to have erected with one stroke of his wand.

But it was not a case of "easy come, easy go," and the wizard solemnly vowed that any man who attempted to tamper with the fair building should swiftly and violently die. The old tradition was recalled when the present Lord Tweeddale's eldest brother, Lord Gifford, was crushed to death by a falling tree. A short time before he had done some clearing operations that interfered with Hugh Gifford's Hall.

Cotton Spinning.

Oldham, seven miles from the town hall of Manchester, England, is noted as the greatest cotton spinning place in the world. It has nearly 200 mills, containing 15,000,000 spindles. These factories give employment to 37,500 persons, whose annual wages amount to $12,106,250. Oldham is also a great town for the production of textile machinery, one such shop employing about 3,000 machinists and another nearly 2,000.

Bilbao.

Bilbao, with a population of about 100,000, is one of the most important seaports of Spain, being the center of the iron mines and the iron industry of the country.

Ramsay and Radium.

When Sir William Ramsay began his investigation into the properties of radium his letter box was filled almost to bursting point with warnings from spiritualists assuring him that the newly discovered metal is an active agent of the supernatural. "Leave radium absolutely alone," they implored him. "It is too potent a force of nature for you to tamper with."

Sunday School Papers.

Sunday school periodicals circulated during the past year total more than 250,000,000 copies.

First Caricature.

Probably the first caricature in manuscript is to be found in the Egyptian papyrus in the British museum, where the lion and unicorn are represented playing a game of draffs.

The River Lena.

The Lena is the straightest of all the great rivers. For 800 miles it runs in almost a direct line to the sea.

THE TONIC OF HEALTH

Must be more than a stimulant—must be a food as well.

The "Best" Tonic is FERROZONE, which is both a food and a tonic; it aids digestion, promotes assimilation and converts food into blood, muscle, bone and nerves. No wonder it builds up the weak, makes them strong and vigorous!

FERROZONE

THE GREAT FOOD TONIC

FERROZONE contains exactly what your run-down system lacks. It supplies oxygen to purify the blood, phosphorus to develop the brain, iron to harden the muscles.

No combination of strength-giving, life-sustaining elements can surpass FERROZONE. Instant in effect, lasting in results, no medicine can benefit as much. You'll eat, sleep, think and feel better by using FERROZONE, which is a true tonic. Try it—now.

Fortunate is said everywhere in the house or six for $5.00. By mail to any address from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Sensational Case of Poisoning in Raleigh, N.C.

Doctor Faces Serious Allegations—Stated, to Have Administered Aconite to Man Whose Wife He Subsequently Married — Suspected of Killing His Own Child—Wife Also Said to Be Accomplice.

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 1.—A murder trial of widespread interest was begun here yesterday, when Dr. Thomas L. Rowland and his second wife, the widow of Charles R. Strange, a local motive engineer, faced the charge of having murdered Mr. Strange by poison, so that they might wed. Effort will be made to prove that Dr. Rowland was a "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" in real life, and that to all appearances he led an exemplary existence, while secretly making a study of deadly poisons and plotting murder. He was even arrested on a charge of having poisoned his own child in order to get some insurance money, but he was let go because the chemists could find no trace of poison in the tests which they made. In the present case Dr. Rowland is alleged to have used aconitine, a rare and deadly vegetable poison. Judge Benjamin F. Long will preside at the trial, while prominent counsel appeared on each side of the case. A special venire of one hundred and fifty men has been drawn for service on the jury.

CHAUFFEUR UP AGAINST IT.

Finds Bridge Washed Away and Is Arrested For Speeding.

St. Catharines, Oct. 1.—Arthur Geyer, a chauffeur employed by Harry Varn of Buffalo, was fined $5 by the magistrate yesterday morning for fast going in Beamsville.

He left Toronto for Buffalo. At Burlington he found a bridge washed away and took his car through the creek, where it struck a rock and the services of a team of horses were secured, for which the owner demanded $10. Going through Beamsville Geyer exceeded the speed limit. Constable Tufford telephoned the police here and Geyer was arrested. He deposited his money as security.

Six miles from here Geyer's gasoline began to run short, and as they demanded $3 for six gallons at the little store, about double the price, he decided to come back to St. Catharines and wait until morning.

Yesterday morning Magistrate Comfort imposed the usual fine of $5.

CHINA RESISTING JAPAN.

Complete Deadlock Over Affairs in Manchuria.

Pekin, Oct. 1.—There has been a complete deadlock between China and Japan over Manchurian affairs since June last, and the attitude of the United States towards Japan has now become a feature of the situation.

The new administrations at Mukden and Pekin welcomed what the officials call a "revival of America's spirit," in sending the battleship fleet to the Pacific after apparent indifference to the far eastern situation, and, as a result, the Chinese officials are resisting the demands of the Japanese.

Monument to U. S. Soldiers.

Niagara Falls, Oct. 1.—Ninety-three years ago British and United States soldiers fought at Lundy's Lane. On Sunday a monument was dedicated to the memory of Capt. Abraham Fuller Hull and nine men of the Ninth U. S. Infantry, who fell in the fight.

The Niagara Frontier Landmarks' Association and the Daughters of the War of 1812 of Buffalo, by whose aid the declination fell, were welcomed by the Lundy's Lane Historical Society, who escorted them to the scene of the ceremonies.

The monument is built of huge blocks of grey granite.

Killed at Allandale.

Barrie, Oct. 1.—Three freight trains following each other in rapid succession from Hamilton pulled into the Allandale station Sunday night about 11 o'clock. The failure of the brakes to work on the third, permitted it to strike the centre train with some force. The engine on the latter backed, killing the fireman, a young man named Robert Blackburn of Coe Hill. The crew of the last train was unfamiliar with the road, this being their first trip.

NOW LOOKS LIKE ACCIDENT.

Suspicion of Foul Play in Toronto Shooting Grows Weaker.

Toronto, Oct. 1.—While many conflicting points are still in evidence in connection with the shooting of Nicola Turpenoff, the Macedonian shopkeeper, on Sunday at his home here, the theory of accidental shooting seems now to carry a weight of probability.

The story of Leo, the brother, while it has taken several forms in the telling, as presented by several interpreters, is constant in the main point, that the pistol was dropped and exploded upon contact with the floor, causing the death of the man who was bending over to recover it.

An expert in guns and gun wounds, who examined the fatal weapon yesterday, gave the following opinion:

"The pistol is a Browning of Belgian make, identical with the Colt's automatic magazine pistol. The breech of this pistol when fired in the ordinary way recoils, throwing out the empty shell and throwing up a cartridge from the magazine, ready for a second shot.

"The weapon when examined was found to contain six cartridges and one empty shell. This would show that the pistol had fallen on its butt, with the wider side toward the man. The impact with the floor exploded the charge, preventing the slipping of the breech and the expulsion of the shell."

Coroner Powell opened an inquest at the morgue yesterday.

CHARGES AGAINST POLICE.

Lively Session at St. Catharines—Judge Courts Investigation.

St. Catharines, Oct. 1.—A meeting of the police commissioners was held yesterday, when Mayor Riddell and Police Magistrate Comfort took sides against Judge Carman in the discussion of incidents which occurred at the last meeting of the commissioners.

After an extra lively session of two hours, the board finally decided to meet next Monday to consider charges against the police. Talk of an investigation was quite lively, the mayor and magistrate at one time threatening to have the conduct of the judge enquired into, and the judge informing the magistrate that an investigation against him might bring something to light.

Several resolutions to the effect that it is desirable that none but total abstainers be engaged on the police force of cities and towns, St. Catharines being especially mentioned, were adopted on motion of the judge, but the mayor and magistrate refused to adopt a resolution to compel men now on the local force to become total abstainers.

WOUNDS SELF-INFLICTED.

Seaforth Woman Invents Assault Story to Win Sympathy.

Hensall, Oct. 1.—Maggie Brown of Seaforth claimed she was assaulted by an Indian on Sept. 23, and Detective Reburn of the Attorney-General's Department was sent to investigate. After working on the case some days he came to the conclusion that the story of the assault was invented to win sympathy from the parties with whom she was stopping, and two doctors were called in, both of whom confirmed the detective's theory. It was found that the wounds on her body were self-inflicted.

BAD FLOODS IN SPAIN

Recent Inundations Leave Many People Starving in the Streets.

Collapse of Church Kills Eight Persons—Thirty Emigrants Swept Into the Sea—Famishing Citizens Eating Decayed Foodstuffs — Damage Is Enormous—Estimated at Four Million Dollars—Bodies Recovered.

Malaga, Oct. 1.—The greatest distress is everywhere prevalent as a result of the storms and floods of last week. The Government with difficulty is preventing famished persons eating and eating decayed foodstuffs that have been thrown out by storekeepers. The work of clearing away the foul-smelling mud left in the streets by the floods is being pushed rapidly. Many bodies have been found in the mud. A band of emigrants which was encamped on a quay the night of the flood awaiting a steamer has not been seen since, and it is feared all its members perished. The damage done by flood is placed at $3,800,000. A number of stores were ruined. A number of steamers arriving here reported having seen a number of bodies floating in the bay. These are believed to be some of the emigrants who were washed off the quay, and who numbered more than thirty. A church and three houses at Benamerraza, a town twenty miles from this place, collapsed, killing eight persons.

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—Rudyard Kipling, the famous litterateur, known to Canadians, not only by reason of "My Lady of the Snows," but because of his many notable works, passed through Ottawa on the transcontinental train yesterday afternoon en route to the east.

"Anything to tell us?" was hinted at the distinguished traveler.

"This just 15 years since I was last on Canadian soil," he replied, "and I must say that I feel really happy to be back among you once more."

"Of course you must have observed great changes in the interim?"

"Remarkable," was the expression of Mr. Kipling. "I noticed the change everywhere right up from Quebec. You Canadian people all look so happy and prosperous," went on Mr. Kipling, "that it really does one good to come amongst you."

Firemen Rescued After Being Overcome by Gas.

Kingston, Oct. 1.—Yesterday afternoon shortly after one o'clock the steamer Bickerdike arrived in port and was found to be on fire.

The firemen were rescued a hasty call to handle the hose when the vessel was playing on the flames. The blaze was down in the hold.

About three o'clock the firemen stopped putting water into the vessel and the work of removing the cargo was started. The fire was extinguished at 5 o'clock. The greatest injury will be to the cargo.

Two of the firemen, suffocated by the gases, had to be carried out. The steamer Bickerdike belongs to the Montreal and Great Lakes Navigation Co. and was built in Buffalo in 1892. She is 233 feet long and is loaded with package freight for Port Arthur.

Power Commission in Shape.

Toronto, Oct. 1.—"All that so far has been announced in the press with reference to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission," remarked Hon. Mr. Whitney yesterday, "is pure conjecture. But we are moving ahead steadily, getting everything into shape."

The Power Commission are to meet this morning in the Parliament Buildings with a Cabinet meeting directly afterwards. Among the matters to be considered are the power question and the Soo loan guarantee.

APPEAL TO THE MIKADO.

Restriction of Passports Must Be Adhered To.

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—A complete statement of Canada's argument against a continuation of the present large influx of Japanese immigrants into this country is being prepared by the Government for presentation to the Government of Japan.

No doubt a commission or commissioner will present the argument to the Mikado's Government at Tokio. It will be pointed out in this statement that when the treaty with Japan was signed by Canada there was an express understanding that the Japanese law restricting the issue of passports to intending emigrants to a limited number each year would continue to be enforced.

In the Japanese emigration laws it is expressly stated that any emigrant obtaining a passport under false representations is liable to a heavy fine in addition to the cancellation of the passport. The enforcement of this clause by Japan would have a large influence in stopping the influx of Japanese to British Columbia by way of the Hawaiian Islands.

Other points that will be emphasized are that public opinion in this country, as shown by the utterances of public men in the press, and by the resolutions of the Labor Congress, is unanimously opposed to any large or sudden influx of Oriental immigration, and that the present rate of immigration, if continued, will result in unnecessary racial friction in British Columbia, and will militate against the development of trade between Canada and Japan as desired by both Governments.

FOUGHT WITH SWORDS.

Affair of Honor In Old Style Excites French Colony.

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 1.—Contrary to expectations the duel between Editor Hunter of The Reveil and Dr. Dupuy was fought in the rink at St. Pierre Miquelon.

It was believed that the difference had been settled in court, but the opposing factions clamored for satisfaction in the ancient French style and the two met. Pistols was first resorted to in the rink, Swords were chosen as the weapons. After ten minutes of fierce fighting the editor received a bad thrust of the sword in the right breast. His adversary, Dr. Dupuy, seeing the nature of the wound, declared Hunter unable to continue the fight.

The duel was the result of an article in The Reveil, questioning the honor of Dr. and Mrs. Dupuy.

It is reported that Hunter will be compelled to accept another challenge to a duel from Lelefre, a prominent shipowner of St. Pierre.

"There is no reason, therefore, for extraordinary alarm, or for believing Cuba is on the brink of an abyss. Even the strikers have not yet committed any act of violence. If their disagreement with the railway companies is not settled other measures must be found shortly to run the trains. In this case any attempts on the part of the strikers to resort to [illegible] will be punished according to law. The Last Stroke.

BY LAWRENCE L. LYNCH,

Author of "A Woman's Crime," "John Arthur's Ward," "The Diamond Coterie," "Against Odds," Etc.

"But I have been rudely aroused from my comfortable sense of security." Yesterday Miss Grant and Miss Glidden were down town, and were driven out of the avenue by a long political parade. Driving down a cross street their coachman turned up Clark street, only to find that another contingent was moving into that street, at the upper corner of the block. It was moving toward them, and the man quickly reined his horses close to the curb to await the passage of the line. Directly opposite the carriage was the sign, so frequent upon that street, of three balls, and while Miss Hilda gazed with some idle curiosity at the, to her, strange sight, a man came out tucking something into his waistcoat as he stepped down upon the pavement, glanced about him, and, without seeming to observe the carriage, or its occupants, walked quickly away. She had seen him, twice at least, at the Glenville, and she knew him at once. She ordered the driver home by a round-about road, but she is certain that the man was the same whom we thought a spy or worse. The most disagreeable feature of this is that I have not yet seen the man, watch as I would, and if he is watching us he has the advantage. If the worst comes to the worst we shall have to spread out and go aboard our boat, when the time comes, singly and in [illegible]—

"Since writing the above I have visited the place of the three gilt balls and have found at last, 'a straight tip.'

"The fellow had just redeemed a watch, pawned three days ago. It was a very pathetic story that we got out of the warm-hearted pawnbroker. The young man was overjoyed to be able to claim his watch, so soon, for it was a keepsake given him by his dead father and he prized it beyond words. The watch was a fine foreign made affair, and on the inside was engraved Charles A. 'Brally' or 'Brierly;' he could not remember exactly. So, you see, the possibility is that we have stumbled upon the watch stolen from Brierly's room in Glenville, which the fellow first, pawned, from necessity perhaps, and then hastened to redeem having taken the alarm in some way. He may even have been made aware that a description of the stolen watch and jewels had been lodged with the police. But all this is guessing. I am still confident that we shall find the solution of our problem on the other side of the Atlantic. Miss Glidden is still bent upon crossing, and your wife is her willing abettor. As for the fifth member of our party, he is at present like wax in our hands. Mind I say ever, not mine alone.

"There is nothing new from Glenville—how could there be—now? I need not tell you about ourselves: Mrs. Myers, I know, keeps you well up in our personal history. And so, good-luck to you. From yours in good hope,

"F. S. Ferrars."

Two days later this letter reached Ferrars.

"Glenville, July —

"Ferris Grant, Esq.

"Dear Sir: Yesterday, too late for the mail, I struck luck, at least I hope you will call it luck. It came through our 'girl,' that is, the young woman who presides in my kitchen; she has a chum in the kitchen of the Glenville, and last evening they were exchanging confidences upon my back porch. It appears — I'm going to cut the story short—it appears that the night clerk is a kodak fiend, and a month or two ago the fellow, after being guyed about his poor work until he got rattled, vowed he'd contrive to get a picture of every person who set foot in that house for the next month to come, and that they should be the judges, as whether the pictures were good or not. Now it turns out, that our traveller from out west was one of the victims of this rash vow, and when I found it out I lost no time in getting that picture. The fellow likes to drive my horses, and he always owes me a pretty good bill. I venture to you this masterpiece of art. As you never saw him, to your knowledge, and as I only had one glimpse, you will be glad, I dare say, to be told that the Glenville House people think it a good likeness.

"There's nothing else in the way of news, and so, good luck to you, and a good voyage.

"Samuel Doman."

Then Francis Ferrars had looked long at the picture inclosed in Doman's letter he started, and ejaculated, in the short, jerky fashion in which he used habitually to commune with himself, "That face! — I've seen it before — but where?" And then he suddenly seemed to see himself approaching the City Hall, and noting, as he walked on, this same face.

It was the habit of the detective to see all that came within his range of vision, as he went about, but he might not have retained a memory so distinct if he had not, in leaving the very same place, encountered the man again, his position slightly shifted, but his attitude as before, that of one who waits, or watches.

For some moments he looked thoughtfully at the picture, which was that of a dark and bearded man wearing a double eyeglass, and then he placed it under a strong magnifier and looked again.

"Ah!" he finally exclaimed, "I was sure of it! The man is in disguise!"

He took the picture at once to the ladies' sitting room, and held it before the eyes of Hilda Grant.

"Do you know it?" he asked.

"That!" She caught it from his hand, and held it toward the light. "It is the man whom—" She paused, looking at Ferrars, inquiringly.

"Whom you saw at the pawn shop?"

"Yes. And—"

"And at Glenville?"

"Yes, at the hotel."

"And he was tall, you say," and broad-shouldered?"

"Yes."

"Strong looking, in fact. As if—" He checked himself at sight of the intent look upon Ruth Glidden's face, and she took the words from his lips.

"As if," she repeated, icily, "he could shoot straight, or strike a man down in the dark." She arose and took the picture. "It is a bad face," she said, with decision.

"It is a disguised face," replied Ferrars. "Nevertheless, I think I shall know it, even without the beard and thick, bushy wig. Let me see?" He took a piece of paper, and a pencil, and placing the photograph before him, began to sketch in the head, working from the nose, mouth, eyes and facial outlines outward, and drawing, instead of the thick, pointed beard, a thin-lipped mouth and smooth chin. Then, when the young ladies had studied this, he copied in the moustache of the photograph.

"It belongs to the face," he observed, as he worked; "and probably grew there."

Late that night, as the detective sat alone in his room with a pile of just completed letters before him, he again drew the photograph from its envelope and studied it with wrinkling brow.

"If you are the man," he said, with slow moving lips that grew into hard, stern lines as he spoke. "If you are the man I will find you! If you have struck the first blow, and it's very possible, you also struck the second. But the work is not yet finished, and, unless my patience and skill desert me, the last stroke shall be mine."

CHAPTER XX.

The blow dealt Robert Brierly by the sham policeman had been a severe one, and at first it had been feared that he would recover, if at all, with his fine intellect dulled if not altogether shattered. But the best medical skill, aided by a fine constitution, and above all, the new impulse given his lately despondent spirits by the appearance at his bedside of Ruth Glidden, her eyes filled with love, and pity and resolve, all had combined to bring about good results and so, one evening, not quite two months after that blow in the dark, he found himself sitting in an easy chair, very pale and much emaciated but, save for this, and his exceeding bodily weakness, quite himself again. Indeed a more buoyant and hopeful self than he had been for many a day, and with good reason.

At first, and for one week, his mind had been a blank, then delirium had claimed and swayed him, until one day the crisis came, and with it a certain clearing of mind and brain.

Through it all Ruth had been beside him, and now she called the doctor aside and spoke with the grave frankness of a woman whose all is at stake, and who knows there is no time for formalities.

"Doctor, tell me the truth. He will know me now, and he must not see me unless—unless I tell him I have come to stay. Will a shock, such a shock, render his chances more critical? The surprise and—" She turned away her face, "Doctor, you know!"

Then the good physician, who had nursed her through her childish ills, and closed her father's eyes in death, put a fatherly hand upon her shoulder. "There must be absolutely no emotion," he said. "But a happy surprise, just now, if it comes with gentleness, and firmness—that tender firmness to which the weak so instinctively turns—will do him good, not harm. Only, it must be for just a moment, and he must not speak. My dear, I believe I can trust you."

He called away the nurse and beckoned Ruth to follow him. Then he went straight to the bedside, where the sick man lay, so pale and deathlike, beneath his linen bandages.

"Robert," he said, slowly, "Listen, and do not speak. I bring you a friend who will not be denied; you know who it is; you must not attempt to speak, Rob, for your own sake. If I thought you would not obey me I would shut her out even now." And with the last word upon his lips he was gone and Ruth stood in his place.

Involuntarily the wounded man opened his lips, but she put a soft finger upon them, and shook her head. She was very pale, but the voice, which was the merest murmur, yet how distinct to his ears, was quite controlled.

"Robert, you are not to speak. I have promised that for us both. I have been near you since the first, and I am going to stay until—until I can trust you to others. And, Rob., you must get well, for my sake. You must, dear, or you'll make me wear mourning all my days for the only lover I ever had. Don't fail me, my dear." She bent above him, placed her soft, cool hand upon his own, pressed a kiss upon his brow, and, the next moment the doctor stood in her place, and was saying, "Don't be uneasy, Rob., old man; that was a real live dream, which will come back daily, so long as you are good, and remember, sir, you have two tyrants now."

And so it proved.

When Brierly was at last fit to be removed to that safe and comfortable haven—not too far from the doctor's watchful care—which they fictitiously named the South, Ruth bade him good bye one day, with a tear in her eye, and a smile upon her lip.

"You will soon be a well man now," she said to him. "And when that time comes, and the tyrant Ferrars permits it, you will come to me, of course." And with the rare meaning smile he knew and loved so well, and so well understood, she left him, to bestow her cheering presence upon Hilda Grant and Glenville.

And now, on a fine mid-summer night, thinner than of old, and paler, with a scar across his left temple and a languor of body which he was beginning to find irksome because of the revived activity of the lately clouded and heavy brain, Brierly sat in a pleasant upper room of a certain hospitable suburban villa, the only south he had known since they bore him away from the Myers home, and whirled him away from the city on a suburban train, to stop, within the same hour, and leave him, safely guarded, in this snug retreat.

Opposite him sat Ferrars, and they had been talking earnestly for the past hour.

"You see," the detective was saying, "I had found this series of tiny clues, and thought all was plain sailing, until that mysterious boy paid a visit to your brother's room and left almost as much as he took away. That forced me to reconstruct my theory somewhat, and set me to wondering just what status Miss Grant held in the game our unknown assassin was playing. For I will do the young lady, and myself, the justice to say that I never for a moment doubted her. That fling at her gave me, however, a key to the character of the unknown." He was silent a moment, then, "After all," he said, "it was you who gave me my first suggestion of the truth."

"How? when I had no conception of it?"

"By telling of that attack upon your brother the winter before his coming here."

"I do not recall it."

"I suppose not, but in telling me of your brother's career, before his going to Glenville, you spoke of an accident which occurred to him; an accident which was eventually the cause of his going to Glenville. I made a note of this, and, later questioned Mr. Myers. He told me of the attack at the mouth of an alley. How two men assailed your brother, and only his presence of mind in shouting as he struck, and striking hard and with skilled fists, saved him from death at their hands; and he warded off, and held, the fellow with the bludgeon, but was cut by the other's knife. I might not have been so much impressed by these details, perhaps, had I not learned that your brother was returning from a visit of charity to the sick, a visit which he had paid regularly for some time. Then I thought I saw light upon the subject."

"Yes." Brierly bent toward the detective, a keen light in his eyes. "I have been very dull, Ferrars, but I have had time for much thinking of late. I think that, at last, I begin to understand."

"And what do you understand?" A slow smile was overspreading the detective's face.

"That my brother and I have had a common enemy. That nothing short of both our lives will satisfy him; that the attack upon Charley, nearly a year ago, was the beginning— that, having taken his life, they are now upon a still hunt for mine—and that, but for you, they would have completed their work that evening when, chafing, like the fool I was, under restraint, I set out alone, and met—"

"A policeman." Ferrars' lips were grave, but his eyes smiled. "It was a close squeak, Brierly. The fellow very nearly brained you. And now," and he drew his chair closer, and his face at once became grave almost to sternness, "we want to end this game; there is too much risk in it for you."

"You need not fear for me, Ferrars. From this moment I go forward, or follow, as you will, blindly; you have only to command. What must I do?"

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—(Special.)—Exports for August were 11,385 cattle, 179 sheep and, for the season to date 11,964 cattle, 4365 sheep, which shows a decrease of 12,777 cattle and 2545 sheep, as compared with the corresponding period last year.

At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 28 were 673 cattle, 629 sheep and lambs, 1736 hogs and 760 calves. The offerings for local consumption this morning were 1600 cattle, 900 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 500 calves. The run of cattle to-day was the heaviest this season, as, in addition to the above there were fully 900 head at the east end market, making a total of 2500, which were far in excess of the local requirements of the trade and in consequence the market was depressed since, prices showing a decline of ½c to ¾c per lb., as compared with those paid a week ago. In addition to the above the quality of the stock offered showed no improvement, the bulk of it being half finished, which also added weakness to the situation and, coupled with these facts, cable advices from Liverpool on Saturday reported trade very slow on account of hot weather and noted a decline in prices of ¼c to ½c per lb. since this day week, with choice Canadians quoted at 11c to 11½c and ranchers at 10c to 10½c per lb. At the reduction of prices here noted above there was a good demand from local butchers and outside buyers and an active trade resulted, which indicates that the consumption of beef is now on the increase on account of the cold weather. Choice beeves sold at 4½c to 5c; good at 4c to 4½c; fair, at 3½c to 3¾c; common, at 3½c to 3¾c, and canners at 1½c to 2½c per lb. There was no change in the condition of the market for sheep and lambs, supplies are coming forward freely, but as the demand is good for both local consumption and export account, the feeling is steady and an active trade continues to be done at unchanged prices. Sheep sold at 4c to 4½c and lambs at 5½c to 6½c per lb. Supplies of calves were fairly large for the season, for which the demand is good at prices ranging from $3 to $12 each. The market for hogs remains about steady, owing to the fact that the offerings are not excessive and in addition to this advices from European centres on Canadian hogs during the past week show no important change as compared with the previous one. The demand from local jobbers and packers for supplies continues good and a fairly active trade is passing with sales of selected lots at $5.25 to $5.50 per cwt., weighed off cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Sept. 30.—Cattle—Receipts, 6000 head; fairly active and steady; prime steers, $6 to $6.50; shipping, $5.25 to $5.60; butchers', $4.50 to $5.75; heifers, $3.50 to $5.25; cows, $3 to $4.40; bulls, $3.50 to $5.10; stockers and feeders, $2.50 to $4.00; stock heifers, $2.40 to $3.00; fresh cows and springers steady, $20 to $55.

MILK IS DEAR IN HAVELOCK

Price Has Just Been Raised to 7 cents per Quart

Peterborough people should not complain about paying six cents per quart for milk, when it is taken into consideration that the residents of the little town of Havelock are handing out seven cents per quart for the lacteal fluid. The milk dealers in the railway burg have just raised the price to this figure for the winter months, the former price being six cents.

It seems strange that Havelock people should have to pay more for milk than those in Peterborough.

The young man came down to the fair and, getting somewhat under the influence of liquor, went to the stables and took a horse belonging to one man and another's buggy. When taken into custody he claimed that drink had made him responsible for his actions.—Madoc Review.

Wm. Anderson Met Death By Being Struck by Train

No Evidence of Foul Play—Deceased and Wm. Thompson Had Been Drinking on Day of Fatality—Details of Tragic Event.

"We, the jury, empanelled to inquire into the death of William Anderson, alias Henry Kelly, find that the deceased came to his death about three hundred yards east of Birdsall station, being struck by the G.T.R. express on the night of September 23, 1907, while sitting or lying on the outside of the rails."

The above is the verdict reached by the coroner's jury, "empanelled to enquire into the death of William Anderson," after deliberating for half an hour after the evidence was all given. The inquest was resumed at 2.30 p.m., before Coroner Dr. Gray, in the Westwood town hall, after an adjournment from Wednesday last. It will be remembered that the unfortunate man met his death under particularly distressing circumstances on Tuesday, September 24th, his body being found near the G.T.R. track by a member of the section gang in which he had worked before the fatality. The general impression of the people in the vicinity of the accident, was that Kelly or Anderson had been struck by the train while under the influence of liquor, and the evidence given at the inquest bears out the truth of these surmises.

The postmortem examination was performed on the remains by Drs. McWilliams and Harrison of Keene.

At the resumption of the inquest yesterday, Dr. McWilliams was the first witness, and read the report of the postmortem examination performed by himself and Dr. Harrison. It was to the effect that deceased was about 37 years of age, fair complexion, medium height and weighed 135 or 140 pounds. The articulations between the frontal and parietal bones, and between the right and left parietals, and between the occipital and right parietal bones separated. The brain substance protruded through the membrane and was badly lacerated. The first rib on the right side, and second, third, and fourth ribs on the left side were fractured.

Wm. Thompson said he knew deceased and had worked with him on the G.T.R. under the same foreman. Went to Hastings on September 23rd to get pay check cashed. Deceased drew about $15 pay. They had drinks in Hastings, and would not say that either were sober, but could walk. Witness had a quart bottle of whiskey. Both had dinner in Hastings. Both drank some in the afternoon. Deceased left for Birdsall's at 6.45 They had about nine drinks in Hastings and had bottles of liquor. Deceased drank most of it. The last time witness saw deceased was at the gate of his house, five yards from the door. First he knew of his death was next morning, the body being found a mile from his house. Between the time the body was found and the deceased left his house, only knew of one train that passed his house. It passed at about ten minutes to eight. One of the witness' neighbors, Mr. McCall, found the body. Did not know how much money was found on it. Always knew deceased as Harry Kelly, although a Scotchman said his right name was Anderson.

Mrs. Mary Thompson, wife of the last witness, said her husband and deceased had a bottle on the afternoon of Kelly's death and were drinking. She only saw the one bottle. Both had tea at the house. Kelly left for home about 6.45 and seemed pretty straight. Saw Kelly going down track towards Birdsall station, about 55 minutes before the train was due. Thought he would have plenty of time to reach home before train would overtake him.

Fred Parker, bartender at Graham's Hotel was the next witness. Saw deceased drink whiskey in bar. Could not say how many times he treated. Bought nothing there except the treats. Had a roll of bills, but only broke one at the bar. Thompson was with him and when they left they were neither drunk nor sober. Knew deceased as Anderson, and did not know he had changed his name until Thompson told him. Did not see deceased's pocket book.

William Thompson, recalled, said he came right home after leaving Graham's. Said he was sure he got some bottles of ale there.

Charles Gilders saw Kelly with two bottles in his pocket on the day of the fatality.

Patrick Crowley testified that both men had been drinking, but were capable of walking all right.

David McCall said he found the body of the deceased about 7.15 a.m. while at work with G. T. R. section gang. Had seen it from roof house and foreman told him to find out what it was. It was lying close to the track, one foot almost touching the rail. Saw blood marks on rail and bruise on the side of head, but not much blood there. Afterwards saw considerable blood on the ground Did not touch body. Foreman removed it. Discovered body, morning after the accident.

Nelson Redpath, the section foreman, referred to by the last witness, was next called, and told of sending McCall to see what the object lying beside the track was. He described the condition the body was in when he saw it. Kelly had worked under him. He found $2.62 in one of the pockets.

John McMahon said he was engineer on the G.T.R. express from Belleville to Peterborough. Passed Birdsall station at 7.55 on night of September 23rd. Did not see anybody on track. Next morning, conductor told him, man had been killed night before. Saw no marks on engine that would indicate an accident.

W. G. Harris, fireman on the same train saw nothing of man on track the night Kelly was killed. Thought he would have seen had one been on track.

George Puffer said that Kelly had boarded with him and had left his house on morning of September 23rd to go to work. Had not seen him alive since. This was all the evidence that was submitted and the jury returned the verdict as noted above.

Below are names of those composing the jury. — Matthew Brackenridge, foreman; Wm. Brackenridge, Geo. Humphries, Wm. Graham, Jas Doherty, John Lobb, David Brackenridge, Edward McGrath, Stewart Graham, Wm. Humphries and Andrew Graham.

Semi-Annual Meeting of the Evangelical Lay Association

Held Last Night at Residence of Mr. Jos. Batten—Some Members Have Been Engaged in Work of Ass'n for Over Quarter of Century.

The semi-annual meeting of the Peterborough Evangelical Lay Association was held last night at the residence of Mr. Jos. Batten, 351 McDonnel street. A large number of members were in attendance, and President William Might was in the chair. A general discussion of matters relative to the Association took place, and a commendable enthusiasm was displayed by those present. Reports of services held at the gaol and Protestant Home were presented.

It is interesting to note that of the members present at last night's meeting, Mr. Richard Holland, Mr. I. Richardson, Mr. Jos. Batten and Mr. William Might have been identified with the good work for over a quarter of a century, and may fittingly be described as pioneers in the Evangelical Lay movement.

When the election of officers for the ensuing half year took place, Mr. Joseph Batten was unanimously chosen to fill the president's chair, and Mr. Isaac Richardson was by general vote elected secretary. A vote of thanks was tendered the retiring president, Mr. Might, and the retiring secretary, Mr. Hanna, for their efficient services to the Association during their term of office.

The Evangelical Lay Association is an organization of men who did a work of great importance and Christian worth, and their efforts are appreciated to the fullest extent by those among whom they labor.

NO DECISION GIVEN IN ANY OF THE THREE CASES

Complainant in Criminal Case Did Not Appear—Moore Versus C. G. E. Will be Tried at Cobourg

McCrohan vs. Kelly—Civil — Not settled, Will come up at Osgoode Hall, where argument will be heard.

Moore vs. Canadian General Electric Company—Civil — Not settled. Will come up at Cobourg assizes on October 21st.

This above gives in concise form the result of the fall session of the High Court before the Honorable Mr. Justice Magee yesterday. None of the three cases was settled.

Mary Payne, the young woman, who had laid a charge of rape against Herbert Meehan, did not appear, and apparently nothing more will be heard of the case. It is said that she has left town. Meehan was to go on bail, given by himself and his father, and if necessary will be summoned to appear at the next assizes. However, it is not likely that anything further will be heard of the case. Mr. F. D. Kerr was counsel for Meehan.

Several witnesses were examined in the case of McCrohan versus Kelly and the evidence went to show that nobody seemed to know exactly where they were at. The principal witnesses were the plaintiff, Mr. McCrohan, and Mr. L. M. Hayes, who was called by the defence. It was nearly nine o'clock before all the evidence was in and incidentally there had been no adjournment for tea. His Lordship reserved judgment, sending the case to Osgoode Hall, where argument will be heard. O'Connell & Gordon, plaintiff's solicitors. R. F. McWilliams, defendant's solicitor.

The case of Moore versus the Canadian General Electric Company, will be tried at the Cobourg assizes on October 21st, defendant's to pay cost of action at Peterborough. It is understood that the defendants will endeavor to show that Moore was not in their employ and that therefore they are not liable. It appears that Moore was employed by the Dominion Engineering and Costruction Company, who had the contract of erecting the new transformer building for the C.G.E. The defendants claim that the action should have been entered against the Construction Company, and not against the Electric Company.

R. F. McWilliams was solicitor for the plaintiff and Dennistoun, Peck & Kerr for the defendants.

Injunction To Restrain

Granted by Judge Weller re Disposal of Business of Royal Hotel

A writ was issued some time ago by Messrs. O'Connell & Gordon, acting for P. Clunan vs. Jas. Kelly, of the Royal Hotel, asking for the appointment of a receiver to take over and sell business of the hotel.

Yesterday afternoon Judge Weller granted an injunction, upon application of Mr. Gordon, restraining sale or transfer of hotel business for eight days, until application could be made at Osgoode Hall for the appointment of a receiver to dispose of the business in which Clunan is a partner.

FLOUR ADVANCES AGAIN IN PRICE

Retail Figure is Now $2.80 per cwt.—Change Took Place To-day

Flour advanced another ten cents in price to-day.

A week ago to-day it went to $2.70 per hundred, retail, and this morning it took another jump. $2.80 is now the ruling figure.

The advance is due to the fact that there is a scarcity of western wheat, the yield this year being much less than that of last season. The Central Milling Co., when spoken to, gave this as the cause of the price advancing. The foregoing figures are only retail, but the wholesale prices have been correspondingly elevated.

It is likely that the bakers will have to increase the price of bread since they have to pay more for flour.

New Appointments At Cordage Works

Mr. J. C. Groendyke, of Chicago, is New Managing Director

Mr J. C. Groendyke, of Chicago, who has taken a substantial interest in the Canadian Cordage & Manufacturing Co., Peterborough, has accepted the position of managing director, and Mr. A. M. Louden, of Miamisburg, Ohio, has been appointed superintendent.

Mr. Groendyke is the owner and operator of a large cordage plant at Miamisburg, Ohio, and has a high reputation for turning out first-class twine. He is widely and favorably known in the United States, where the bulk of the product of the Canadian Cordage Co. is sold.

Mr Groendyke, as managing director of the company, will have associated with him as superintendent, Mr Louden, who has been connected with the manufacture of binder twine for some years. He was formerly with the McCormick Co., of Chicago, and for the past four years has been superintendent of Mr. Groendyke's factory at Miamisburg. He comes highly recommended and will enter upon his new duties at once.

Hugh Lindsay's barn and stables near Comber were burned on Friday.

Cows Can be Bought for A Song in Back Country

One Farmer Sold Four Good Bovines for $32—Activity at the Mines—Big Crop of Marsh Hay

A gentleman who has just returned from a trip through the northern townships of Peterborough County, states that great activity reigns at the mines at Blairton, and at other points in the back townships. The ore being taken out is very rich and those who are working the mines are quite optimistic. An experienced miner in talking to the Review's informant, stated that if there was ore around Sudbury like there is in the rear of Peterborough county, thousands of dollars would be invested at once There seems to be difficulty, however, in getting capitalists interested in the mineral riches of Peterborough County, and the fact that there is no railway near the mines is a big drawback. If there was some way of getting the ore out, there is little doubt but that the mines would flourish.

The gentleman also gave some other interesting information concerning conditions in the back country. Owing to the prospective scarcity of feed, cattle are selling at almost any price Only a few days ago a farmer sold four good, average cows, receiving for the four $32, or about $8 apiece. This is happening every day, as the farmers are afraid they are not going to have enough feed to take their stock through the winter.

Conditions as regards feed would be worse, were it not for the fact that there has been an unusually good crop of "marsh" or "beaver" hay. It is now being harvested, and will be of great help to many farmers. In one marsh alone, fifty tons of hay has just been stacked, farmers coming from miles around to secure a share of it.

CHAMBERS ST. DUG UP AGAIN

Bell Telephone Company Putting Down a Conduit

A few weeks ago Chambers street was torn up as a result of a sewer being put in. It was just getting nicely levelled again when the Bell Telephone Company came along, and it has been dug up again as a conduit is being laid to provide for the wiring of the buildings in the block from the rear.

The average man naturally stops and wonders why could not the one upheaval of the street have been sufficient for the putting in of both the sewer and the telephone conduit. No doubt there is a reason, but to many it seems a waste of labor to have the same digging done twice within a few weeks.

BIBLES AND PRAYER AND HYMN BOOKS TAKEN AWAY

A Church-Man Says That Some People Take Property Belonging to Others From Pews in the Churches—Practice Seems to be Growing.

"There are many kinds of thieves but the meanest of them all is the one who knowingly takes a hymn one who knowingly takes a prayer book or hymn book that is not his own from a place of divine service."

This was the remark last night of a gentleman who takes more than an average interest in church work, and is a regular attendant at a local Anglican church. He went on to state that the practice of carrying away from church pews, books belonging to other people is getting too common in Peterborough, and that something should be done to stop it. He went on to say that he himself had been the victim of "this meanest kind of stealing" several times lately, and had almost come to the conclusion that it was not safe to leave a book in church. He specified a case where a prayer-book that he valued very highly on account of it being a gift had been taken from his pew in church only a short time ago, and so far he had been unable to locate it, although his name was on it, along with the date it had been presented to him, and also the name of the donor.

Judging by remarks from other sources, a good deal of this work of taking property from churches is too common in Peterborough. Apparently it is not confined to one church, but appears to be practised quite extensively. It is hard to believe that any person who goes to church would knowingly take any property of another, but it looks as if such were the case. It is understood that in several of the churches steps are being taken to apprehend the guilty parties and to stop the practice.

Mrs. Harper's Charge as to Bad Meat Admitted to be Correct

Peterborough Lady, Who Said That Beef Served at Deaf and Dumb Institute, Belleville, During Principal Mathison's Regime, Was Not Wholesome Has Her Contention Verified.

The Belleville Intelligencer says:—It will be remembered that Mrs. Harper, of Peterborough, in a letter to the Review of that city, made some rather strong remarks about the beef furnished to the Deaf and Dumb Institute. In this connection Mr. W. C. Mikel, counsel for the Government in the Deaf and Dumb Institute investigation, was asked this morning if he had any further knowledge of the Commissioner's report than was contained in the summary appearing in the Toronto papers. He replied that the report also contained the following finding:—

"It was clearly established before me that occasionally inferior sides of beef had been delivered and used at the Institute not fit for consumption, and not in accordance with the contract, which calls for first-beef, mutton and pork. The trouble in this respect arose partly from the contractor having engaged to supply this meat at an average of $6.20 per hundred pounds, and partly from the omission to inspect the said meat before it was accepted."

The question appears to be, why was the meat not inspected? Then, again, how can the Government expect to get good meat at a fraction over six cents a pound?

Peterborough Has Over 25,000 Electric Lights

Interesting Statistics in a Recent Report of the Inland Revenue Dept—Some Comparisons.

According to the report of the Inland Revenue Department for the nine months ending March 31st, 1907, there are 220 arc and 25,000 incandescent electric lamps in Peterborough. The report contains a statement showing the electric light companies registered under the Electric Light Inspection Act with details as to the number of lamps, etc. According to the report, the Peterborough Light and Power Company has 200 arc lamps and 15,000 incandescent lamps, while the Otonabee Power Company has 20 arc and 10,000 incandescent lamps, making a total for the city of 220 arc and 25,000 incandescent lamps.

Compared with other cities of somewhat similar population, Peterborough is well supplied with light. Brantford, with several thousand more residents than Peterborough has only 20,000 incandescent lights while in Belleville, according to the report there are only 10,000. London with a population twice as great as that of this city is credited with 40,000 incandescent lights.

From the above it will be seen that Peterborough has plenty of light and fully deserves the name "Electric City."

GRAND JURY MAKES SEVERAL IMPORTANT RECOMMENDATIONS

Would Give Police Magistrates Power to Order Corporal Punishment—Jurors Should be Better Paid—Home for Indigent Persons.

The providing of a home for the poor and aged of the city, higher pay for Grand and petit jurors and the empowering of police magistrates to sentence juvenile offenders to corporal punishment—these are the principal recommendations in the presentment of the Grand Jury at the Fall Assizes of the High Court of Justice for Peterborough County. The presentment was made this morning after the jurors had returned from Lakefield, where they inspected the House of Refuge. The jury makes many important recommendations, the presentment being as follows:

To His Worship Judge Magee, at the Assize Court, Peterborough.

Sir,—Your Grand Jury visited the jail and found nine men, two criminals and seven vagrants. The latter are all old men unable to provide for themselves. We found the jail and everything connected therewith scrupulously clean and well kept. The prisoners are satisfied with the board supplied.

We would respectfully recommend that a proper plan be secured or provided for these poor old men, such as the County House of Refuge or at least a pleasant home from the crowding jail, their only offence that of being poor, without means of support.

We did not visit the hospitals not deeming it wise in the interests of the patients, and the government having an official for this purpose visiting these institutions regularly.

We would recommend, on complaint of the Crown Attorney, that the proper authorities provide a suitable room for this official during the sessions of the court.

We visited the House of Refuge and found nineteen inmates, comfortable and happy. The building and everything in connection with it is a credit to the county.

MORE PAY WANTED

We would also draw your attention to the small remuneration paid to both grand and petit jurors for their services, as under present conditions if a juror came from a distance, his present fees would not pay his expenses. We would recommend that both grand and petit jurors' fees be increased to meet present conditions.

We had a report from Mr. Cochrane, relief officer of the Children's Aid Society, and we would heartily recommend that the municipal and governmental bodies deal liberally with this most deserving association, in the interest and care of children.

CORPORAL PUNISHMENT

Your Grand Jury, after thoroughly discussing the increasing prevalence of juvenile crime, as shown by the police court records, and looking to the best interests of both children, and parents, and the future well being of these children and community we would recommend very strongly that authority be given to police magistrates to have corporal punishment, by flogging, administered at their discretion, as a preventative of petty crime by children under 18 years of age.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. H. MELDRUM,
Foreman Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury was composed as follows;

W. H. Meldrum, foreman; Jas. Long, Wm. Switzer, James Andrews, Asphodel; Stewart Brown, Douro; Jas. Hamilton, J. J. Hartley, G. W. Mann, Smith; Jos. Metheral, W. J. Miller, Otonabee; Jos. M. Oliver, of Harvey,; J. C. Shook, Peterborough; J. W. Russell, Belmont.

Harvest Festival at St. Mark's Church

Large and Enjoyable Gathering and Entertainment

The reputation of providing always the best entertainments was well sustained by the congregation of St. Mark's church, Otonabee, who celebrated their annual Harvest Festival on Monday night. On Sunday two services were held at the church, at which Rev. Wm. Burns, of Hastings, preached. The Holy Communion was administered at the morning service.

Monday the festival was brought to a close by the harvest tea and programme. The ladies of the church had provided a tempting repast, and a large number of people, who filled the hall to overflowing, were present.

After ample justice had been done to the provisions of the tea, the programme commenced. Mr. T. H. Perry, B.A., who has been in charge of the parish, during the summer, presided in a very able manner. In opening the entertainment he welcomed those present, especially the large contingent that had come from Peterborough. The various numbers were as follows;

Doxology.
Chairman's address.
Vocal solo, Miss Smithson.
Reading, Mrs. T. Graystock.
Vocal solo, Miss Ruth Dawson.
Address, Rev. Wm. Burns.
Vocal solo, Miss Bertha Curtis.
Address, Rev. C. H. Marsh.
Reading, Mrs. T. Graystock.
Vocal Solo, Miss Bertha Curtis.
Address, Mr. Joshua Smithson.
Vocal solo, Miss Smithson.
Address, Rev. Dr. Langfeldt.
National Anthem.
Accompanist, Miss Charlotte English.

Mr. Perry referred to the happy time he had spent among the people of St. Mark's. He was much encouraged by the faithful families of the congregation. Unfortunately there were some, spiritually, dead ones, who could not be persuaded to go to church or take any part in God's work; those had been a discouragement to him. He thanked the people of St. Mark's for their many kindnesses and support, and he regretted having to go to finish his course at College, which meant his having to give up his work in the parish. He thanked Rev. Dr. Langfeldt for the good advice he had given him and the splendid help he had been to him in gaining experience. He had never met nicer people than those of St. Mark's and St. Luke's.

As Dr. Langfeldt was called upon to speak, he expressed his regret at losing Mr. Perry, who had done such excellent and earnest work. But he was glad to say that Mr. Perry would still continue to look after the parish, though he could not come as regularly as he would wish; he would at any rate spend the Christmas holidays in the parish. Dr. Langfeldt made reference to the great assistance at the harvest festival given by Miss Lillian Smithson, of Bellebora, niece of Mr. Joshua Smithson. The young lady officiated on Sunday at the organ, and again delighted the audience with her well trained and sweet voice. On behalf of the congregation he thanked her.

Rev. Mr. Marsh, in his address, grew reminiscent, and referred to his work at St. Mark's of 28 years ago.

Rev. Mr. Burns was highly humorous and kept the audience greatly amused from beginning to end.

The entertainment was a great success, everybody going away highly satisfied.

Putting on Another Through Train

There is a rumor that the Grand Trunk intend putting on another through train between Toronto and Montreal shortly. It is said that the intention is to run a train for the east, leaving Toronto about 1.30 or 2 a.m., reaching Montreal about 10.30 a.m. A train would also leave Montreal about 1.30 or 2 a.m., arriving in Toronto about 10 a.m. The advantage of these trains would be that parties could leave either city at night, arrive at their journey's end in the morning, have four or five hours for business, and get home in the evening, thus only having to spend one night on the trains.

Another case of smallpox is reported in Hamilton.

Generous Gift to the Brigade

Mr. Alfred Parker Appreciates Their Prompt Service

Mr. Thomas Rutherford, Chief of the fire department, has received an appreciative letter from Mr. Alfred Parker, accompanied by a cheque for $20.

The letter is as follows;—

"Please accept the enclosed cheque and also my sincere thanks for prompt and efficient service rendered by your brigade at the recent fire in my dye works and laundry."

The members of the brigade desire to return thanks to Mr. Parker for his generous and totally unexpected gift. When duty calls them the fire fighters never expect or look for any recognition beyond the consciousness of doing their work ably, and when a grant comes in the nature of a pleasant surprise as a contribution to the sick and benefit fund of the department they are deeply grateful.

AMUSEMENTS

A ROMANCE IN IRELAND.

"A Romance in Ireland" is the title of the new and successful comedy-drama in which our favorite young singing comedian, Allen Doone, will appear at the Grand Opera House on Oct. 25th, matinee and night. As in the past two seasons, Mr. Doone will be under the direction of Mr. George W. Kenney, who promises the best all around company, as well as the most complete scenic production ever seen in an Irish play. As swaggering, devil-may-care "Larry O'Daly," the young star is said to be a delight. He 'borrows" the old squire's pet hunting mare to follow the hounds, and makes love to his daughter, Nora, with equal assurance, and is just as ready to warble a sentimental ditty as he is to deliver a knock-down blow to any enemy. "A Romance in Ireland" is said to be an elaborate scenic production in four acts and eight stage settings, whose characters are garbed in the picturesque costumes of the 17th century, and whose plot is remarkable for its originality and free from the hackneyed ideas of the conventional Irish play. A pleasing feature will be the introduction of the old-time songs and dances of the period, with appropriate musical accompaniment upon the "pipes." Mr. Doone has some pretty new songs, of his own composition, both comic and sentimental.

PUBLISH THE ROLLS

The assessment of Peterborough for the year 1907 is about completed, and in a few days the rolls will be handed over to the city clerk. It is stated that the increase this year in the taxable valuation of city property, will be over $1,000,000. Valuations have been raised in many parts of the city and, as naturally expected, there are many complaints and mutterings of alleged unjust treatment, favoritism, bias, etc. No man seems to take kindly to an assessor or tax collector. He regards such an official with a certain "stand-offishness, and as a necessary evil. He is inclined to think that the other fellow pays less taxes and has a lower assessment, very much on the same principle that the average holder of a position opines that the other chap has a bed of roses, while his own pathway is strewn with thorns. It is in human nature to believe others are more favorably circumstanced than ourselves. Why? Who can tell?

One effective method of allaying complaints and reasoning alleged grievances in connection with the question of assessment, is to have the rolls printed, so that they can be easily and conveniently examined by every ratepayer. This information may come high, but it is worth the price. The publication of the rolls, generally makes the work of the assessors, during the following year, much easier.

The Review has long had a firm belief that the rolls should be printed once, at least every, three or four years in publishing them no reflection whatever is cast upon the thoroughness, care or fairness of the work of the city assessors. It is a well known fact, publicity is a cure for nearly everything that requires a remedy. If there are any errors, excessive valuations, or other defects in the rolls, publicity will bring them to the front, and there will be better satisfaction all around.

The Hamilton Herald, Belleville Intelligencer and other journals, have consistently advocated this method of relieving anxiety, misunderstanding, and turmoil as to assessments, and no better method could be adopted.

DODGING THE POINT

The Examiner last evening, in attempting to reply to the remarks in the Review that Mr J. R. Stratton had inspired the letter signed "Onlooker," which appeared last week in the Lakefield News, evades a direct answer, and dubs the article in this journal "bad guessing."

The letter in question was a sly snap to urge Mr. Stratton's claims upon the Liberals of Lakefield and East Peterborough, with respect to the nomination in that riding for the federal house.

There is no denial, except by inference, that Mr. Stratton did not inspire the communication to the Lakefield paper.

Here is the sum total of the reply of Mr. Stratton's organ: "Our contemporary seems to be fond of guessing. It might as well keep on guessing. If it doesn't strike any nearer the mark than it has done, no great harm will result."

The Examiner also says that Mr. Stratton has never asked any nomination in the East Riding."

Perhaps, not directly, but indirectly, yes.

Our equivocal contemporary quite consistently admits that it cannot prevent people from talking, speculating and gossiping, about Mr. Stratton's candidature.

Oh yes! it can. Mr. Stratton's name was bandied about in connection with the mayoralty of Peterborough last year, and in big paper there came out a straight, flat contradiction that he was looking for that office. It was stated that he would under no circumstances be a candidate for the civic chair.

How different in tone, and evasive in character, are all the references in the Examiner in respect to the candidature of the late Provincial Secretary in the neighboring riding. The Review would ask its contemporary a few categorical questions, to which it would ask a direct reply in the negative or affirmative. Please avoid circumlocution, bluff and bluster.

Will Mr. Stratton deny, that he knew nothing of the publication of the letter signed "Onlooker," previous to its appearance in the Lakefield News?

Will he say that the communication in question was not typewritten in the Examiner office?

Will he affirm that he did not compose the letter?

Will he further deny that he has not written several personal letters to certain leading men in the townships in the East Riding, making an appeal for their influence and support in order that they may help him to secure the Liberal nomination?

More anon.

A JEALOUS STAB

The Lindsay Post takes occasion to remark that the Peterborough fair was a "failure" on Friday, and that the weather on Saturday—the closing day—gave it a complete knock-out blow.

What object the Post can have in spreading such deliberate falsehoods, it is difficult to understand. Such a "knock" can only be prompted by jealousy and a haunting fear that the much vaunted Lindsay exhibition must be on the decline.

The Post admits that the Peterborough directors made "strenuous efforts" and that the press of this city did its share in proclaiming the merits and superiority of this year's attraction, but to say that the fair was a "failure" is unjust, ill-advised and deceitful.

For the benefit of its northern contemporary, the Review would again distinctly state that the fair was not a failure in any sense, and that too, in the face of the fact that the weather on Saturday was of the rankest possible brand. The entries were ahead of last year, and the representation in all departments evidenced a decided improvement. In a vain effort to back up its reckless assertions and deride the exhibition, our Lindsay contemporary, drags in the name of Mr. D. C. Trew, who was judge of poultry here and quotes that gentlemen as saying:

"The poultry exhibit was fair, the general exhibits and especially the attendance, were discouraging. Barely 2,500 were present—not a third of the attendance at the Lindsay Central."

Now, as a matter of fact, instead of barely 2,500 people on the grounds on Friday, there were fully 7,000 and had it not rained all day on Saturday, a careful estimate of the gathering, based on reliable information gleaned from all points, far and near, places the number who would have been present, at 10,000.

Mr. Trew is made to say that the poultry exhibit was only "fair." That gentleman informed the directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, that the display in the poultry line was the largest, and best that he had ever witnessed outside of Toronto and the big cities. The Review is disposed to believe Mr. Trew's remarks to the head management, and does not think that he ever made any such misleading statements as the Post credits him with. Mr. Trew is an honorable, conscientious gentleman. He is neither jealous-minded nor "a knocker" and in that respect, differs materially from the spirit and tone which characterize the Lindsay Post's utterances with respect to the Peterborough fair.

PEN POINTS

How do you like the jolly postman's ring?

Those rally days in the Sunday school remind one that it will not be many months before there will be rallies in the political school.

Pretty soon the price of coal will be as high as the assessed value of certain city property.

The weather deliberately, robbed the fair of a surplus. We'll arraign the meteorological featherbrains before Magistrate Dumble for misappropriation of funds.

The actual delivery of a letter at the door now creates some surprise. Pretty soon if one is not daily delivered, there will be a sad disappointment on the part of many a maiden fair.

Why should not an annual poultry and pet stock show be held in Peterborough? The splendid showing made in the poultry line at the fair demonstrates that there are a large number of breeders in this district.

"Sportsman Jim" Stratton is mentioned as a candidate for the Commons in East Peterborough. What! With the shadow of "Bob" Gamey still falling across his path. Nay, nay! Mr. Stratton is down among the political dead men. There let him lie. —Belleville Intelligencer.

"Yes, sir," said the pedestrian, "it was awful tough." And he passed on before the man on the next block could ask him if he referred to the weather or the $6.20 per hundred beef they used to get at the Deaf and Dumb Institute.—Belleville Intelligencer.

In order to aid rural school sections the Whitney Government gives 40 per cent of the teacher's salary between $300 and $600. For example a school section which pays a teacher $400 receives $40 grant. The annual grants have already been sent out.

Mr. Borden's tour in British Columbia has been successful and most enthusiastic. His progressive programme has been received with every manifestation of pleasure and confidence, and the Pacific Coast province will speak in no uncertain sound against the reckless and corrupt Laurier administration at the next election.

The Board of Trade could discuss no more timely, important or pertinent question than the present mode of assessment. The valuations in many parts of the city, have been sharply raised, and a great many citizens feel they have been unfairly dealt with. Let them come to the Board of Trade meeting on Tuesday next and present their views on a question which is of vital concern to every property holder.

Peterborough storekeepers justly complain that many persons visit the stores, handle their goods, look them all over, finger them in every way, and then do not buy. It is scarcely fair to the merchant to muss over this and that, and practically soil certain delicate creations without purchasing. It is all right to examine carefully before buying, but for goodness sake keep your hands off. Look, but do not touch, is a good motto to follow.

Were Honored on Their Departure

Presentation to Havelock Citizens —Other News From Railway Town

Havelock, Sept. 30.—The members of the Presbyterian church met in the church on Monday night to honor Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Martin and family on the eve of their departure for Goderich, where Mr. Martin has obtained a lucrative position on the G. T. R. An excellent programme was given by the choir, and Misses Irene Herrington and Effie McGill pleased the audience wvery much in vocal solos.

The following complimentary and regretful address was then read by Mr. Geo. Chiles, and the presentations made by Miss Herrington. To Mr. and Mrs. Martin and family.

Dear Friends,—We the members of the Presbyterian congregation meet you in a social way in this church tonight for perhaps the last time. We regret that you have decided to move from our midst, but we hope in your new home you will find as many friends as you have here. We shall miss you as co-workers in the church and fellow-travellers on the heavenly pilgrimage. You have at all times been faithful to perform any duties which seemed to devolve upon you, and we earnestly pray that when you are called up that higher life by the Author of Peace you may hear Him say unto you, "Well done good and faithful servant, thou has been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joy of the Lord."

We humbly beg of Mrs. Martin to accept this rocker, Mr. Martin, this arm chair, Miss Elsie, this locket, and baby Leona, this locket, not for their intrinsic value, but as a slight token of the esteem in which you are held by the congregation.

Signed on behalf of the congregation,—

GEORGE CHILES,
ALEXANDER ROSE,
JAMES THOMPSON.

Mrs. Martin received a handsome upholstered rocking chair, Mr. Martin a beautiful upholstered arm chair, Miss Elsie and baby Leona, gold lockets.

After the presentation, refreshments were served, and Mr. and Mrs. Martin bidden goodbye, by all present.

Mr. David Bowers of town, met with a severe accident a few days ago, when his right hand was badly crushed while handling wood. Seven stitches had to be put in the injured member.

Miss Lillie of Norwood, is the guest of Miss Pauline Weir.

Mr. Wm. Foster of Norwood, has been engaged as head clerk, by A. E. Barrett and Co.

Mrs. James Campbell is visiting friends in Napanee.

Mr. John Barlow of Toronto, spent a few days in town this week.

Mrs. J. W. Bryans, and Miss Annie Bryans spent Saturday in Norwood.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Barlow, of Guelph are spending a few days in town.

Mr. A. J. Copp, of North Battleford, Sask., conductor on the Canadian Northern Railway is spending a couple of weeks with his family here.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Falkner spent Sunday with friends in Norwood.

The Wilmot Young's Show Co. appeared in the opera house on Thursday, Friday and Saturday night before crowded houses. "The Broken Heart," was presented on Thursday; "The Count of Monte Cristo," on Friday, and "In Old Kentucky," on Saturday. Verona, the electrical wonder, gave a beautiful act, while De Matias, the handcuff expert performed some wonderful feats. Joe, the high diving dog, who makes a leap from a sixty foot ladder to a net, below, attracted a large crowd in front of the opera house each night.

Partridge are reported to be very scarce in this vicinity, but Mr. Wm. Falkner captured quite a few of the feathered tribe, north of town on Saturday, although they are very scarce.

FEW CASES IN POLICE COURT

Philip O'Brien was the only occupant of the prisoner's box at the police court this morning. He was found drunk in a public place, last evening. "I guess I'm guilty," said O'Brien to His Worship. "I had a bad cold and just took a little to cure it." "Two dollars," replied the Magistrate, and the old goat handed over the two spot. He had $24 on him and he was advised to go and place it in a savings Bank.

The people of Peterborough are evidently on their good behaviour, for there has been very little doing in police court circles for several days.

WEEKLY MEETING WILL BE CONDUCTED

The first meeting, for the fall and winter, of the Peterborough Sabbath School Association will be held on Friday night of this week, at the Y.M.C.A. when Sheriff Hall will give an address on "Joshua, Israel's New Leader." There are five divisions — the physical, educational, boys, social and religious. The programme for the fall and winter, is as follows;

PHYSICAL

The Gymnasium Classes.—The aim of the classes is to combine exercise and recreation. There are classes for all ages, from the active school boy to the sedentious business and professional man.

The Instructor.—Mr. C. H. James, late of India, with eleven years' experience as instructor in schools and military gymnasiums, will have charge of the work. He was also an instructor in the Sandow School and holds a certificate as a Military Physical Director.

Basket Ball and Games.— Basket Ball and other recreative games will have a large place in the programme this season.

The Baths.—These include Shower, Tub, Needle and Plunge. Abundance of hot and cold water always.

EDUCATIONAL

The Association has always provided many features for the development of the mind of the man.

The Reading Room.—This is well supplied with the best current magazines and papers of the day, embracing a number on technical subjects. The new lights make this room a very attractive and popular place.

The Debating Club.—Plans are being arranged to make this popular club's programme better than ever. It should have a large membership, for it includes so many helpful educational features. Organization meeting early, in October.

The Evening Classes.—The following subjects will be taught—24 lessons in each course. A tuition fee of $3.00 for each subject. Classes begin October 8th;—

Mechanical Drawing.— Monday and Wednesday evenings, 7.30.

BOYS.

The Y.M.C.A. plans always have a large place for boys between the ages of 12 and 17. All boys, employed during the hours of the day, and not attending school, are allowed intermediate privileges. The fees are $3.00 a year for each.

The Boys' Rooms.—While the boys' rooms are not what we would like them—yet they will be well equipped with games, reading matter, etc., where boys can profitably spend leisure hours. The boys' department also has a library.

The Physical Work.—The boys' classes have always been the best side of the Physical Work. The new Physical Director will have a personal interest in each boy. The classes will be enjoyed by all.

Swimming.—The plunge will be kept at an even temperature, and those who do not know how, will be taught swimming.

The Bible Classes—Four groups under capable leaders will meet on Sundays at 10 a.m. "The Comrades in Christian Warfare," will be an organization of older boys.

SOCIAL

The live Social Committee will introduce many new plans this season to make the building a greater social centre. Every member is asked to co-operate.

Receptions.—A series of social events will be held at stated times of which due announcement will be given.

Music and Social Games. — These helpful social agencies will be extended.

Dormitory Department.—The building has 14 well furnished bed rooms. Young men looking for rooms will be accommodated at most reasonable rates as vacancies occur.

Membership Rates.—The rates are lower than any association in the country providing the same privileges. There should be 1,000 members in this city. Any self-respecting man may join, regardless of nationality or creed.

Full membership, including all privileges, is $6.00. $1.00 additional for a locker, if one is desired.

Limited.—$4.00 includes all privileges, except the gymnasium.

Intermediate and School Boys, $3.00. Special privileges for all over 15 and under 17 years.

SPIRITUAL

The question is often asked; "What is a spiritual man?" Rev. Elmore Harris, D.D., says; "A spiritual man is one who is controlled by the Spirit of God, in all the relationships of life." The aim of this work is, to bring such into all men's lives.

Evangelistic. — The Evangelistic Band meets every Friday evening at 7.30. It is the heart of the activities of this department.

The Evangelistic meeting for men and older boys, on Sunday at four o'clock, continues to be a strong force in the lives of those who attend it. A special series of addresses by local pastors begins with Oct. 6th. Special music by a male choir.

Bible Classes.—Saturday Bible Club, Saturday at 3 p.m., led by the General Secretary; studies in the "History of Jesus."

Gymnasium Men's Bible Club, 5.15 p.m. on Tuesday evenings.

Young Men's Training Class.—Studying the Sabbath School Lessons, Sundays at 10 a.m.

LINDSAY HAS BAD BOYS TOO

Two Youngsters Sent to the Reformatory

Lindsay, Sept. 30.—Chief of Police Vincent left this morning for Toronto with two small boys who were sentenced on Saturday last by Magistrate Jackson to five years in St. John's Reformatory, East Toronto.

The lads, whose names are Carone and Jackson, have been making things lively around here for some time past. They are both little brim of fellows, but their size enabled them to get under a boathouse and steal a canoe. This they paddled to Fenelon Falls and sold for the modest sum of ten cents. Paddles and cushions were also stolen. The boots of Senator McHugh was the next thing to be taken for their next lift this they intended to go to Sunderland. They slept in a barn over night, stealing horse blankets to keep out Jack Frost. On Saturday they appeared before Magistrate Jackson, in Juvenile court, and were sentenced.

There Were Many Starters In the Cross Country Run

"Jimmy" O'Brien Won the Senior and Garnet Tovey the Junior Race—Time Not as Fast as Last Year.

SENIOR RACE—Won by Jimmy O'Brien. Time, 17 minutes, 53 seconds.

Last year's time, 17 minutes, 21 seconds.

JUNIOR RACE—Won by Garnet Tovey. Time, 22 minutes, 20 seconds.

Last year's Time—18 minutes.

"Jimmy" O'Brien was the winner of the senior cross country run, and Garnet Tovey was first in the junior race, held yesterday afternoon in connection with the annual sports of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. A large number witnessed the start and finish of the events. Both were keenly contested and the number of entries in each was large.

"Jimmy" O'Brien finished fully two block ahead of the second man, his time being 17 minutes and 53 seconds, as compared with 17 minutes 21 seconds in the corresponding event last year. The time of Tovey in the junior run was 22 minutes, 20 seconds, as compared with 18 minutes a year ago.

THE COURSE.

The course is about two miles and three quarters. It starts at the corner of Murray and Water streets, and the conditions are that the runner must cross the creek at McDonnel street, and re-cross it at Smith street, and then down Water street, finishing at the starting point.

The senior race was for pupils of the Collegiate over fifteen years and the junior run for pupils who were not fifteen before September first.

THE START.

At half-past four Starter M. O'Brien lined up the senior entries. They were H. Leahy, J. O'Brien, M. Turner, Allin Cameron, Harry Hall, C. Elcome, J. Brightman and C. Ackerman. Two minutes later the juniors were started, there being 9 entries. They were Claude Barclay, R. Laing, G. Tovey, W. Perks, H. Wallis, S. Sheehy, F. Feeny, F. Long and O. Waterman. Some of the runners started at a pretty fast rate, while others took it easy at the start.

When the senior runners turned on to Water street and could be seen by those awaiting the result, it was noted that Jas. O'Brien was in the lead and a considerable distance ahead of his closest follower. He had every chance of winning out, and at the corner of McDonnel he slackened up, looked around to see how close his opponent was, and then again started off on a lively spurt, finishing fast and fresh. The second to finish was Melville Turner, about 2 minute after O'Brien. John Brightman was third and Allin Cameron fourth, while the remaining ones did not complete the course, having played out before they reached the mark.

The junior finish was an exciting one. Harold Lees and Garnet Tovey kept together for some distance, when a few yards from the finishing point lees broke away and came in a very short distance ahead of Tovey. As Harold Lees is past the age limit and was only running for practice, Garnet Tovey is therefore the winner. It might also be stated that Harold Lees finished with the third man in the senior race, and did not start until two minutes later, thus making excellent time. Lees would have ben a good match for O'Brien in the senior run. F. Feany was second, and H. Wallis third in the junior race. The others did not finish.

Mr. Alex. Gibson was the official time keeper, and Mr. H. R. H. Kenner was judge. Messrs. E. C. Scrigley and S. J. Stubbs were clerks of the course.

RUGBY

JUNIOR GAME ON SATURDAY.

The Crescents and Karnot rugby teams will meet in a practice game on Saturday afternoon at the Nicholls Oval. Both aggregations are in the pink of condition, and a good exhibition of rugby is assured. A meeting of the Crescent Club is called for tonight at 8 o'clock at the Y.M.C.A. hall. All the members are urgently requested to be present.

A meeting of the executive of the Rugby club was held in the Examiner office last night. It was decided that the locals will not play the Argos II on Saturday and as the first team will be unable to be here there will be no game.

The team had a good workout at the Riverside Park last night, a good sized bunch of players being on hand.

H Cressman		Turner

AN ORIGINAL LETTER BOX

Dr. Gray Has Unique and Useful Mail Receiving Device

Dr. Gray, coroner, seems to carry the originality of his professional ideas and methods into everyday life. He is not contented to meet the postal delivery system with the ordinary method—a slit in the front door—but has devised and constructed a unique letter receptacle. It consists of a wooden box about five feet in height. The box is placed against the right hand jamb of the front door and fits into the space between the outer and inner door. The back of the box is formed by the closed inner door and when the door is opened whatever mail matter may be in the box is then obtainable. Out in the outer side of the box is a longitudinal slot for the deposit of mail matter protected by a wooden valve of flap hinged at the top by means of a screw. The sides of the box extend a short distance above its real top and in the space thus formed may be placed packages, or parcels too bulky to be passed through the slot.

The doctor made this original mail deposit device with his own hand and in a very workmanlike manner too. It promises to admirably serve the purpose for which it is designed and as the genial doctor says it's as handy as a pocket in a shirt.

6965.—THE NEW KIMONO COAT.

The up-to-date wardrobe is not complete unless it includes a long coat which may be used for travelling or driving or for general wear in cool or rainy weather, and the most practical of such coats are those which are semi-fitting and roomy. The kimono coat illustrated possesses all the essential qualities of a serviceable comfort-yielding garment, while its graceful shaping is most admirable, being so arranged that the coat fits easily across the bust and shoulders, widening thence to the hem, where it hangs in full loose folds. The long, sloping shoulder, with the wide sleeve, seamed has a continuation of the shoulder seam and set into the wide armhole without fullness is a unique and conspicuous feature, this being the "latest cry" in Parisian coat models. As shown, the coat is made of biscuit-colored broadcloth, with applied trimmings of black satin, and is most appropriate for afternoon or evening wear; but it may be developed in homespun, cheviot or tweed for ordinary wear, or in waterproof silk or lined cravenette if needed for a raincoat. To make the medium size will require 8 1-4 yards of cloth 54 inches wide.

6965.—Sizes 32, 36 and 40 inches.

The Elshino House, Stoney Creek, was burned early yesterday morning with $3,000 loss.

Wilfrid Roullier, of St. Johns, Que., was killed while crossing the G.T.R. Saturday evening.

Employee Left the City With Cash

He Collected an Account and Then Departed

It is reported that Ernest Greene who had been employed all summer at the Peterborough Creamery left the city Saturday evening rather mysteriously, not informing his employer of his going, and also taking seven dollars, the amount of an account which he had collected. It appears Greene was sent to a hotel with the weekly account to collect, where he was paid $7.15. His week's wages had not been paid him so that he only took 15 cents more than his pay, which amount to $7.00. It was said that he went to Lindsay where he formerly resided. While the only shortage is that of 15 cents, the young man took a rather peculiar way to get his wages.

Good Price Paid for Cheese On the Peterborough Board

12 5/16 Was the Ruling Figure To-day—Boarding Larger Than at Last Meeting.

The number of cheese boarded at to-day's meeting of the Peterborough Board was 2,971 boxes and the bulk of the factories sold at 12 9-16c. A few went at 12 1-2c and two factories did not sell. At the last meeting of the Board 2,927 boxes were boarded and the ruling price was 12 5-16c. It will thus be seen that the make of cheese is keeping up well while the price is steadily advancing.

Mr. Riddell, the president was in the chair and the cheese was disposed of as follows:—

At 12 9-16c, Mr. Squires secured the following: Warminister, Oakdale, Daisy D., Ormonde, South Burleigh, Hope and Killarney.

At the same figure Mr. Weir bought Keene, Selwyn, Warsaw, Pine Grove and Lang.

Mr. Cook at 12 9-16c took the following lot: Shearer, Central Smith, Villiers, Westwood, Lakefield, Obonabee Union, Myrtle, East Emily, Irowern, Benefort, Cavanville, Fleetwood and Brickley.

The other factories who sold had to take 12 1-2c, Mr. (Wrighton securing the following at that figure: Maple Leaf, Fraserville, North Dummer, Cedardale and Mt. Pleasant.

Young's Point and Oak Leaf did not sell.

The boarding in detail was as follows:—

Aggressive Campaign Will Be Conducted by Y.M.C.A. Men

To Raise the Budget Necessary to Meet all Expenses of the Association Until End of Year—Campaign Will Last a Week—Strong Committee Formed Last Night.

What was pronounced by the oldest Y.M.C.A. workers present, the most enthusiastic and in every way the best, meeting of directors and workers of the Y.M.C.A. was that held in the building last evening.

Mr. Robt. Harding, president of the Association, occupied the chair, and several important items of business relating to the Association were discussed, among others, the question of a successor to Mr. Williamson, the present general secretary. The Board are unable to give any definite information yet, but hope that a good man will soon be secured.

Mr. Williamson then outlined the plan of the Six Days' Campaign to raise the budget necessary to meet all the expenses of the Association by Dec. 31st and start 1908 with a clean sheet. He stated that the finance committee had been unable to secure Mr. Thomasson, of the provincial staff, and further stated that he felt the obligation resting upon him to leave the work in good financial position, with the budget all provided for. He said the citizens of Peterborough could make no better endorsement of his ten and a half years of service, than by putting their shoulder to the wheel and securing the $1500 required by the budget, in subscriptions. He appealed to the board and the committee men to leave the hands of his successor free to develop the Association work and not ask him to shoulder the financial burden.

Short addresses were made by many of those present, including Messrs. Harding, Bennet, Shook, Roger, Stabler, Dixon, Connal and Thornton.

The young men were strongly represented at the meeting and Messrs. Coleman, McLaren, Simon, Galley, Fred Hall and others, responded for them. All promised active co-operation in the scheme.

It was decided in addition to the amount to be raised by the Citizens' Campaign Committee, that the young men raise $500 in new membership fees by Tuesday evening next, October 8th, when the campaign will close.

Mr. Williamson leaves the city for Fort William on October 10th, as much work must be done before then.

The following were appointed last as a citizens' campaign committee, with Mr. J. C. Shook as chairman. All the members of the Board together with the following: Messrs. D. Hughes-Charles, J. Crane, T F Matthews, R R Hall, Jas Keadry, J R Stratton, T E Bradburn, Mayor McWilliams, E G Patterson, W H Denham, R Fair, W H Hamilton, F Brownscombe, H Rush, J D Collins, Jas Hamilton, Peter Campbell, Richard Hall, J H Lamouth, W. Hill, R E Layfield, Jno. Carlisle, Robt. Neill and F H Dobbin.

Mr Wm. McLaren is chairman of the young men's campaign committee and Mr. Fred Hall of the boys' campaign committee.

All the members of the committees will meet at the building tonight at 6.30 for tea, after which the campaign will be discussed and practically launched.

HAY TOOK DROP YESTERDAY

The better half of a load of hay slipped off a farmer's waggon at the corner of Park and Charlotte streets yesterday afternoon about 4.30 o'clock. After considerable delay the owner managed to fork it on again with assistance of a bystander.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, box W. 62, Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are, it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

Rev. Father Holden has resigned as secretary of the Separate School Board of Hamilton.

New Gold Camp
OF LARDER LAKE
NORTHERN ONTARIO.

We earnestly recommend that you purchase the Highland Mary Gold Mines stock at 10 cents per share. This advice means riches to you. The time is not far distant when Highland Mary will be paying large and continuous dividends. By buying now at a price you can afford to pay you will be a participant in these assured profits.

As we have heretofore stated in our circular letters and advertisements, we are willing to stake our standing and reputation on the present conditions and the future outcome of the Larder Lake district and as to its possibilities. We believe it will be the most wonderful gold field that the world has produced. When we make these assertions it is after we have made most searching and thorough investigations. We do not believe that a financial house who has every facility at its command, having a number of experienced mining men in the field, and reliable and trustworthy mining engineers could go to more pains regarding the actual worth of a gold camp than we have done. We have been most cautious and we are very particular as to what we recommend for investment. We have built up a big business and the investors who place confidence in us and follow our advice number many thousands. We guard the interests of our investors just as closely and with as much care as we do our individual investments. This is the reputation we have attained among the investing public. We have gone to great expense in ascertaining the true merits and real conditions of the Highland Mary properties. In order to satisfy ourselves beyond question we despatched various crews of men to make examinations. They were supplied with all the necessities, such as hand drills, dynamite and camp outfits.

They have visited all of the properties, have blown out the ore, and we have had same assayed, not only by our own assayists but by others. The proofs that we have obtained demonstrate beyond question the great values of the HIGHLAND MARY.

The properties consist of 30 claims of 40 acres each, making a total acreage of 1,200 acres. The claims are in the locality of the famous Reddick claims, the Proprietary Gold Fields and the wonderful Blue Bell and Lucky Boys properties.

Law and Co., have experts and engineers who are rated among the best, engaged in examining and reporting on properties. Only those properties which have every indication of richness are handled by us; all the others are turned down as too risky. Our engineers and experts are in the field at a great expense, and it would not pay us to make a report on and sell the stock in any worthless company.

We are looking far into the future, and we thoroughly realize that the only way to hold our customers and keep them interested is for them to invest their money in stocks that have merit and that are sure winners.

THE MAN OR WOMAN WHO INVESTS THEIR MONEY THROUGH US CAN SIT DOWN AT THEIR HOMES AND FULLY REALIZE THAT WHATEVER FUNDS THEY HAVE INVESTED HAVE BEEN WELL PLACED.

You can absolutely depend that the officers and directors of the Highland Mary will expend the money received from the sale of Treasury stock in the development of the property. We wish to call your attention to the fact that 1,000,000 shares of the stock of this company are for the absolute use and benefit of the Treasury.

10c PER SHARE
(Par Value $1.00, Fully Paid and Non-Assessable.)

If you will compare the price, 10c per share, and the organization and incorporation of the Highland Mary against any of the other companies now upon the market, you cannot but realize the great percentage there is in favor of your investing your money in this stock in preference to any other.

Coming to the most vital point of all, when you interest yourself in Highland Mary you are becoming a partner of people who are practical mining men, who have made fortunes out of mining, and who are willing to wait the development of this property to make their fortunes.

Capitalization of Highland Mary, $3,000,000. Par value of shares, $1.00. 1,000,000 shares in the treasury for development purposes.

Wire or telephone orders at our expense. Prospectus, with full information, containing application blanks, mailed to any address.

License Holders Will Fight; Will Consolidate Interests

Will Reorganize to Resist Blue Ribbon Wave in Ontario.

Convention Will Be Held in Toronto on Oct. 22 to Consolidate Various Liquor Interests Throughout the Province—Politics to Play No Part, Declares the President—Policy of Protection Against Extremists.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—A meeting of the executive of the Ontario License Holders' Protective Association was held yesterday, when E. Dickie, for 13 years secretary, tendered his resignation, which was accepted with regret. John Stormont of Toronto was elected secretary pro tem. Arrangements were also made for a mass meeting of all branches of the trade, to be held in this city on Oct. 23, for the purpose of reorganization.

T. P. Phelan of the Canadian Railway News Co., who is president of the Ontario License Holders' Association, made the frank statement last night that it had been found impossible to secure the harmony and unity of purpose necessary as an organization whose objects were to defend the interests of the trade, when each of the cities had its separate association, not responsible to the general body, piqayune jealousies, as he explained, giving rise, to friction.

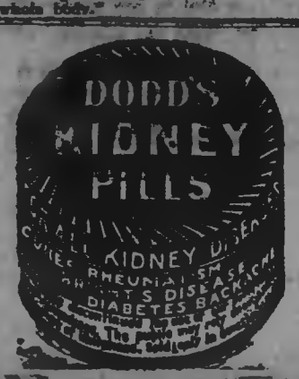
"The idea is a general consolidation of the different interests engaged in the liquor trade. There are now different organizations throughout the province at present, but a plan of reorganization contemplates making each organization committees of the whole body."

Mr. Phelan denied that politics played any part in the life of the association.

If the hopes of the executive are not disappointed, the meeting to be held within the next three weeks will be attended by between 500 and 600 license holders.

Mr. Phelan said that it was intended to adopt a vigorous policy of protection against would-be extremes of over zealous temperance workers.

A member of the executive, in discussing the reorganization plans last night, said that some dissatisfaction existed among license holders under the present regime, and that this was especially the case in the larger cities. He intimated that politics had something to do with the unsettled conditions and that there was a feeling in some quarters that the present Ontario Government was not dealing as generously in the matter of licenses as the former Government. Some of the members of the provincial association were "lukewarm," and it was felt that the system of a general organization for the province and separate associations for each of the cities of Ontario did not work well.



JOHN W. MORRIS KILLED.

Bowmanville, Oct. 2.—John W. Morris, formerly driver on Glover's 'bus line for many years, was killed near Galbraith's crossing on the Grand Trunk Railway yesterday afternoon by the passenger train leaving Toronto at 1.50. He had lately been employed as section man in Conner's gang. Yesterday afternoon he was work at a culvert, and had occasion to cross the track for a shovel just as two trains were approaching in opposite directions. Morris evidently did not observe the train from the west, as he stood on the track watching the other train passing, and was struck by the engine and thrown on the side of the track. He lived about half an hour after the accident.

Morris was about 48 years of age, and had lived in Bowmanville all his life. He leaves a wife and five children.

Regina, Sask., Oct. 2.—Charles Nelson, a C. P. He one knew of the accident, and the engine was uncouple and taken away, but immediately after the car inspector found Nelson in a terribly crushed condition jammed between two coaches. The engine was immediately rushed back and Nelson removed, but life was extinct. He was 28 years of age, and has a brother in Regina. His parents reside in Sarnia.

Taft In Tokio Says War Between Japan and States Would Be Insane.

Tokio, Oct. 2.—Secretary of War Taft aroused the wildest enthusiasm and loud cheers when, during the course of his speech at the banquet given in his honor by the municipality of Tokio and the Chamber of Commerce, he declared that war between the United States and Japan would "be a crime against modern civilisation, and as wicked as it would be insane," adding that neither people desired it, and that both Governments would do their utmost to guard such an awful catastrophe.

Viscount Shibusawa presided at the banquet, and, in welcoming Mr. Taft, paid a glowing tribute to the greatness of the nation which the Secretary represented, the friendliness which the United States had always displayed for Japan, and the influence which America exerted throughout the world.

SUICIDE ENDS QUARREL.

Newton Man Tries to Kill Wife and Then Shoots Himself.

Brockville, Oct. 2.—As the result of a domestic quarrel Daniel Reno of Newton Falls attempted to kill his wife, at the home of her aunt in Antwerp, afterwards putting a bullet into his own head and dying about an hour later. The woman left her home and came to Antwerp, leaving their 19 months old babe with Reno. He followed her and while begging the woman for a kiss in the yard he drew a revolver and fired, the bullet taking effect in the arm. Mrs. Reno fell. Regaining her feet she ran quickly towards the house, when Reno fired again, the bullet grazing the head of a neighbor who was attracted by the first shot.

Reno then turned the weapon on himself, putting a ball into his head near the right temple and fell to the ground. He raised himself upon his elbow and fired the remaining cartridge at the child sitting in a buggy a few feet away. The bullet missed it.

On the Big Jobs.

In New York city alone the great works of tunnels under city and river, railway terminals and depots, water supply and other similar enterprises now in progress aggregate the enormous sum of $625,000,000, or more than four Panama canals, says Popular Mechanics, while three of the undertakings amount to $100,000,000 each.

THE END OF IT.

British Yachtsmen Consider New Yorkers' Attitude Finishes Races.

Dublin, Oct. 2.—Sir Thomas Lipton again has expressed his deep regret at the refusal of the New York Yacht Club to accept his challenge to a race for the America's Cup, and in a lengthy letter to the Royal Irish Yacht Club he sets forth his reasons in detail. The committee of the club met last night.

The committee of the Royal Irish Yacht Club, in cabling its formal acknowledgment of the refusal of the challenge, expresses the regret of the committee and all the members of the club that a race could not be arranged. At the same time the secretary of the committee cables Sir Thomas Lipton's in full.

One of the leading honorary officials of the Royal Irish Yacht Club, said the committee, had approved of confining the reply to a mere formal acknowledgment. The terms of the communication of the New York Yacht Club precludes discussion, although the position assumed in the New York Yacht Club's resolutions was debatable on several points.

Yachting men on this side of the Atlantic regards the resolutions of the New York Yacht Club, as removing the America's Cup out of the field of sport. Sir Thomas Lipton would have put himself in the wrong with British yachting opinion had he acted otherwise than he has done, and it is now to be hoped that he will turn his attention to the sport to the home waters.

SOLD STOCK IN PULPIT.

Shares in Gold Mine Disposed of During Prayer Meeting.

New York, Oct. 2.—While a fervent prayer meeting was going on Monday night in the Macedonia classroom, in the basement of Big Bethel, a colored church on West Twentieth street, shares in an African gold mine were sold at 10 cents a share on the pulpit platform of the edifice. The subscription was so liberal that announcement was made of an advance to 25 cents a share after midnight.

The mining property staggers under the formidable title of the Arkansu Usuwar & Dompem Syndicate, and is situated on the gold coast of West Africa, where the tribal chiefs granted a concession to a New York company, incorporated in South Dakota. Alfred C. Cowan, the colored lawyer, is chairman of the company's committee of exploitation.

MILLIONS FOR CHARITY.

Wealthy Philadelphia Lady Bequeathes Millions in Good Causes.

Philadelphia, Oct. 2.—By the will of Miss Anna T. Jeanes, well known for her philanthropic work among the Society of Friends and the negro race, which was admitted to probate yesterday, she left almost her entire estate, valued at about $5,000,000, to charity.

Washington and Hollis Burke Frissalle, as trustees, and a codicil, dated Feb. 27, 1907, revoked that particular provision of the will. Among the institutions benefited are Swarthmore College and a score of hospitals in this city and elsewhere.

This is the second place he has visited since coming from Canada. The opera house, where he spoke, was crowded to the doors, and the venerable religious worker was loudly cheered. Commander Eva Booth also made a brief address. In the course of his address, General Booth said: "This is no farewell tour, and I have never given the matter of discontinuing my present active work a thought, for as long as there is sufficient strength left in my body, I shall be found on the firing line, fighting vice and lending a helping hand where wretchedness and poverty stalk."

The Last Stroke.

BY LAWRENCE L. LYNCH,

Author of "A Woman's Crime," "John Arthur's Ward," "The Diamond Coterie," "Against Odds," Etc.

"Prepare to go aboard the Lucania five days from date in the disguise of what do you imagine?"

"A navvy possibly."

"No. I know the boat's captain, luckily, and I know that a party of Salvation Army officers are to sail that day for England. We will go aboard, all of us, in the salvation uniform and doff it later, if we choose."

"You say all of us?"

"I mean Mrs. Myers, who goes to join her husband and see London and Paris; Miss Glidden, who goes because she wills to go and because she believes that Miss Grant can be best diverted from her sorrow, and strengthened for her future life, by such a journey Miss Grant, ergo, and our two selves." He leaned back and watched his vis-a-vis narrowly from underneath drooping lashes. He was giving his client's docility a severe test, and he knew it.

As for Robert, he remained so long silent that the detective, relaxing his gaze, resumed.

"I won't ask you to take too much upon trust, Brierly. Our present position, briefly told, is this: We are nearing the climax, but we cannot force it. One point of the game still remains in the enemy's hands. And the scene is shifted to England—to London, to be literal. The next move must be made by the other side. It will be made over there, and we must be at hand when the card is played. If all odds as I hope and anticipate, your presence in London will be imperative, almost. As for the ladies, Miss Grant's presence may be needed, as a witness perhaps, and certainly nothing could be better for her than the companionship of her friend, Miss Ruth, and the motherly kindness of Mrs. Myers just now."

Robert Brierly turned his face away, and clinched his hands in desperation. He was thinking of Ruth, and an inward battle was raging between strong love and stubborn pride.

"And now," went on the other, as if all unheeding, "concerning the disguises. I have told you of the person seen by our spies at the Glenville House, for a brief time?"

Brierly bowed assent.

"He, this man was only described to me, but seen by Miss Grant."

"Oh!" Brierly started.

"Lately, we have received through the good offices of Mr. Doran, a picture of this man—it's growing late and I'll give the details at another time—I have believed this man to be one of your enemies, quite possibly the one."

"One of them?"

"Yes. And large and muscular enough he is, to have been your assailant, and—"

"And my brother's murderer?"

"In my opinion they are not the same. But we must not go into this. Someone has kept us—that is yourself, Miss Grant and myself, in the character of her cousin—under constant watch, almost. There must have been tools, but this man I believe to be the chief, on this side."

"Great heavens! How many are there then?"

"Honestly, I do not yet know. The answer to that is in Europe. But this man—he has been shadowed since Miss Grant saw him on Clarke street—has already sailed for England. My man escorted him, after a modest and retiring fashion, to New York, and saw him embark. I propose that we go east by different routes. The ladies one way, you and I by another. They will hardly imagine us all jitting by water, and their spies will hardly be prepared for a sea voyage, even should one of us be "piped" to the wharf. Of one thing I must warn you; you are not to set foot in London, nor to put yourself in evidence anywhere as a tourist, until you are assured that you may walk abroad in safety. To know that you were in England would be to render your opponents desperate, indeed."

"You have only to command. I am as wax in the potter's hand henceforth. And now I ask you on the eve of this long journey why my brother and myself are thus hunted. How we stand in the way of these enemies of ours I cannot imagine."

"That I am ready to tell you, since you ask no more. You stand between your enemies and a fortune."

"Impossible!"

"I knew you would say that. But wait." Ferrars rose abruptly. "I shall not see you again before we leave for New York," he said, taking up his hat. "Come with me across the way. I must say goodbye to the ladies; they—"

"Do they understand?"

"Yes."

Mrs. Myers and her two charges were pleasantly bestowed just across the street, in one of the cozey and tree-encircled cottages of the aristocratic little suburb, in which the party had found a retreat. And all three were still upon the broad piazza when the two men appeared.

A new ice-breaker is to be put in Northumberland Straits.

CANADA WILL SETTLE

Government Will Pay Japan's Claim Without Quibble.

Will Then Look to Vancouver For Reimbursement — Damages Will Amount to Between $5,000 and $6,000 — Special Cabinet Meeting Discusses the Whole Situation—Had Barely a Quorum.

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—The Dominion Cabinet met yesterday afternoon, with Sir Wilfrid Laurier presiding, but only three other members, Hon. Mr. Scott, Secretary of State; Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, and Mr. Lemieux, Postmaster-General, were present.

According to one of the gentlemen there, no business was touched on except that relative to the claim made for the Japanese Government.

Dr. Munro, the Canadian immigration agent at Vancouver, was asked on Monday as to his authority for demanding passports direct to Canada from Japanese upon arriving there. A telegram was received from him yesterday, stating that it was formerly the custom to do this, and he was merely revering to it. He has been asked to stop it, as it is an infringement of the treaty.

Japanese Consul-General Nosse waited on the Government yesterday and presented claims for damages caused by the riots in Vancouver. The damages will amount to between $5,000 and $6,000. The Cabinet was to meet and pass the amount. There will be no quibbling over it. The money will be paid and the City of Vancouver will be asked to refund the amount.

At yesterday afternoon's meeting, said one of the quartette that were present, we had barely a quorum and did nothing definite about the matter. Mr. Munro will be heard from in a day or two—at least that is what we expect—and until he is we thought it wiser to do nothing formal and so the claim was not passed yesterday.

Notwithstanding this, it is known practically certain that it will be passed, and, as intimated above, the Government will then look to Vancouver to settle.

FRENCH TEAM.

Will Likely Be a Candidate For the Palma Shooting Trophy.

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—France may send a team for the next Palma trophy match. A letter to this effect has been received by Major Winter, secretary of the D. R. A., from the French National Rifle Association.

In July, Major Winter sent to the French association the regulations of the last match. The communication, however, apparently reached the president too late for action.

He has written for the results of the recent contest at Rockliffe, and has further stated that if a comparison with their own efficiency is favorable, a team will doubtless be entered in 1908. Les Tireurs Francaise would add even greater international interest.

Canadian Clergy Swindled.

New York, Oct. 2.—Israel Salinki, a young Russian Jew, pretending conversion to Christianity and missionary worker to proselyte the Jews from Judism for the Christian Church, was exposed by Dr. Daniel H. Overton, pastor of the Greene avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, and Rev. Hickman Denning, rector of Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland, last week, as being a rank fraud and swindler, having victimized clergymen and congregationalists, Catholics and Protestants, out of many thousands of dollars in Boston, Montreal, Cleveland and other cities, including Toronto, by begging contributions and taking up church collections.

Finding the police here after him he skipped out. From papers found in abandoned luggage he swindled clergymen and congregations in Toronto out of nearly nine hundred dollars.

Intercolonial Wins.

Montreal, Oct. 2.—The arbitrators appointed to settle the differences between the Grand Trunk and Intercolonial Railroads regarding running rights to the latter over the Grand Trunk from St. Rosalie Junction, have announced their reward.

The Intercolonial claimed that traffic originating on the Grand Trunk System west of Montreal destined for points on the Intercolonial was being forwarded elsewhere than via Montreal.

The award upholds the contentions of the Intercolonial and holds that the Grand Trunk committed a breach of contract, and an accounting has been tendered to ascertain the damage.

Father and Son Burned.

Hamilton, Oct. 2.—Last evening about 7 o'clock George Hutchison got his boy to hold a lighted candle while filled a lamp with gasoline.

He did not have to wait long for the trouble. There was an explosion and the boy, man and shop were soon enveloped in flames.

The blacksmith and boy were severely burned and the shop was gutted, the loss amounting to several hundred dollars.

Located by an "Ad."

Vancouver, Oct. 2.—W. H. Alward of St. Thomas, Ont., through an advertisement, has just located here his missing sister, wife of W. A. O'Hara, a hotel clerk.

She is one of the heirs to $70,000 left by her aunt, Mrs. Ostrander, killed in the San Francisco earthquake.

New Steamer for Lake Trade.

Montreal, Oct. 2.—A new steamer, destined for the lake-carrying trade, arrived in Montreal last night from Dundee. She is the G. R. Cole, and was built in Great Britain for the St. Lawrence and Chicago Navigation Co. for the grain carrying trade. She left for Toronto last evening.

Mrs. Margaret Robertson, of Hamilton, widow of the late Duncan Robertson, is dead.

BIG MEN ARRAIGNED

American Insurance Officials Ordered to Appear in Court.

Prominent Men Who Will Be Called Upon to Defend Themselves on Serious Counts—Forgery and Perjury Are Among the Charges—District Attorney Jerome Proposes to Push the Cases to the End.

New York, Oct. 2.—Leading officials of several of the large life insurance companies were summoned by District Attorney Jerome yesterday to appear before the criminal branch of the Supreme Court to plead to indictments found against them by the grand jury.

Among the officials summoned were Charles S. Fairchild, formerly secretary of the United States Treasury, and formerly trustee of the New York Life Insurance Co.; George W. Perkins, of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., also formerly vice-president of the same company, both of whom are accused of forgery; John R. Hegeman, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., accused on seven counts of forgery and three of perjury; Frederick A. Burnham, President George D. Eldredge, formerly vice-president, all of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Co., against whom collectively are pending fifteen indictments alleging forgery and perjury; Walter R. Gillette, formerly vice-president of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., charged with forgery, and Thomas D. Jordan, former comptroller of the Equitable Life Assurance Co., against whom there are eighteen counts alleging forgery and perjury.

They are all ordered to appear in court on Monday.

BANWELL A WITNESS.

Defaulting Crown Bank Teller to Be Summoned to Give Evidence.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—Edwin Banwell, at present serving a sentence in the penitentiary for theft from the Crown Bank, will be brought to Toronto soon to testify in the court suit of the bank against the London Guarantee & Accident Co.

Banwell decamped with $48,000, of which all but $1,700 was recovered after the bank had spent $8,000 in getting him back from Jamaica. The bank wants to be reimbursed for the latter amount.

The guarantee company paid $3,500 into court, of which $1,700 is for the money lost, and $800 for the pro rata share of the expenses, which is all for which the company maintains it is liable.

The bank had two policies with the London company—one on Banwell for $5,000 and one on the accountant, through whose negligence it was alleged the defalcation of Banwell was possible, for $6,000.

BLOW UP SHERIFF.

Bomb Exploded as He Entered the Gate of His Home.

Baker City, Ore., Oct. 2—An attempt was made Monday night to assassinate former Sheriff Harvey K. Brown by blowing him up with a dynamite bomb.

One of his legs was blown off, an arm badly mutilated, and internal injuries were caused by the concussion.

Brown was returning home and as he opened his gate the bomb exploded, wounding Brown and blowing in the windows of the house. The authorities are unable to find any cause for the deed.

Mrs. Brown was prostrated by the shock and may not recover.

$100,000 For Opera Box.

New York, Oct. 2.—For the first time in nearly five years a box in the famous "diamond horseshoe" in the Metropolitan Opera House has changed owners.

For a price in excess of $100,000, Henry Clay Frick, millionaire iron master and long-time friend and associate of Andrew Carnegie, has purchased a coveted place in the parterre row, box No. 19, which, since the opera house was built, had been owned by the late Henry I. Barbey, who died last winter.

Mr. Frick, who has long desired a box in the Metropolitan, had the first call on the box.

This is the first outright sale of a parterre box in the Metropolitan since January, 1903, when the late Heber R. Bishop's box was bought by James R. Haggin for $80,000.

Three Years In Kingston.

St. Catharines, Oct. 2.—James Wadsworth, the Queenston hotelkeeper, convicted on Monday of receiving goods stolen by five boys from the Grand Trunk cars at Niagara Falls, appeared before Judge Carman for sentence yesterday morning. Wadsworth pleaded that he had been drunk at the time, and that if he got free he would not be seen within 4,000 miles of Canada for ten years. The judge stated that the offence was too serious to be lenient with and sentenced him to three years in Kingston Penitentiary.

CORPSE COMES TO LIFE.

Huntington Woman In a Trance Was Prepared For Burial.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—A despatch from Wheeling, W. Va., says: Relatives of Mrs. Frederick Hartzell, the young wife of a farmer living near Huntington, were bemoaning her death Monday, a few minutes before the minister arrived to conduct the funeral rites, when she suddenly sat up and climbed out of the coffin.

There was a rush of mourners for the open air, windows being used as exits. The minister swooned when a pale-faced woman, over whose body he had been called to conduct services, met him at the door.

The family was too poor to have a physician, and the woman fell into a swoon, in which state she remained for four days.

MINISTER'S WIFE MISSING.

Mrs. H. A. Prescott, of Lisbon, Left Home a Week Ago.

Brockville, Oct. 2.—Mrs. H. A. Prescott, wife of the Congregational minister at Lisbon, has been missing from her home since the middle of last week. She drove to Ogdensburg and later moved to Prescott on the ferry boat. There all trace of her ceases.

The matter has been the subject of much discussion, and while there are many rumors afloat in the neighborhood, there is no satisfactory explanation of the affair. The couple have been resident but a few months, and it is said their domestic relations were not the happiest. Mrs. Prescott is about 19 years of age.

Archbishops Convene.

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—Archbishop O'Connor of Toronto and Archbishop Langevin of St. Boniface reached Ottawa yesterday morning.

Four more archbishops are expected to-day to attend the annual meeting of the archbishops of the Dominion, held in the palace here, for the discussion of matters pertaining to the church in Canada.

All will be present except Mgr. Ord of Victoria. Those who will be here are: Archbishops Begin, Quebec; O'Connor, Toronto; Bruchesi, Montreal; Gauthier, Kingston; Langevin, St. Boniface; McCarthy, Halifax, and Duhamel, Ottawa. The proposed plenary council may be one of the matters discussed.

Steamer Metamora Burned.

Parry Sound, Oct. 2.—On Sunday evening, the big tug Metamora of the Midland wrecking fleet was burned to the water's edge in Shawanaga Bay.

The vessel ran on a rock and the crew went ashore and while absent from the boat it rolled over on its side and caught fire.

Down on Domestic Science.

Ingersoll, Oct. 2.—Manual training and domestic science have received the disapproval of the board of education, who in a resolution have asked that the council take a plebiscite on these branches at the January elections.

WEDDING BELLS

EDWARDS—MANTELL

A popular young resident of the city in the person of Mr. J. C. Edwards, advertising manager for A. W. Cressman, was united in marriage yesterday, the happy bride being Miss N. M. Mantell, of Tilsonburg. The pleasing event took place at Belleville and was performed at the residence by Rev. C. H. Emmerson, Baptist minister. The ceremony took place at five o'clock and was witnessed by only the attendants. The bride wore a handsome travelling gown of blue invisible striped broadcloth, the waist being of embroidered net over silk, trimmed with baby Irish lace. Her hat was a toque shape trimmed with blue French roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Gertrude Mantell, of Napanee, who was attired in a suit of brown broadcloth made in similar style to that of the bride, with hat to match. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Bert Edwards, of this city.

The happy couple returned to Peterborough last night and will reside at 410 Charlotte street, where they will be at home to their friends after November 1st.

The bride, who was one of Tilsonburg's popular young ladies, received many beautiful presents—an evidence of the esteem in which she was held. The staff of Cressman's store presented Mr. Edwards with a handsome green burlap screen, with frame of weathered oak, and colored burnt wood scenes at the top, and also two beautiful pictures in carbon, entitled "Cupid Asleep" and "Cupid Awake."

Since coming to Peterborough a few months ago Mr. Edwards has made numerous friends and is being heartily congratulated on the happy event.

LOOKS AFTER LOST ARTICLES

Mr. Edwards, manager of "The Crystal," desires to let the patrons of this amusement house know that all articles lost or left behind in "The Crystal" are carefully kept in the box office until claimed by their owners. He says that since the opening of "The Crystal" there he has had as many as four umbrellas awaiting owners at the box office.

Treasurer William Grant stated that the subscriptions had amounted to $25,340, and that $5,000 more, would cover the total cost of the building and provide maintenance to the end of 1908.

The new building is of red brick, with limestone trimmings, and contains a lecture hall, gymnasium, bowling alley, boys' department, dormitory and cloak rooms. Rev. Dr. Johnston conducted the dedicatory services on Sunday.

Assessment Will Show Population About 16,000

Roll Not all Handed in But it is Learned That Population Has Increased Nearly 1,000 During Year.

Assessors McKee and McGrath have not yet handed in all their rolls and therefore it is impossible to secure the complete figures as to increase in assessment, population, etc. However, it is learned from an unofficial but reliable source, that the population of the city, as shown by this year's assessment, will go near the 16,000 mark, or an increase of about a thousand over last year. It was stated by a gentleman, who is in close touch with the work of the assessors, that if Ward 2 showed an increase of population in keeping with that of the other wards, the total for the city, will be in the vicinity of 16,000.

The assessment figures will show a big increase over last year, especially in the southern part of the city.

Local Citizen Advocates A Municipal Fuel Yard

The suggestiohn of the citizen, whose letter appears below, that a municipal fuel yard should be established, appears a little bit ahead of the times, but it has points worth considering. The letter is as follows:

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—I notice that the combine has been increasing the price of coal to the extent of ten cents per ton per month since June the first last, and this month the increase has been doubled, making the price of that commodity at the present time $7.50. This last advance is accompanied by an announcement which no doubt will be a consolation to the many poor people in our midst, who are not financially able to lay in their Winter's supply, namely, that these prices will be further increased as the cold weather approaches, and in all probability will go as high as $8. Surely this action on the part of our coal merchants will wake the people up to a sense of duty—if that is possible—and bring them to realize that the establishment of a municipal fuel yard would be in their interests, and the only means whereby they can obtain one of the most important necessaries of life at a reasonable cost, and be no longer at the mercy of a few individuals, whose interest it is to extort them.

Yours respectfully,
PRO BONO PUBLICO.

Grand Trunk is After Land to Build Two New Sidings

More Accommodation Needed at Local Depot—Superintendent Tiffin Was in City Yesterday in Connection With the Matter.

The Grand Trunk Railway have taken steps to increase their siding accommodation at the Peterborough station. The rapid increase in traffic has made this imperative, as at present difficulty is being experienced in handling the trains at the depot. To permit the building of more switches, more land is necessary and the company are now endeavoring to secure it. It is proposed to put two new sidings, east of Bethune street, between the station and Wolfe street. They already own the quarter of the block fronting on Wolfe and Bethune streets, and also the quarter block fronting on Dalhousie and Bethune. They are desirous of purchasing the quarter blocks immediately north of the property they already own, or in other words, the block at the corner of Bethune and Dalhousie streets, and the one at the corner of Bethune and Sherbrooke streets. The railway people are now negotiating with the owners of the lots embraced in these two blocks, and there is little doubt but that they will accomplish what they are after. There are three houses on the property at the corner of Bethune and Dalhousie streets, two of them belonging to Mr. Wm. Martin and one to Mr. Robt. Martin. They are new structures, and will have to be torn down to make way for the new siding. On the block at the corner of Bethune and Sherbrooke, there is a house owned by Mr. W. H. Hamilton, but it has seen its best days.

According to the company's plans, one siding will commence at the north-east corner of Bethune and Dalhousie streets, and will extend along the property lying east of Bethune street. The other siding will commence near the south east corner of Wolfe and Bethune streets, and will be laid on the property east of Bethune street, between Wolfe and Dalhousie streets.

Mr. W. R. Tiffin, superintendent of the Northern Division of the Grand Trunk, was in the city yesterday and had a conference with Mayor McWilliams, Ald. Duncan, chairman of the Board of Works, and several civic officials regarding the matter. The city is interested inasmuch as the new sidings will run across the public streets at two places.

The matter will be discussed at the Board of Works meeting tonight.

The civic officials took advantage of Mr. Tiffin's visit to the city, to discuss with him the crossing of the Belleville line of the Grand Trunk by the extension of George street. Mr. Tiffin, with the mayor and other officials drove to the place in question, and it is likely that the city will be allowed to cross the railway track without opposition from the company. This matter, as well as that of the new sidings, will be referred to the Railway Committee, this being the legal procedure at the present time.

Mr. Tiffin was also taken to the north end, where the Grand Trunk is interested in the proposed diversion of the creek. This matter will have to be settled between the city and company. The railway people will be asked to bear part of the expense of diverting the stream, as their property will be affected by the proposed change.

The three matters will all be taken up at the Board of Works meeting tonight.

Stormy Weather for October

There Will be Storm Periods, Clouds and Rain

Rev. Irl Hicks, in his weather review for October, says; A reactionary storm period is central on the 2nd, 3rd and 4th. A regular storm period is central on the 8th, covering the 7th to the 11th. Low barometer, very warm for the season, and general storms of thunder, wind and rain will set in about the seventh in the west, and during the 8th, 9th and 10th these storms will take wide paths in their eastward sweep across the country. High barometer from the northwest will push severe to dangerous gales over the lake regions, all to be followed by marked change to colder, bringing frost to much of the country, central and northward, from about 9th to 13th. A reactionary storm period will culminate on and touching the 14th and 15th. Much of the country will experience very cool days and frosty nights, not far from the 15th to 18th. A regular storm period embraces the 18th to 22nd, and promises to bring very decided autumnal storms. By the 20th cloudiness and rain will appear, and from Sunday the 20th to Tuesday 22nd, storm areas, will make transit eastwardly across the country. The crisis of this period will fall on the 20th and 21st in all central parts of the country. Rain and wind, with lightning and thunder, will attend the first stage of these storms, but change to cool autumnal rain, with snow possible in the north and west, will result on the north and west flanks of storm areas, all followed by very cool nights and frosts, reaching well to the southward. A reactionary storm period is central on the 25th, 26th and 27th. A regular storm period begins on the 29th, is central on the 31st, extending to November thee 3rd. From about the 31st to November 3rd, autumnal rains will take up their march from west to east, touching most parts of the country, and being followed from west and north by rising barometer, change to cool westerly winds, with early snow and sleet over large areas to the northward. Shippers and navigators who disregard storm indications and warnings about this time will risk paying penalties in human lives and wrecked shipping. We believe that the last half of October and all of November, will bring a spell of open weather, more favorable, perhaps, for outdoor work, and bringing as little general exposure to orchards, gardens and fields as the reactions to cold and frost during much of September and early, October.

AMUSEMENTS

"ALLEN DOONE"

Ireland's Sweetest Singer and Comedian

An unusually pretentious offering at the Grand Opera House will be the new scenic comedy-drama, "A Romance in Ireland," with the favorite singing comedian, Allen Doone, as it bright particular star, which will be presented on Saturday next, matinee and night, under the direction of George W. Kenney. Mr. Doone, who has for the past two seasons starred in the Joseph Murphy plays, will now be seen in a great part, which is said to fit him like the proverbial glove, in a play which is constructed on new and diectinctly original time. A pretty love interest markable dramatic intensity and a story of absorbing interest. "A Romance in Ireland" is divided into four acts and eight stage settings. Its atmosphere is that of the seventeenth century and its characters are costumed in the quaint garb of that romantic time. A pretty love interest runs through the story, which also abounds with Irish wit and plenty of good, wholesome comedy. Mr. Doone will be heard in a number of musical specialties, comprising both comic and sentimental songs, which he has composed especially for this production, and in which his sweet tenor voice will be displayed to excellent advantage. An interesting feature will be the old Irish folk songs and dances, performed to the inspiring music of the "pipes."

Both Teams Should be at Fire Hall

In Case of Big Blaze Much Damage Might be Done Before Team Returned

It has been suggested that both teams be kept in the fire hall stables all the time, so that they may be placed in the harness immediately an alarm is sounded. At present one of the teams is frequently out on the streets drawing the watering cart or doing other work of a similar kind. In case of an alarm it might be some time before the team thus engaged could be brought back to the hall, and serious loss might result in the meantime.

WORK OF TRADE JOURNALS

The function of a trade journal is necessarily varied, but its efforts, if properly directed can accomplish much. It is the duty of various branches of business to organize for their mutual protection and benefit as well as for co-operation and harmony of interests. All trades are banded together to preserve their rights, and well-being, to bring about better conditions, to eliminate wrongs, and abuses, and meet encroachments that are constantly cropping up and fomenting the pathway of progress.

Organization in all lines, has accomplished much. It has brought about a saner order of things generally. True, it may be, that organization at times, is carried too far, but the benefits accruing from united, earnest effort, far outweigh any transgressions, that may be caused by two much zeal or from a one-sided view-point. In helping along all such movements, in welding together the interest of men engaged in a common cause, in persistently advocating that which is highest and best for their welfare, the trade journal has played an important part. It requires skillful management, sound judgment, and wide-awake, progressive ideas to conduct a trade journal. It must enjoy the fullest measure of confidence and esteem of both wholesaler and retailer; it must be eminently just and fair to all and preserve a "balance" that may not be required of an ordinary daily publication. While its field is to a certain extent, limited to the interests which it serves, it must take no mean, narrow or prejudiced views. It's sphere of operation should extend to all things that directly or indirectly bear on each respective trade. It is the beacon light, the vigilant guardian of conditions generally. An excellent trade publication can do as much to engender action and public spirit on the part of those immediately concerned as a daily paper, can in the line of stirring up the latent feelings of any community, and arousing citizens to a sense of their potentialities and responsibilities. It can raise the whole tone of business, the morals of any body of men, and incite them to use all that is best and brightest and, in a measure forget the vexations, trials and set-backs, incidental to any business or calling.

Canada has many excellent and ably conducted trade journals. They have stimulated the different trades to organize in their own interest, to adopt advanced methods of doing business, to shorten the hours of labor, to raise the whole standard of business, to protect, themselves from unjust encroachments, to build up their own communities and their own country, and lastly, but not least, to advertise in the local papers. By various other methods have trade journals leavened certain callings with ideas of liberalism, oneness of aim and unity of purpose. They have not trenched on the field or income of local or weekly papers, but have been in more ways than one a great aid to many of them, resulting in increased patronage in the advertising columns, and a more generous use of printers ink. Their mission has been educative, instructive and helpful in every respect. Long may the well-conducted trade journal flourish. It never enjoyed such prestige as it does today, and it is in all respects one of the best adjuncts and helpmates, that any legitimate avenue of commercial endeavor could desire.

TIMELY SUGGESTIONS

The Grand Jury in its presentment at the Fall Assizes, made some sensible and pertinent recommendations which should be carried into effect. There is no doubt but that the pay given grand and petit jurors is too small. Especially when men have to travel some distance to attend to their duties as Jurors, the remuneration is so meagre that they are out of pocket. The fees should be large enough to cover all legitimate expenses and a little to the good. The cost of living has greatly increased, but the juror still receives the same allowance as he did many years ago. Judges have spoken strongly in favor of an advance and nearly every grand jury in the province has called attention to this important matter.

Again, why should old and infirm men from this city, whose only offence is poverty, or being without friends be compelled to languish in the county gaol, along with inmates who have committed crimes and are, in many cases, hardened and confirmed malefactors. Surely the City of Peterborough is rich and prosperous enough to provide a more suitable place for the care and comfort of its aged, indigent residents. Happily, they are very few in number, but every large centre has a few and these should be looked after. The county has a well-equipped and comfortable home at Lakefield, and is this city going to lag behind in the matter of securing proper quarters and providing for the poor?

Juvenile crime also came in for attention at the hands of the Grand Jury. In Peterborough, during the past few months there has been a Saturnalia among the youth. The police court has almost daily been the scene of many boys, being arraigned for this that and the other offence. The majority of the culprits have been pronounced incorrigible by their parents, who seem, in several instances, to have lost completely parental control. The magistrate and officers have long believed in the effectiveness of corporal punishment for such offenders, rather than sending them to industrial schools, reformatories, or to Children's Shelter. A good sound flogging is needed in the greater number of cases and the jury recommended that, looking to the best interests of both children and parents, and the future well-being of the juveniles, as well as to the whole moral effect, authority be given to police magistrates to have punishment administered by flogging. The jurors were of the opinion, after careful observation and enquiry, that this is the best preventative of petty crime by children under eighteen years of age. At present the authorities are not vested with this form of punishment but they should be. The old axiom holds good, "Spare the rod, spoil the child," and in the treatment of youthful felons, corporal chastisement would work a marvellous transformation on the part of boys inclined to pilfer, destroy and commit all sorts of offences against society.

MEAN KIND OF THEFT

The stranger or casual visitor walks into any church in Peterborough to attend the services. At the vestibule he is welcomed by courteous and attentive ushers or sidesmen, who conduct him to a comfortable seat and hand him a hymn or prayer book.

This has been done for years in this city and until lately all has gone along smoothly and satisfactorily. But it seems that confidence has been misplaced in some visitors for recently thefts of prayer books and hymn books have been reported from nearly every sacred edifice.

Of all the meanest kind of stealing that of walking away with church property is the most degraded and reprehensible. Each sanctuary expends considerable money in providing conveniences for visitors. The books are generally stamped "The property of —— church," and attached are the words 'Please leave in the pew at the close of the service."

Are such instructions followed? Not a bit of. Too often the number gathered up at the termination of the devotions are less than that given out by the ushers. The frequency with which books have been missed during the past few weeks, has resulted in the press calling attention to this matter in the hope that the practice will be checked without the necessity of prosecuting any offenders. Why should these books be taken from a place of divine worship? The act is not due to thoughtlessness, forgetfulness or oversight, but rather evidences deliberate intention on the part of certain people to wilfully corral something that does not belong to them. The loss to each church in the course of a few months amounts to no small sum, and it is high time that the growing despicable practice should cease.

PEN POINTS

Those letters carriers are already going about their business like veterans.

The agitation in favor of the publication of the assessment rolls is widespread. The city Council should not fail to have them printed.

The future of Peterborough is certainly bright with promise; the city has 25,000 electric lights.

The Peterborough fall fair management is by no means discouraged. Already plans are being prepared for next years exhibition.

September, beautiful, attractive September, the most enjoyable month for a holiday of all the year, has taken her flight.

STOP, WOMAN!

AND CONSIDER THE ALL-IMPORTANT FACT

—That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman — a woman whose experience with women's diseases covers a great many years. Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for many years under her direction, and since her decease, she has been advising sick women free of charge.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probable examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.

If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health so many women, you cannot well say, without trying it "I do not believe it will help me."

If you want mail matter delivered at your door be sure that your street address and number is placed on all your correspondence.

Some of those gentlemen who are winning prizes in the Limerick competitions, will be palming themselves off as genuine sons of the Emerald Isle.

Matters are rather quiet in civic circles just now. It is only the calm before the period of storm, and stress consequent on the fast approaching municipal elections.

The Gravenhurst Herald has issued a splendid and very attractive illustrated edition, showing that town twenty-five years ago, at the time it was visited by the big fire, and also the town as it is at present.

President Cockshutt of the Manufacturers' Association, views with alarm the advance in wages that employees have been getting, says the Brantford Expositor. According to his own figures, the number of employees have increased 13.8 per cent. from the years 1900 to 1905, and in the same period there has been an increase of forty-five per cent. in the wages paid. But the products of the factory have increased nearly fifty per cent. In the same time and prices have risen. All the advantage has not been secured by the workers.

School Board to Buy Property

North of Queen Alexandra School for Play Grounds—Decided Upon Last Evening

Upon motion of Mr. D. W. Dumble, seconded by Mr. W. H. Hill and carried by the Board, the Building Committee of the Board of Education, at last night's meeting was authorized to buy the piece of land from Mr. Hanna, just north of the Queen Alexandra school, the price to be $375.

Mr. Dumble explained that this property is admirably suited for school grounds, and at a very slight cost could be fixed up that the scholars might have a playground. The property is in a valley and on it is a number of beautiful shade trees. There is a creek running through it, but a two-foot six-inch pipe would drain the water off, and there is plenty of earth to cover over the tile. The grounds could be levelled off, and made suitable for games. The girls and younger pupils could play there, while the other school grounds could be utilized by the larger and rougher boys. The expense of fixing up the property would not be very high.

Mr. Robinson said he did not think the school board should take this property. They had spent a lot of money this year, and the citizens would soon be complaining of excessive taxation.

Mr. Hill stated that the Queen Alexandra school was one of the most important in the city. The Normal school will be situated close to this building and these grounds will be convenient for pupils attending the Normal. He thought the Board would be wise to purchase this property, for few schools in the city would have suitable surroundings.

After considerable discussion it was decided to purchase this land.

Launching of "Bessie Butler" Attended With Much Ceremony

Took Place Yesterday Afternoon at the Canal—Fine New Government Boat Will Soon be Ready for Use—Several Speeches by Prominent Men.

The new and handsome steel Government boat, the "Bessie Butler" was launched yesterday afternoon into the canal near Little Lake. The usual ceremony, befitting such an occasion took place, and was a very interesting one. A large number of persons witnessed the event including a number of prominent men.

This up-to-date craft was built by the Polson Iron Works of Toronto and is for touring and inspection purposes on the Trent Canal. It is a very fine boat, 80 feet in length, 17 feet wide, with a depth of ten feet. It is a composite craft, that is, it is constructed on a steel frame. On the exterior it is covered with a thin iron sheeting. It will be fitted with electric light and will be modern in every detail. It is now ready for the engine and it will not be long before the craft is completed. Mr. Alex. Buckham, of Toronto, superintended the construction of the Bessie Butler, and he is to be congratulated on the rapidity, with which the work has been carried on.

Everything was in readiness for the launching yesterday, and the whole proceedings were carried out without the occurrence of a single incident that would in any way mar the affair. Shortly after two o'clock, the blocks supporting the boat were knocked away and the handsome little craft slid down the ways to her native element, gracefully and easily. The formality of breaking a bottle of champagne over its bow was performed by Miss Gertrude McClellan, daughter of Mr. J. H. McClellan, Superintendent of the canal. The "Bessie Butler" was prettily decorated with flags. Miss McClellan was presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers by Mr. J. Main, superintending engineer of the Polson Iron Works.

After the boat had been duly launched, Mr. J. R. Stratton, who acted, as chairman, called the assemblage to order, and a number of addresses were given, relative to the occasion. Mr. Stratton, in his opening remarks referred to the importance of the occasion. The launching of this new Government boat was an evidence of the increasing work on the Trent waters, and likewise of the expansion of trade which during the past few seasons has greatly increased. It is an evidence of the importance of the Trent waters. In a short whole continued the chairman, the water route would be navigable between Montreal and Duluth. Mr. Stratton concluded his remarks by congratulating the Polson Iron Works on the splendid craft they had turned out, and also the officers of the canal on the progress made on the canal.

Mr. R. R. Hall, M.P., was the next speaker to add his congratulations to the Polson Iron Works and to the canal officials. He referred to the action of the Dominion Government in taking full control of all the Trent waters, instead of part of them being looked after by the Ontario Government. He commended the action and thought it was a good one. The people are beginning to realize more the importance of the Trent canal, and the Government is rapidly pushing it to completion. Mr. Hall referred at length to Government statistics, showing what work and what money had been expended in construction of new dams along the water route. $55,000 was being spent on the new dam at Buckhorn.

A new dam was being built at Bobcaygeon, and at Rosedale the building of a new dam and locks was under way. The people would not have to wait much longer before the canal would be completed.

Mr. J. Main of Toronto, engineer of the Polsons Iron Works Co., made a few remarks relative to the building of the boat. A similar one was built for the Dominion Government to be used on the Rideau Canal, and it gave every satisfaction.

Mr. John Finlay, M. P., of Norwood, and Rev. Wm. Major added a few words of congratulation.

Mr. J. H. McClellan, superintendent of the canal, made a few remarks. He said that this new boat was an evidence of the work being done on the canal, and would greatly assist the progress of it. The launching ceremony was then concluded and the people dispersed.

PRINCIPAL OF COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE RESIGNS POSITION

What came as a great surprise to the members of the school board last evening, was the announcement of Mr. C. Fessenden's resignation, as principal of the Collegiate Institute to take effect at the close of the present school year. While still retaining his position as teacher, he asks to be relieved of the duties of principal. Owing to nervousness Mr. Fessenden has been obliged to ask for his resignation as principal.

Mr. Fessenden has held the position of principal of the Peterborough High School for the past seventeen years, and during that time has been most faithful and efficient in his work. Mr. Fessenden's resignation was received with great regret by the Board and was referred to the Committee on Appointments for consideration.

Will the Property Holders Soon Form an Association?

A Local Ratepayer Says They Should do so in Their Own Interests—Suggests That a Large Representation of Property Holders Attend Meeting of Board of Trade on October 8th.

One of the local ratepayers, speaking to the Review today, said that the idea of a Property Holders' Association, met with his approval, as well as with that of numerous others with whom he had discussed the matter. He said it was in the interests of the property holders to organize as soon as possible, elect officers, and arrange matters generally in connection with the carrying out of the movement. He urged that a full representation of tax payers attend the meeting of the Board of Trade on Tuesday, the 8th inst., to which they have been invited by the Board.

"In the southern portion of the city," he remarked, "the private property is assessed altogether too highly and the people there are up in arms. They resent the approaches of the assessors but they are not to blame. The assessors are simply obeying instructions given them by the City Council. The property holders should have a representative attend meetings of the council, say once a month, and he could discuss matters with that body concerning the interests of those he represents."

The gentleman who gave the Review his information, said the property holders should, in their own interests, form an association, at as early a date as possible, appoint their representative, and then they would be in a position to make suggestions to the council or recommend any modifications they deemed advisable. It is not the idea of the property holders to be antagonistic to the council, —they simply want their rights.

They will probably hold an organization meeting in the near future, although no date has been definitely decided upon.

More Bad Boys in Court To-day

Charged With Theft of Lead Pencils From the Peterboro' Typewriter Co.

There were more bad boys in police court this morning. It certainly would be a wise idea if the advice of the Grand Jury to flog the youthful criminals, was carried out. If the magistrate had the authority to order the bad boys to be whipped, there would be less juvenile cases in the police court.

Two young lads about fifteen years of age, by the names of Ross McCall and Tom Walsh, were charged today with stealing a number of lead pencils and postage stamps from the office of the Peterborough Typewriter Company, in the Bank of Commerce building, and another boy, B. Taylor, was charged with receiving these goods, knowing them to be stolen.

Young McCall pleaded guilty to taking the goods, while the other two pleaded not guilty. Taylor afterwards admitted that he knew they were stolen. It was not proven that Walsh took anything, and he and Taylor were allowed to depart.

McCall was remanded until tomorrow morning, in the meantime he was allowed to go home.

His Worship gave the lads some sound advice, and warned them that on again appearing, they would be severely dealt with. This is the first time they have been in court.

TELLS YOU HOW

Directions to Prepare Simple, Yet Remarkable, Home Mixture.

A well-known authority on rheumatism gives the following valuable yet simple and harmless, prescription which anyone can easily prepare at home,—

Mix by shaking well in a bottle, and take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

He states that the ingredients can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost, and, being of vegetable extraction, are harmless to take.

This pleasant mixture, if taken regularly for a few days, is said to overcome almost any case of rheumatism. The pain and swelling, if any, diminishes with each dose, until permanent results are obtained, and without injuring the stomach. While there are so many so-called rheumatism remedies, patent medicines, etc., some of which do give relief, few really give permanent results, and the above will, no doubt, be greatly appreciated by many sufferers here at this time.

CLASS LEADERS MET LAST NIGHT

Movement to Arouse Greater Interest in This Branch of the Church

A meeting of the class leaders of the city was held last evening at the George street church. The attendance was not as large as at the previous one, but an interesting time was spent.

Mr. Joseph Batten presided and opened the meeting.

The matter of getting more people out to class was discussed, and it was decided to ask the pastors to appoint more leaders and have more classes. It was also decided to have an interchange of leaders some Sunday in November. That is, the leaders at Mark street will exchange with those at George street. Charlotte street church leaders will also change with the other two churches.

New Regulations Governing Sale of Dressed Carcasses

The following interesting article has been received from the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa,—

The custom prevailing among farmers throughout Canada of slaughtering animals, particularly swine, upon their own premises and selling the dressed carcasses on the local market, is one which entails more or less loss to the producer. Before the advent of packing establishments, the domestic trade was supplied by the local butchers, who were necessarily compelled to provide for future supplies, and as a result the local markets were created. Conditions have changed, however, the local dealers no longer supplying the domestic trade, which has passed into the hands of the packing houses, which are now the distributing centres of meats. Packers can afford to, and actually do pay higher prices, and sell at lower values than the local butchers, for reasons which are obvious, when one considers that profits are represented by the by-products. The packers are adverse to buying dressed carcasses as they represent smaller profits in by-products. Again, dressed carcases, are imperfectly handled by the farmer, the meat in many cases being bruised and unsightly, this, as well as improper chilling, being deterrent to good prices. Animals, especially hogs, require scientific chilling, otherwise those parts which enter into the process of curing become sour and unfit for market. Packers prefer to buy their meats on the hoof, and for the reasons set forth, are able to pay higher prices for the same.

In view, however, of the large trade carried on in some parts of Canada, more particularly during the fall and winter, in dressed pork, as well as in other dressed meats, attention may be directed to one of the requirements of the regulations made under the new Meat Inspection Act, which is likely to have a considerable effect on the business above referred to. The Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, having assumed the responsibility of inspecting and practically guaranteeing the healthfulness of all meats and meat products sent out by packing houses, must, of necessity, protect itself by making sure that no diseased carcases are permitted to enter these establishments. The most effective way of preventing the entry of such diseased meat, is, of course, the careful ante-mortem inspection, provided for by the regulations, but in view of the large trade carried on in dressed carcases and of the fact that both farmers and packers have been in the habit of handling the meat in this way, the officials in charge of the enforcement of the Act have decided to admit to the establishments under inspection, dressed carcases, under such conditions as will enable them to judge with reasonable certainty, as to whether the animal, prior to slaughter, was free from disease. Provision has, therefore, been made for the admission on inspection of dressed carcases with the head, heart, lungs and liver, held by their natural attachments, such carcases to be inspected before entering the establishment, and if found fit for food, to be so marked, and admitted for packing purposes, while if found to be diseased, to be condemned and tanked.

This being the case it is incumbent upon every farmer bringing dressed hogs or other animals to market to remember that unless the carcases are dressed in accordance with the regulations mentioned above, namely, with the organs left in their proper positions it will not be possible for the representatives of the packing houses to buy such carcases for use in any of the establishments coming under the operation of the Meat and Canned Foods Act.

The presence of the buyers or agents of these establishments on our local markets has always been at least to some extent, a safeguard against possible attempts by local combinations of butchers and others, to depress the price of dressed meats, and it will be well for producers to bear in mind the new conditions and when, for any reason, unable to market their stock on the hoof, as they should undoubtedly do whenever possible, dress their hogs, as well as other animals in such a way as to meet the requirements of the new Act.

Delivery of Accounts by Messenger Now in Vogue

Two Cent Rate on Drop Letters Hits Business Men and Several Fraternal Societies Hard—Reduction is Hoped for.

One phase of the new postal delivery is beginning to be felt, and to a greater extent than was at first thought. The reference is to the two-cent postage on drop letters. The average person who does not mail more than a half dozen drop letters during the year, is not affected to any extent by the new regulation, but with business men, fraternal societies, and other persons or organizations, sending out a large number of drop letters, it is a serious matter. Of course, Postmaster-General Lemieux has made the statement that a bill to reduce the rate of postage on drop letters in cities, having free delivery, from two cents to one cent, will be introduced at the next session of parliament, and even though this is done, it will be several months before the change will take place. However, it cannot come too quickly to suit the business men of Peterborough. Already many business establishments in the city who send out their accounts at stated times, are distributing them by messenger instead of sending them through the post, finding it is cheaper to do so than put a two-cent stamp on each letter.

The new regulation also affects fraternal societies and other organizations, who notify their members by letter as to when meetings are to be held. For instance, the two Masonic lodges in Peterborough send out a total of about 500 communes per month. If these are sent by mail, as has been done in the past, it will cost $5 per month, or $60 per year more to do so, than was formerly the case. There are several other fraternal societies, who will be affected in the same way.

Business men are hoping that the day of one-cent postage on drop letters is not far away. They hardly realize the effect of the new regulation until they start to send out a big batch of accounts. They see the difference then.

Stony Lake Claims its First Victim This Year

Sad Death of Francis Costello, 7 Year Old Son of Mr. Michael Costello of This City—It is Thought He Slipped Overboard While Playing on Scow—Body Recovered.

A distressingly sad drowning accident occurred yesterday afternoon about three o'clock, when little Francis Costello, seven years of age, and the second child of Mr. Michael Costello, 478 Park street, met his death in the waters of Stony Lake.

The deceased child had been in delicate health of late, and his parents sent him to visit his uncle, Mr. P. Young, Young's Point, with whom he had been staying for some time previous to the fatality. Yesterday, in company with his uncle, he sailed on the steamer Stoney Lake, which boat is the property of Mr. Young, as far as Mr. R. L. Davis' cottage, Stony Lake, where Capt. Scollard tied up with the intention of staying for a short time. It appears the boy was playing on a scow near by that was brought there by another steamer, when he slipped off and fell into the water, which is about 6 feet deep at that point. The exact circumstances of the drowning, however, are not known, as nobody saw him fall overboard, and it was not until he was missed by his uncle that any suspicions of the true state of affairs were aroused. A search was immediately instituted and the father of the boy sent for. After searching all last night the body was finally located by Capt. Scollard, and the father of the child at nine o'clock this morning. The remains were taken to Lakefield.

This is the first drowning accident that has occurred at the Kawartha Lakes this year. The parents of the child have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

Interment will take place at St. Peter's cemetery, but the date of the funeral has not yet been decided upon.

Mr. Costello wishes to sincerely thank Mrs. A. L. Davis for her kindness in doing all in her power to render what assistance she could, and also the others who so generously lent their aid in the search for the body of the deceased child.

Mr. R. Durston, deputy superintendent of post offices, who has been here for some time, establishing the free postal delivery service in Peterborough and familiarizing the mail carriers with their duties leaves tonight for his home, 42 Austin avenue, Toronto.

Mr. Durston, when seen by the Review today, said the splendid progress the mail carriers have made, has exceeded his expectations, and states that the Peterborough staff of postal deliverers are intelligent and efficient. He will probably come to the city occasionally to see that everything in connection with the system is proceeding smoothly and to give any necessary advice.

He says that he has had an exceedingly pleasant visit and thinks highly of Peterborough and its people. Those who met Mr. Durston, here are pleased to have made his acquaintance and he will be much missed by his many local friends. His relations with the mail carriers have been most amiable and they regard him as a patient, gentlemanly, and helpful superintendent.

SPRINTING

Longboat, the Indian distance runner, of Toronto, who was billed as one of the big attractions at the New Westminster exhibition, has wired that he will not be able to come west to run against Chandler and Burn at the exhibition next month. The fair officials are at a loss to understand why the Indian should disappoint them at the eleventh hour, as all arrangements for the big match had been completed, the Indian's manager sending word last week that his protege would be brought to the coast.

Although the Indian has decided to abandon the Western trip, the management of the fair has made arrangements for a matched race between W. R. Chandler, of the V.A.C. champion long distance runner of the coast, and Arthur Burn of the Young Men's Club, of Calgary. They will travel ten miles.—Victoria Times

The Arthur Burn referred to in the above is the same runner that outdistanced his competitors—and backers—when he was here three or four years ago.

City Receives its Share of Revenue From Hotels

License Fees for Peterborough for Half Year Ending Ociober 31st. Amount to $5,625—How it is Divided.

The license fees from the hotels and liquor stores in Peterboorugh for the half year, ending October 31, have been paid over to License Inspector Stewart, who has disposed of the money as provided by law. The amount collected was $5,625, and was made up as follows,—

Liquor stores—Four at $250 each for half year—$1,000.

Hotels,—18 at $250 each for half year,—$4,500.

License of Royal Hotel for three months,—$125.

This makes a total of $5,625. After deducting the running expenses of the local license inspector's department, which includes Mr. Stewart's salary, etc., the remainder is divided equally between the city and province.

The city's share has been received by the city treasurer, and totals over $2,500.

Incidentally it might be stated, that the money secured from the transfers of licenses and fines, all goes to the Provincial Secretary's department. It costs one-third of a year's license, or in other words, $166.66 to have a license transferred.

The Woman's Art Association; Work of the Past Year Reviewed

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Woman's Art Association was held in the Y.W.C.A last night. There was a good attendance.

Miss Hatton, the president of the Branch, occupied the chair.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and the annual report was read by the secretary. It was as follows:

The Peterborough Branch of the W. A. A. has held three executive committee meetings, and one regular meeting this year. In November it was decided that a studio should be secured for the use of members and a house centrally located was rented by the Association and sublet, the front rooms being reserved for studio purposes. Furniture was loaned by the members and, with the aid of magazines and photographs, the room was made attractive. An exhibition of Arts and Crafts was held and the studio formally opened and here, during the winter months, tea was served on one afternoon each week.

The studio was also used by active members for wood-carving, and although it was found to be a very pleasant rendezvous, its privileges, were not appreciated to an extent sufficient to warrant our retaining it.

The study of one of Mrs. Jamieson's works, entitled "The Madonna in Art," during the winter months, proved most instructive. Photographs loaned to us through the kindness of Mrs. Digman added greatly to the interest, which increased as the season progressed, and our study was brought to a close with the resolve that it would be resumed, if possible, in the autumn.

In April, Dr. Symonds very kindly consented to lecture before the Association, and delighted his audience by giving a talk on the subject of "The Democracy of Art." He showed the broad field which was open for the cultivation of that "Love of Art," which he said, was instinctive in everyone, among all classes, even among the most uncivilized. He urged the local branch to undertake some practical work in connection with the schools. The address was followed by a pleasant hour of social intercourse.

It was to be regretted that the Foreign Exhibition could not have been brought here from Toronto, but owing to the great expense that would have been incurred—in the neighborhood of $70.00—it was not thought that it would be wise to undertake it.

The removal to Toronto of Miss Bertram, past president of the Peterborough Branch, was a matter of deep regret to all the members. Two warmly interested friends, Mrs R. M. Dennistoun, the energetic convener of our social committee, and Mrs. Burnham have removed to other cities.

We have lost one member by death and six by removal, leaving 64 on our roll at the present time.

AMY K. BENNET.
Secretary of Peterborough Branch, W. A. A.

Miss Ackerman, the treasurer, read her report, which showed a balance on hand of $14.11.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS

After the adoption of these reports, the following officers were elected;

Hon Pres., Mrs. Dignam.
Pres., Miss Bennet.
1st Vice Pres., Mrs. Charles.
2nd vice pres., Mrs J R Stratton.
Secretary, Miss Hatton.
Treasurer, Miss Ackerman.
Ass't Sec.-Treas., Mrs. Currier.
Honorary Members' Representatives—Mrs Hunter, Miss Doble, Mrs Reichart Hall, Mrs Rush, Mrs V Eastwood, Mrs. A. H Stratton.

Following are conveners of committees.

Archivist, Mrs. Palmer.
Lecture, Mrs. Hunter.
Home Industries, Mrs P. Campbell.
Social, Mrs. Richard Hall.
Amateur photography, Miss Halliday.

After some discussion with regard to plans for the winter, the meeting was closed.

The assistant secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Currier, was asked to notify the members of the Association that the fees for 1908 are now due.

Inviting Tenders for New Bridge

Tenders are being called by the county of Peterborough for the steel structure of a bridge over the Ouse river in Asphodel township, near Norwood village. Tenders will be received up to October 11th, addressed to the county clerk. Bids are also invited for the concrete abutments for the said structure, up to October 11th. Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of John P. Belcher, county engineer.

GOSPEL HALL SUNDAY SCHOOL

Entertained to Pumpkin Pie Social by the Superintendent

The junior scholars and teachers of the Gospel Hall Sunday School were entertained at a "pumpkin pie" social, by the superintendent, Mr. G. W. Mulligan, at his home, George street last night. A most enjoyable time was spent by the thirty or thirty-five who were present, and they were loud in their praises of their superintendent's hospitality. Pumpkin pie was a feature of the event and during the evening, a couple of short and bright addresses were given.

Gospel Hall Sunday school is progressing steadily. The membership is rapidly growing and the officers and teachers are enthusiastic, regarding their work.

An enjoyable tea was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs Arthur Stevenson, Aylmer street, to say farewell to Mrs. J. F. Their departure from the city is much regretted, and many availed themselves of Mrs. Stevenson's kind invitation to gather at her home to say good-bye to Mrs. and Miss Dennistoun.

Mrs Stevenson cordially received in the drawing room. She looked exceedingly well in a handsome gown of cream silk, trimmed with lace. In the tea room the tables were beautifully decorated with crimson salvia.

THE

BEEHIVE

The Ladies' Big Ready-to-Wear Store

THE STORE THAT NEVER DISAPPOINTS

Larger Business

MONTHS of planning and working has given us desired results. We had pictured an ideal in merchantizing that was not attainable under conditions existing before our extensive alterations. We know what we must have, to cater successfully, in the building of a modern and enlarged departmental store such as we were confident was wanted in Peterborough.

While this business has grown by leaps and bounds, the growth of the next few years will be away ahead of anything heretofore attained. While all Summer long we have been enlarging, we have had our buying forces at work, and have gotten together the largest assortment of goods ever gathered under one roof in Peterborough, and at prices that will need no emphasis. You will find, in spite of the marked upward tendency of all markets, that prices have been right—even below what you would think possible.

Our Introductory Sale, under the new conditions, starts SATURDAY MORNING at 8:10. To-morrow's paper will give you a fair idea of the remarkable price attractions the new conditions make possible. Every item in the large ad. will bear scrutiny. Every line just as advertised will be here—and here in abundance. Sale force has been increased nearly one-third. Quick and efficient service. Goods delivered by our delivery system. Money cheerfully refunded for any reason of dissatisfaction.

Yours for larger business,

A. W. CRESSMAN,

385-387-389 George Street

Mr. Simpson will dispose of all his farm stock and implements by public auction on lot 8, con. 2, Smith, on Thursday next, October 10th.

They Have no Use For Mr. Stratton

Otonabee Liberals Will Not Support His Candidature

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—It seems that Mr. Stratton is flirting with the Liberals of East Peterborough for nomination as our candidate at the next election for the Commons. We do not want him. We have a number of excellent men of our own, who will make far better and stronger standard bearers than Mr. Stratton. We consider that it would be no credit to the constituency to have him represent it.

If he is the candidate or special favorite of the Laurier Government we will vote against our party and cast our ballots for a Conservative representative.

The coldness with which Mr. Stratton was received at the last annual meeting of our Association in Norwood should prove a pointer sufficiently sharp to show that the rank and file of our party have little or no use for him. Moreover, if he foists himself upon us, we will forward a petition to Ottawa stating explicitly our position in the matter and leaving no uncertain note as to where we stand. Such a petition will be signed by at least 200 stalwarts in our township. If Mr Stratton is a good Liberal, let him stay in his own riding. We do not want him, and, if he crosses over the electoral boundary line, we will be buried so deep on election day that it will take his handful of supporters several weeks to dig him out.

Yours, etc.,
OTONABEE LIBERALS.

P.S.—If Mr. Stratton desires to learn of our identity, he can easily secure the necessary information by applying at the Review office.

Some Pointers on the Cost of Coal

Toronto Citizen Gives Certain Interesting Facts

That coal bought by wholesale dealers at winter rates can be laid down in the cellars of Toronto citizens, at $5.91 per ton, and less, is the statement of "One Who Knows" in a communication to the Toronto World, which reads;

"The coal consumers of this city are becoming somewhat turbulent because of another threatened rise in the already exorbitant price of coal.

"Let us look into this matter for a moment. The present cost of hard coal at the International Bridge is $5.50 per ton of 2,240 pounds, or $4.91 per ton of 2,000 pounds, our weight, and as sold to the consumers here; duty nothing; freight from the International Bridge to Toronto, 50c. per ton; switching to dealers' yards nothing; average cartage from cars to customers, say 40c—a man at $10 a week is supposed to average six tons daily delivery. Total apparent cost to dealer, in cellar of a citizen of Toronto, $5.91 per ton.

"Now, buying by the gross ton, and selling by the net ton, in every 8 1-3 tons sold, the dealer has a ton for himself. This is certainly worth considering, but this bit of information is never cheerfully furnished the public—in fact, the public are not supposed to take time to consider it. The public are supposed to pay for coal and burn it and, like a good public, not be suspicious or ask too many questions.

"I am speaking of coal bought in October, November, December, January, February and March, but the dealers, large ones, to whom I am at present referring, buy very little during these months; they buy earlier in the season, say April, $4.46 or $5.06 on the dealers' sidings in Toronto, May $4.55, June $4.64, July $4.73, or August $4.82, at international bridge, or 60 cents extra in the yards, Toronto. The bulk of requirements would naturally be ordered in April at $5.06, all charges paid on the dealers' sidings in Toronto.

"Then, again, advantage is taken of vessel shipments from Oswego, where the price is always from 15 cents to 25 cents per ton lower than at the bridge, and at about a half lower freight to Toronto than by rail, which would mean an additional profit of from 25 cents to 50 cents per ton to the dealers who have decks, and, by the way, all the larger ones have.

"No use blaming the little dealers they simply have to do as they are told or quit the business. Human nature in most centres of population is such that the biggest sweater, the public's most suave pocket blisterer, in any line of business,

"As mild a mannered man,
As ever scuttled a ship or cut a throat, leads the others in exasperating the people and is sometimes, nay, usually, the most liberally patronized.

"We were assured in a recent issue of your paper, which, by the way, is usually foremost in enquiring into matters of public moment, from the president of one of the leading coal company reads of the United States, that the wholesale prices and freights were the same as have existed for several years past, and that no blame could be attached to mine owners or railroads for any local rise in the price of coal, the wholesale cost of which is—let me repeat—the same as last season, when coal was selling here at $6 per ton.

"The only apparent difference is that the local combine may not have any smaller fish in view, not of themselves, which they may particularly desire to put out of business.

"The periodical cry of shortage of cars and shortage of stocks doesn't amount to much after all.

"The present unreasonable price of coal demands an investigation. Someone should move and move at once.
